Hemorrhoids Are Varicose Veins

By Dr. George C. Thosteson

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Please tell me what causes bleeding hemorrhoids at least every other day. What is the best way to treat them, the right suppositories or oint m e n t? Should I eat certain kind foods, or no raw foods, or could I take some internal medicine to cure them? — R. L. T.

After all these years, too many people still do not understand what hemorrhoids or "piles" really are and why you can't expect ointments or medicines to "cure" them.

Hemorrhoids are varicose veins. The special problem arises because of their location, at the anus, where they are subject to repeated irritation and pressure.

Varicose veins — swollen, distended veins — do not return to normal in that location any more than they do in the legs. Once swollen, they remain swollen. The one effective cure is surgical removal.

That does not, however, mean that all hemorrhoids have to be removed. One must consider how many such veins there are, how large they are, how much discomfort they are causing — itching, pain, actual bleeding.

Ointments or analgesics can reduce minor discomfort, but they aren't going to change the fact that the veins are varicose. Avoidance of irritation obviously will help. It makes sense to avoid foods containing bran, seeds, or indigestible fibres.

Straining in the bathroom clearly is going to put pressure on the swollen veins, so avoidance of constipation is perhaps the most important measure of all in preventing irritation and preventing the varicose veins from becoming worse.

But in today's case, with bleeding every other day or often, it is clear to me that the problem has gone beyond the stage at which ointments or careful diet can control the situation. My advice is to consult a proctologist or your surgeon immediately and see whether it isn't time to remove those hemorrhoids. In conjunction with this, pay closer attention to the doctor's suggestions about after-care dilation to prevent formation of adhesions and the need to avoid constipation and a repetition of the same trouble.

It is a mistake, in my judgment, for a patient with hemorrhoids to try to decide, without medical advice, as to when or if hemorrhoids should be removed. When or if removal becomes necessary, then have it done rather than just continuing the misery.

The problem is not a simple one. For readers wishing more detail, my booklet, The Real Cure for Hemorrhoids, is available. For a copy send 35 cents in coin and a large self-addressed envelope to Dr. Thosteson, care of The Chicago Sun-Times Syndicate, PO Box 158, Bellmore, Ill.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I read about a woman who made her pregnant daughter stand up for 12 hours to abort the pregnancy. Is this possible? Also, when is the "safe" period in the rhythm method of birth control? — Mrs. J. M.

No, this is not possible. If, in some single instance, an abortion did occur, it was due to other causes.

The rhythm method is a chancy sort of thing, not a sure one. The "safe period" is usually five days before and five days after menstrual flow. There are no exceptions.

• • •

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Is it possible in a fracture of the sacrum to sustain damage to the spine which might result in cancer? — Mrs. M. S.

I can't see any possible connection between that, or a fracture of any bone, and cancer, and think you are worrying yourself needlessly.

$1,000,000 Movie

New Canadian Company Makes Film for Expo '70

MONTREAL (CP)—A new Canadian company is making a big-sized film for the Osaka world's fair in Japan and hopes that its success will add fresh dimensions to the motion picture industry.

The company, Multiscreen Corp. Ltd., was formed in September, 1967, by a small group of enterprising men who had gained valuable experience which culminated with productions for Expo 67.

The Montreal fair had scored a major break-through in the film-making industry and was at least partly responsible for the development by Multiscreen Corp. of a new camera for large screen showings.

Engaged by the 36-company Fuji Industrial group of Japan, the film company has started making a joint Japanese-Canadian production in Montreal for Osaka's Expo 70, using the revolutionary movie concept called multivision.

Other locations for the 13-minute movie are Calgary, Expo, Africa, London, Berlin, Tel Aviv, Bangkok and Tokyo.

Robert Kerr, 39, managing director of the company whose headquarters is in Galt, Ont., said the film being made at a cost of nearly $1,000,000 will provide a "showcase for multivision" at the Osaka fair.

It is the first such film ever produced and, Mr. Kerr hopes, the techniques used in the production will have far-reaching effects on the commercial motion picture industry.

"Capable of projecting multi-images on a screen more than seven storeys high, the movie system will create new dimensions of audience experience."

The movie will be shown on a screen 90 feet wide and 80 feet high in a giant pavilion being built by the Fuji group. The structure, to exceed a cost of $6,000,000, will consist of a series of six-filled beams or tubes 16 feet in diameter.

The tunnel-like pavilion, resembling a huge multi-colored caterpillar, will be surrounded by 20 storeys in height, with a diameter of 340 feet.

The Japanese Multiscreen Corp. was awarded the Japanese contract, because of its developments in the field, and is capable of handling the large film.

William C. Shaw, the company's director of development, now is busily engaged in perfecting a projector that will be able to screen the extraordinary movie.

Because of the size of the film, each frame is nearly three inches by three inches or twice the size of the 35-millimetre film normally shown in movie theatres, the projection will be done in a horizontal position rather than the traditional vertical position.

The technique to be used will not involve sprocket holes on the border of the film because its size would lead to film damage.

Multiscreen Corp. was formed by Graeme Ferguson, 39, who is president, Roman Kroitor, 42, vice-president, and by Mr. Kerr.

Both Mr. Ferguson and Mr. Kerr are from Galt while Mr. Kroitor is a native of Yorkton, Sask.

Mr. Kroitor was the executive producer of the widely-acclaimed film shown in the Labyrinth at Expo 67 while Mr. Ferguson filmed the Polar Life movie shown at Man the Explorer.

The reason for the formation of the company was simple.

The systems used for creating the vivid experiences at Expo 67 were too complicated for widespread commercial use. They required multiple projectors and complex synchronization systems both for filming and projecting. And the films could not be shown on an interchangeable basis.

The techniques being employed by Multiscreen Corp. will require the normal two-projector system to show the film, and the equipment will be able to project any combination of images desired—from innumerable separate ones to one gigantic scene.

Traditional Milkers

Holstein Could Be Used for Beef

Holstein cattle are traditionally a milk producing breed and particularly in parts of the Quinte district — but experiments conducted at the Canada Department of Agriculture's Agassiz Research Station in British Columbia indicate that the breed can produce lean and tender beef.

When department researcher Dr. R. J. Forrest began his experiments about eight years ago, he merely planned to show farmers that they could make bigger profits by raising Holsteins as beef animals rather than producing unwanted bull calves at veal prices.

He fully expected that Holsteins would produce second rate beef but felt even this would be more profitable than calves sold for veal.

"We did get second-rate carcasses in that they were longer and leaner than top-grading beef animals" Dr. Forrest said, "but we certainly did not get second-rate meat. In fact, the Holsteins produced leaner and more tender cuts, the type that consumers emphasize most."

It's unlikely that Holsteins will replace our present beef breeds, but the experiments are showing that dairy farmers don't have to literally throw away their surplus bull calves.

Meat from beef-producing Holsteins lacks the flavor of steaks from beef-producing breeds and the retail trade prefers more fat on choice cuts than the Holstein produce at the one-year market stage.

Farmers in the Fraser Valley were quick to recognize the profit-making potential of Holsteins raised for beef following Dr. Forrest's experiments. Since 1960 the price of Holstein calves has tripled, an increase worth $750,000 a year to dairy farmers in the valley.

"Holstein beef is here to stay," says Dr. Forrest, "and the idea is spreading swiftly across North America."

During his 1960 experiments, Dr. Forrest learned that Holsteins produce the ideal carcass when they are slaughtered at 1150 pounds, a weight they reach in 16 months on a medium plane of nutrition. Holsteins slaughtered at 750 pounds were too heavy to quality as veal and too light to be baby beef. Those slaughtered at 1150 pounds produced carcasses to large to meet packaging company demands for small, choice cuts.

There is one draw-back to the 1150-pound carcass weight. Holsteins are too young at this weight to produce enough fat to grade quality for the top grades. The meat, however, is tender and lean.

In 1966, Dr. Forrest began another experiment with Holsteins, this time raising both bulls and steers. Producers don't usually market animals as bulls because they can be down-graded one or more grades.

"Bulls are checked as they are being marketed," says Dr. Forrest. "If they look like a steer, they can be marketed normally. If they look like bulls — that is, if they are producing a hump at the crest of their neck — they will be closely inspected after they are slaughtered. Carcasses that pass this inspection are down-graded one grade, then used as normal."

The Agassiz experiments showed several advantages for bulls over steers when reared on high energy rations.

They reached market weight in 12 months, one to two months faster than steers. They are less feed, producing on a pound of beef for two to three cents less cost than the steers.

This gives bulls several advantages from a farmer's point of view. He saves time, feed, space and labor, savings that could offset the price drop he could experience if his bulls are down-graded at the packing plant.

Dr. Forrest says the bulls will probably be most profitable if they are marketed at about 800 pounds weight. Steers that were fed hormones produced well-finished carcasses and graded better than the bulls.

The efficiency of these animals dropped sharply when they reached the 900 pound stage, so Dr. Forrest says farmers will probably gain their biggest profit by not using either bulls or hormone - fed steers at this weight.

Many dairy plants place a premium on lean, tender meat, an 800-1,000 pound bull will best fit these requirements. Under present grading standards, however, 800-1,000 pound bulls will not have enough fat to qualify for the top grades.

Dr. Forrest has started a third experiment, cross-breeding Holsteins to Charolais, an imported beef breed which is gaining popularity in beef-breeding circles.

"We should get several advantages from this cross," he says. "The calves will have more vigor and they should produce enough fat to finish. There does not appear to be any advantage in the rate of gain or in feed efficiency."

The cross-breeding experiment will probably be of more interest to beef producers than it will be to dairy farmers. Dr. Forrest says beef heifers with high milk production potential as replacements for older cows. They get these replacement heifers by breeding dairy cows to Holstein bulls. They would not want to lower milk production by

TORONTO STOCKS

Three-man Crew Is Selected For Moon Landing in Summer

WASHINGTON (CP) — A civilian who survived two near disasters as an astronaut and two USAF colonels who have "walked" in space will fly the Apollo 11 mission, the first scheduled attempt by the United States to land men on the moon. Tentative launch date is July 15.

The civilian, Neil Armstrong, will command the spacecraft, the National Aeronautics and Space Administration said Thursday, in announcing the selection of the crew.

Armstrong and Col. Edwin Aldrin Jr., of the U.S. Air Force are to descend to the moon in a lunar module from the main spacecraft. The main spacecraft will remain in lunar orbit, piloted by Lt.-Col. Michael Collins.

Armstrong, who has survived two near disasters since becoming an astronaut in 1962, is a former test pilot for the X-15 rocket plane and was a navy combat flyer during the Korean War.

In choosing the three 38-year-old space veterans for the mission, NASA passed up the Apollo 8 astronauts who made the first lunar orbital flights last month.

But two of these, navy Capt. James Lovell and air force Lt.-Col. William Anders, have been named to the Apollo 11 backup crew. The other, air force Col. Frank Borman, is being assigned to ground work at his own request. He will become deputy director of crew flight operations.

Rookie astronaut Fred Haise is the third man on the backup crew.

The Apollo 11 launch date depends upon the results of the Apollo 9 and 10 missions.

Apollo 9, now set for launch Feb. 28, will be an earth orbit of the lunar module of the type in which Armstrong and Aldrin are to land on the moon.

It will be the first manned test flight of the capsule, and if all goes perfectly, NASA officials say there will be no need for Apollo 10. This test, now scheduled for May 17, would be a moon orbit of the lunar module. If it is skipped, the Apollo 11 flight may be moved up to mid-June.

Wrong People Crave Power

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

It is a melancholy fact of history that revolutions take on the color of the regimes they overthrow. The French and Russian revolutions are nearly perfect examples of this: Oppression was not eliminated, it merely passed into different hands.

The new movements of revolt in American society seem not to understand that a culture can be changed only in an evolutionary way: If we get a complete bouleversment, then there is merely a transfer of power, not a sharing of power.

The real problem of power is that of authoritarian personalities, who tend to rise in any system, left, right or center. The men who get into office, form committees, run things, engage in vanguard activities, are more similar than they are different, whatever their differing ideologies. With few exceptions, they are aggressive, sadistic and power-oriented.

But society can no longer tolerate such people, of whatever political complexion, for the realities of the nuclear age (in which aggression may be equated with race suicide) decentralizing, self - actualizing mand personalities that are and value-oriented.

Ever since Plato enunciated the proposition that "the only men fit to be given power are those who do not crave it," the human race has been struggling with the paradox of leadership and responsibility. The average man does not want to accept responsibility for decisions in the public area; and those who do want the responsibility usually want it for reasons that are inimicable to the long-range welfare of society.

The problem of the authoritarian personality cuts across the whole spectrum of political beliefs. Leaders out of power are always for "justice," for "humaneness," for "liberty," and all such virtuous abstractions; once in power, however, they increasingly find excuses and rationalizations for injustice, inhumanity and repression. Marx's noble idea was flawed by Lenin's pragmatism, and shattered by Stalin's brutal wickedness, and it could not have been otherwise.

Politics is not merely a matter of morals; as we are grudgingly beginning to recognize; it is also a matter of psychology. Movements are begun by those who like to dominate others, and even a just cause is eventually undone by the ends — agressive personalities who take command of it.

"The scrupulous and the just," said Conrad, "the noble, humane and devoted natures; the unselfish and the intelligent may help in a movement — but it passes away from them. They are victims, not leaders, in the end."

Jean Dixon's Horoscope

Saturday, January 11

Your birthday today: Many surprises are in store for you this coming year. Fresh beginnings are thrust upon you time after time. Your interest is aroused by changes in the behavior of people around you and by changing social conditions. Romance is favored for those who proceed with emotional maturity. Today's natives are usually keen at psychology a nd curious about what other people are thinking.

ARIES (Mar. 21 — Apr. 19): Relative quiet prevails if you will let nature take its course. Just enough difference of opinion sparks full discussion of all issues. Get extra rest or invest time in your favorite hobby tonight.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 — May 20): Routines are favored, major changes are not. Attend your health and welfare. Line up your accounts this evening: retire early.

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): Today is a continuation of yesterday and holds about the same mood. Go with the more pleasant facets as long as they can be stretched. Associates may have less energy: do not pester them.

CANCER (June 21 — July 22): The more you escape friends and relatives, especially older people, the better off you are today. Defer important decisions. Nothing you do or spend money on serves to impress anybody; save your time and money for a better opportunity.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22): The fine art of holding your own counsel under provocation is priceless. Judge carefully what you hear: reserve action until you have more of the story. Love interest lessens as the day wears on.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 — Sept. 22): Today's low pressure is best for clearing away odds-and-ends but not for significant overhauling of one's circumstances. In the calm of evening you may have some insight about your life that is strange to you. Have the courage to look directly into it.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 — Oct. 22): Your friends get into complex and confusing situations. If you attempt to help out, you'll waste the whole day. Don't neglect your own affairs!

SCORPIO (Oct. 23—Nov. 21): Self-sufficiency is the key. Nobody seems to be much help for to have any of the things you need. Take the trouble to prepare for tomorrow.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): Encouragement is a rare commodity, yet when it does come, it may have a gimmick behind it. Get a medical checkup started, for reassurance. Seek light entertainment tonight.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 — Jan. 19): Stay with yesterday's approach. You can get lots of help from friends, neighbors — just be selective as to whom you bring in.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb. 18): Study, research, work requiring concentration are favored. Yesterday's direction can be followed quite a way yet. New starts are ill-advised.

PISCES (Feb. 19 — Mar. 20): You can easily create the wrong impression now. Older stronger people engage you with talk of places and things you have not seen or done. You may have to back up a friend with no chance to confer.

When MPs Resume Work Tuesday, It Will Be Under New Rules

OTTAWA (CP)—A whole new drill for handling Commons business will be in effect when MPs go back to work Tuesday.

For Canadians outside the capital, the changes may be more important than apparent.

But even the casual Parliament-watcher will notice some new techniques and new terminology.

One of the most obvious changes may be a more regular pattern to Parliament's year.

The plan is to start each annual session in September or October and continue to the end of June.

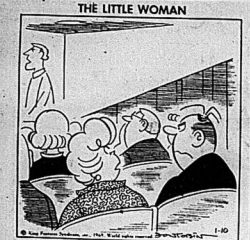
For some purposes the session will be broken up into three periods, already dubbed semesters, ending Dec. 19, March 28 and June 30.

Past sessions sometimes have gone on for more than a year, with little recognizable pattern.

The recent session of 220 sitting days in 1966-67 started Jan. 18 and continued to May 8 of the following year.

Some reports have estimated that the streamlined new procedures might save as many as 40 or 50 days in a session, a prediction privately rejected by at least one parliamentary expert.

From the inside, the main change of the new rules probably will be in the shifting of much more parliamentary business to the standing committees. At times the House may even adjourn to allow the committees to catch up.



Supply motions in the past have provided the opposition with its chance for general criticism of the government and for moving non-confidence motions.

This now will be replaced by a system of "opposition days," or "allotted days" borrowed from the British Commons.

A total of 25 of these days will be spotted through the Commons year, stretching opposition will be able to select the topic of debate. If they wish, the opposition parties may choose current supply business or reports from the committees on departmental estimates.

Besides these 25 days, another three will be provided for any final estimates presented in the spring semester. And any days not used among the eight allotted for the throne speech debate or the six set aside for the budget will also be added.

Sunday School Lesson

'Show and Tell' Needed

By CLARENCE W. CRANFORD

Most religious leaders are agreed that it is harder to get through to people with a religious message today than it was 10 years ago. And yet the need for a deep religious faith was never greater. Underneath the restlessness and feverish activity of our time, there is a desire for something real. Under many a hippy garb there is a deep hunger for a purpose, a goal, what religion would call a way of life that really satisfies. Some try to find it in the bizarre. Many try to find it in kicking over the traces. Many try to find it in social action.

The Bible's talk about "unclean spirits" (Mark 1:23) seems strange in a scientific and psychological age. But what else are our movies telling us today if it is not that our lives are shot through with unclean spirits? Many modern movies are simply holding up a mirror so a sick world can see itself. So it can see its sick preoccupation with material success: its sick perversions; its loathsome uncleanness.

The Uniform Sunday School lesson for January 12: "Ministry on the Sabbath." Mark 1:21-45.

The spirit of protest is in the air. Many protest against the "establishment" or the "system" without fully knowing what these are, or what they want to put in their place. They disdain the institutional church, but feel the need of an inner cleansing. (Mark 1:40)

More pious preaching won't meet the need. People are tired of hearing old, worn-out cliches, whether they come from preachers or politicians. People, especially young people, are saying, "Don't tell us, show us." "Involvement is the word today. People are saying to the churches, "Show us you mean business by the way you get involved in meeting human need, and in aiding in the struggle for justice.

This doesn't mean that all preaching is in vain. People still need an authoritative word about God: a word that is born of experience. But words must be backed up by life.

This is exactly what Jesus did. When He spoke about God He spoke with a note of authority (Mark 1: 22) He spoke of God as the Father of men who is concerned with their total needs. (Matthew 6:33)

But Jesus backed up what He said by what He did. People could believe what He said because He healed their bodies, eased their fevers, cleansed their lives. In Him, they met only heard words of compassion. They felt the touch of compassion.

He could not have done it without an abiding faith in God, and a life steeped in prayer. In spite of overwhelming need, He found time to be alone with God (Mark 1:35)

Many people living in crowded cities find it difficult, if not impossible, to get off to a lonely place where they can be alone with their thoughts and with God. Radios and television sets blare at them. Auto horns disturb their serenity. Newspaper headlines manage to distract attention from God.

Many have found the spiritual renewal they need in small groups that meet for dialogue and prayer. One way churches today can meet the deep spiritual hunger of distracted people is to provide such groups where people can seek understanding and inner cleansing.

As important as His healing ministry was, Jesus refused to be sidetracked from His major mission. (Mark 1:38) He refused to exchange the birthright of His larger mission for the pottage of local popularity. He had come to bring all men new hope. He must not get bogged down in a limited ministry.

The biggest question Christians have to answer today is what is the supreme mission of the church? Is it to "save souls', or to become involved in social causes, or both?

The church needs to involve itself in a gigantic "show and tell." Some churches only tell. Others seem to get little beyond a gospel of involvement. Both are necessary. The church that does nothing to minister to the needy, and to further the causes of peace and racial justice is falling short of a full-rounded ministry.

But it must do more. It must demonstrate its concern, but it must also say why it has that concern. Its concern is a reflection of the compassion of God for all men. The church must be concerned that people have enough to eat. It is also concerned that men shall lose the fever of bitterness and hate. Only the touch of God can heal these deep, inner causes of failure. The church must lead the way to Him who is the Healer of both physical and spiritual diseases.

Blood Is Scarce

TORONTO (CP) — Blood supplies are critically short in the Atlantic provinces and urgently needed in Quebec and Ontario, Dr. G. W. Miller, national medical director of the blood transfusion service of the Red Cross, said Thursday.

Paris Visit Off

Bertrand Plans Longer Rest

QUEBEC (CP) — Premier Jean-Jacques Bertrand Thursday announced a further rest to restore his health and ratified off a series of decisions that touched international relations and his status within the Union Nationale party.

In his second day of work since recuperating from circulatory troubles discovered early in December, Mr. Bertrand told a news conference:

—He is "going south" until Jan. 27 for more rest and Finance Minister Paul Dozois will become acting premier in the interim.

—He is unable to fulfil a scheduled state visit to President de Gaulle of France later this month, but a Quebec delegation will go to Paris.

—Quebec province will attend the international conference of French-speaking education ministers at Kinshasa in The Congo, beginning Jan. 13, since the province was invited directly.

Mr. Bertrand, acting premier since the death last September of Daniel Johnson, dispelled doubts about his leadership intentions—he would remain as long as his health permits.

The party's national council will decide here March 14-16 whether an election should be held to pick a permanent party leader.

Mr. Bertrand said the only criterion on whether he will seek the job permanently is his health, but his only physical handicap is "minor circulatory troubles."

Mr. Bertrand said there is no political significance to Mr. Dozois selection as acting premier, replacing Education Minister Jean-Guy Cardinal who had taken over after Mr. Bertrand entered hospital Dec. 9.

As vice-chairman of the cabinet, Mr. Cardinal is the second-in-command in the Union Nationale government.

Mr. Cardinal will make the Paris trip, but the delegation chief will be Industry and Commerce Minister Jean-Paul Beaudry.

Mr. Cardinal, who once said he is supporting Mr. Bertrand "at the moment," is considered a likely leadership contender.

At Kinshasa in The Congo, the Quebec delegation, duly identified, will join with other representatives of the Canadian federation at the scene" for the education conference. Mr. Bertrand said.

The federal government, which last year suspended diplomatic relations with the African republic of Gabon for directly inviting Quebec to a similar conference, received an invitation from the government of The Congo in Kinshasa, formerly Leopoldville.

Mr. Bertrand had informed Ottawa by telegram of Quebec's intention to participate in the conference and he had even discussed the matter by telephone Wednesday with Prime Minister Trudeau in London.

He did not reveal Mr. Trudeau's reaction to the formula.

Quebec's six-member delegation will be led by Jean-Marie Morin, minister without portfolio attached to the education department.

Montreal Man Again Survives

MONTREAL (CP) — Charles Gallinger, 37, who survived a murder attempt less than two months ago, escaped unscathed in a fierce gun battle with several assailants Thursday night, police reported.

The incident occurred when Gallinger and a girl were walking along a street in the Montreal district of Notre-Dame-de-Grace.

Police said that neither the woman nor the assailants, who escaped, were injured.

Gallinger was taken to hospital in critical condition Nov. 15 when unknown gunmen shot him three times, then stuffed him into the trunk of his car in the parking lot of Montreal International Airport.

Despite his injuries, he managed to open the trunk with pliers and was found by a passing motorist.

Pearson Considered Dropping Program

OTTAWA (CP) — Former defence minister Paul Hellyer at one point in the armed forces integration debate threatened to resign from cabinet unless the policy was continued, Judy LaMarsh discloses in her memoirs of life in the Pearson cabinet.

She says former prime minister Lester B. Pearson had made up his mind to "drop or revamp" the integration program in the face of loud naval opposition.

But Mr. Hellyer convinced him there could be no compromise or that he would "unquestionably resign and not quietly."

The disclosure in Miss LaMarsh's book, called Judy LaMarsh: Memoirs of a Bird in a Gilded Cage," was the first public indication that Mr. Pearson considered dropping the integration program.

Miss LaMarsh also writes of tension within the cabinet over regular leaks to the press, and over the Channel 3 controversy in 1966.

She offers outspoken criticism of Mr. Pearson and some of her other colleagues but concludes that the government "often undertook to do great things and for the most part succeeded, even if it took many pratfalls while doing so."

A 44-year-old Niagara Falls lawyer, Miss LaMarsh resigned from the cabinet last April after serving as the only woman on it throughout the Pearson years.

She recounts that at one point during cabinet discussion of persistent leaks, then justice minister Pierre Trudeau tried to convince Mr. Pearson that "the Mounties should be sicked on all of us" to discover who was responsible.

But she says the prime minister shrank from calling in the RCMP, and adds later that she felt Mr. Trudeau's suggestion was only half-meant.

Miss LaMarsh also tells of personal clashes in cabinet with Mr. Trudeau.

She once suggested indirectly that he was an "arrogant bastard," and Mr. Trudeau in turn "made an equally insulting reference to my integrity."

On the Channel 3 controversy, Miss LaMarsh charges that there was "political interference from some quarter" in a decision of the Board of Broadcast Governors.

She says she made changes in cabinet against "the ministers I felt involved in this underhanded action," but she did not have proof and the ministers denied it heatedly.

The case involved an application to move the transmitter of Barrie television station CKVR-TV nearer to Toronto. Miss LaMarsh tells of one meeting in Transport Minister Pickersgill's office where there was a discussion on whether the move would benefit the Liberal party.

But she does not say which if any ministers thought it would be a benefit.

She does say she is certain at least one board member was persuaded to change his vote, however. The application was approved on a split decision but later shelved by cabinet.

Miss LaMarsh aims a number of shafts at Mr. Pearson, calling him "gutless" at one point although she adds at another that he did not lack courage.

She criticizes him for not backing up his ministers, but salutes his work in bringing the provinces "into the consultative process of governing the whole nation."

Mr. Pearson was ahead of his time in this, she says, but instead of getting credit was characterized as a "weakling" for giving in to the provinces, especially Quebec.

Clash Over Rhodesia Could Wreck Unity

LONDON (CP) — Britain's head-on clash with most of its 27 Commonwealth partners over Rhodesia moved today into a backstage bargaining phase.

At the same time African and Asian leaders privately voiced fears that Prime Minister Wilson intends to come to terms with Rhodesian leaders. In doing so, he would be defying overwhelming Commonwealth denunciations of his projected compromise.

"If that deal were to be reached," said the president of one African state, "my government would not want to remain a member of a Commonwealth that prides itself on its multi-racialism."

The African leader, who declined to be identified, told reporters the British government already has been informally advised of his position. He added that other African countries also would be likely to turn away from the Commonwealth.

Canadian Prime Minister Trudeau suggested Friday that Britain withdrew its latest proposals for settling the issue on the grounds the white-minority government of Prime Minister Ian Smith might eventually accept them.

Wilson told the Commonwealth conference Friday he means to keep his offer to Smith of a new constitution ending Rhodesia's three-year-old rebellion. He said his plan—submitted aboard the warship Fearless last October—would open the way for ultimate rule by 4,000,000 blacks now being governed by 220,000 whites.

The Fearless plan provided for disputes with racial overtones to be referred to the British Privy Council; a legislative veto for black Africans; formation of a commission on racial discrimination; speeding up of education for black Rhodesians and taking blacks into a broad-based interim government while other provisions were being implemented. The proposals were rejected later by Smith on the grounds they would infringe on Rhodesia's sovereignty.

Wilson has reaffirmed a qualified pledge to withhold legal independence from Rhodesia until the Africans are ready to assume power. The qualification was that he would ask his partners to release him from that pledge if Smith liberalized his race policies.

Chances of agreement seem dim.

For instance, Wilson argued that if sanctions go on too long the main victims would be the Africans in Rhodesia, not the whites.

President Julius Nyerere of Tanzania countered:

"The whole purpose of sanctions was to impose an unacceptable degree of economic hardship upon the people of Rhodesia so that they would force their government to call off its rebellion."

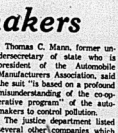
Prime Minister Trudeau

Air Pollution Issue



Wilson, Trudea u Argue Over British Policy

LONDON (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau is spending today in the English countryside after three sharp verbal differences with Prime Minister Wilson of Britain in a week.

He suggested in the Commonwealth conference Friday that Britain withdraw its latest proposals for settling the Rhodesian issue on grounds the white-supremacy government of Premier Ian Smith might eventually accept them.

Wilson rejected the suggestion.

Last Sunday, after a weekend meeting with Wilson, the Canadian leader said the British proposals are a departure from Britain's original pledge to grant Rhodesia legal independence only after African majority rule was introduced.

"Disgusting!"

Rhodesia is run for the 220,000 whites while 4,000,000 blacks have little or no say in its government.

Thursday, Trudeau asked Wilson how the conference could accept the British plan when it was already on record in favor of the original promise to the Rhodesian Africans.

Prime Minister Wilson submitted to Smith when they met aboard HMS Fearless off Gibraltar last October proposals that would transfer power to the Smith government on the basis of a new constitution containing some safeguards for political advancement of the majority blacks, but no guarantee of the principle of one man, one vote.

The "Fearless plan" included terms later rejected by Rhodesia: That disputes with racial overtones in Rhodesia be referred to the British Privy Council; a legislative veto for black Africans; formation of a commission on racial discrimination; speeding up education of black Rhodesians and taking blacks into a broad-based interim government while other provisions were being implemented.

There was complete stalemate on the tense Rhodesian issue Friday though conference sources said there was none of the bitterness which threatened to split the Commonwealth apart at the two 1966 meetings.

The conference completed its discussion of Rhodesia, though it will have to come back to the subject in drafting the commu-

Government Sues Automakers

WASHINGTON (AP) — The United States justice department sued the Big Four automakers Friday, charging they conspired to stifle development of devices to control air pollution by automobiles.

The civil suit was filed in Los Angeles against General Motors Corp., Ford Motor Co., Chrysler Corp., American Motors Corp. and the Automobile Manufacturers Association, a trade organization.

It charged that since 1953 they had engaged in unlawful agreements to restrain trade and eliminate competition.

The companies and the association issued statements denying they had restrained trade. Instead, they said, they have co-operated to speed development of anti-pollution devices.

The justice department charged they agreed to:

—Eliminate competition among themselves in the development and installation of pollution-control equipment.

—Eliminate competition in buying patents and patent rights for such equipment.

—Agree on a date for installing pollution control equipment and install it uniformly.

—Delay the installation of certain equipment which was workable.

—Restrict publicity about research and development of pollution-control devices.

The suit said the defendants could have installed positive crankcase ventilation devices on cars sold outside California in 1962, but agreed not to do it until 1963.

In early 1962 and 1963, it said the four companies agreed to delay the use of an improved positive crankcase ventilation device on cars sold in California.

The suit charged that in early 1964 the companies agreed to tell California pollution authorities that a device to control exhaust pollution could not be installed until 1967, when in fact it could have been used on 1966 models.

Thomas C. Mann, former undersecretary of state who is president of the Automobile Manufacturers Association, said the suit "is based on a profound misunderstanding of the co-operative programs of the automakers to control pollution."

The justice department listed several companies which it said were co-conspirators, but not defendants.

These were the Checker Motor Corp. of Kalamazoo, Mich.; Diamond T Motor Car of Cleveland; International Harvester Co. of Chicago; Studebaker Corp. of South Bend, Ind.; Kaiser Jeep Corp. of Oakland, Calif., and Mack Trucks Inc. of New York.

Education Conference In Congo

Two Delegations Still Undecided on Who They Represent

OTTAWA (CP) — Federal and Quebec delegates have left for a French-language educational conference in The Congo with no firm agreement on whether they will act as one delegation or two.

As federal delegates were leaving Friday, Prime Minister Trudeau's office released contents of messages he had sent to Quebec's Premier Jean-Jacques Bertrand suggesting ways in which Quebec could operate within the Canadian delegation.

But Quebec apparently has neither accepted nor rejected the offers. An external affairs spokesman said most points under discussion are "still up in the air," but "we hope it will work out."

Mr. Trudeau's messages, the latest dated Friday, offered to have a Quebec minister head the delegation.

In the absence of a reply, the prime minister advised Mr. Bertrand Friday that New Brunswick Premier Louis Robichaud will lead it.

But the spokesman said there is still a possibility that Quebec's Education Minister, Jean-Marie Morin, will accept co-chairmanship of the delegation.

Ottawa has been negotiating intensively with Quebec in an attempt to avoid the kind of problem that arose last spring when Gabon invited Quebec to an education conference, bypassing Ottawa. Canadian diplomatic relations with Gabon were suspended in response to the action.

Mr. Trudeau, attending the Commonwealth leaders' conference in London, has kept closely in touch with the issue and has spoken at least once by telephone with Mr. Bertrand.

The messages made public showed that Mr. Trudeau on Wednesday offered a series of "standards" for Quebec participation, including a stipulation that there would be only one vote for the Canadian delegation. They also set out how the Quebec flag would be flown.

On Friday the prime minister said the proposals were an "important inspiration" and he regretted that there had been no reply, other than the Quebec decision to accept an invitation to the conference.

He added:

"You will understand that it is essential for the government of Canada to know that there is only one Canadian delegation to intergovernmental conferences . . .

"The government of Canada could not accept invitations to such conferences being sent to the Canadian provinces without suffering a serious blow to her international personality and unity."

Mr. Trudeau said he still hoped Quebec would take part in the Canadian delegation to the conference, opening in Kinshasha Monday.

Mr. Bertrand said Thursday that since no formula had been worked out for Quebec participation in such conferences, "the Quebec delegation duly identified will join with other representatives of the Canadian federation at the scene."

The formula proposed by Mr. Trudeau provided that delegates from individual provinces — Ontario and New Brunswick also sent representatives — would speak on matters within their jurisdiction.

Opinions of the Canadian delegation would be given by the chairman or co-chairmen.

The automobile of the Quebec delegation would bear a plate with double mention of Canada and Quebec, and a "miniature" Quebec flag.

A Quebec flag could also be flown over the hotel where the Quebec minister stays, but at the conference site it would have to be displayed along with the Canadian flag, with the latter getting precedence.

Malaysian Pilots At CFB

Taking Course on Caribou Planes

TRENTON — Four Malaysian pilots have seven weeks to "cram into their minds everything they can learn about the Caribou aircraft before nine of the planes are transported to their country.

The deal was finalized yesterday after Major-General Chester Hull, commanding officer of Air Transport Command, completed negotiations with the Malaysian government concerning the transporting of the planes.

Nine of the aircraft, representing an individual cost of $750,000, are being purchased from the DeHavilland Aircraft Company in Toronto and shipment is expected to begin by this summer.

Currently four Malaysian pilots are wading through an intensive seven week course at CFB Trenton, to learn as much as they can about the plane.

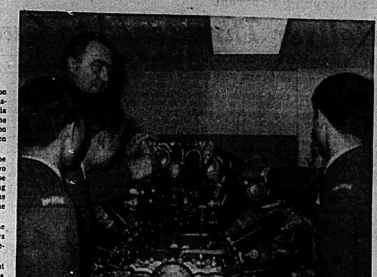
The pilots average about 750 hours flying time and most are in their early twenties.

Members of 424 Squadron here at the base will be transporting the planes to Malaysia and just what function the Malaysian pilots will play on the flights has not yet been confirmed.

Three servicemen from the base, as yet unidentified two officers and one NCO, will be making the trip and staying in the country for six months to train other pilots in the operation of the Caribou.

Azis Randi, one of the pilots taking the course, says he has flown the Caribou before

"We have them at home but we have come here to take a proper course on the plane," he said.



For most of the Malaysians fiber visit to Trenton marked their first encounter with snow.

"It's quite a shock when you're used to ninety degree temperature like we are," said Mr. Randi.

All are enjoying the new experience and proudly announced that while here they are out to learn Canadian winter sports.

Certain details of the flights still have to be worked out but instructors on the course are pleased with the Malaysians.

"They have good flying aptitude and are able to learn quickly," said a spokesman.

Obituaries and Funerals

Interment took place in Sacred Heart of Mary Cemetery, Madoc.

Will Send Petition

Secondary School Students Take Legal Means to Present Views

The "cold war" between Quinte area students and the Department of Education over the extended length of the school year appears to have become more peaceful and legal.

As in many Ontario secondary schools, Belleville students have resorted to legal process to try and convince the department to repeal the new school legislation that lengthens the school year.

According to school student leaders, fears of walk-outs and ever-publicized demonstrations should be unfounded.

However, things did get off to a bad start in the opinion of those in favor of a petition to the department when approximately 75 Centennial Secondary school students walked over to Quinte Secondary in a disorganized demonstration.

Upon talking with Quinte student representatives, Centennial students soon dispersed and headed back to the classroom.

Petitions were drawn up at Quinte Secondary School and the other three schools, Moira, BCI and Centennial, have followed suit.

However, a new petition has been drafted and this one has been blessed by the legal help of an unnamed attorney. It came into circulation at all four schools on Wednesday.

According to Henry Kalka, one of the Quinte leaders, it is hoped that it will be ready by Monday to find its way to Tuesday's mail along with a letter to the Minister of Education, William Davis, asking for a reply to the students' request.

According to Henry, general feeling among the students is "pretty well the same." It is hoped that there will be 2,500 names on the petition out of about 4,000 students in the four schools.

Henry says that if the reply to student requests that the year be shortened in length it has been in the past is turned down the students will not let it die. There will probably be a joint meeting with representatives of the four schools to decide further action.

Lynne Elliott, BCI's petition representative, admits that the petition is pressed for time. Another complication is the fact that signatures have to be witnessed for further legality.

She said that at BCI two students have refused to sign for "very good reasons".

She also said that "we realize he's not going to repeal the act just for Belleville students."

About further action, after the possible failure of the petition, she said if students walked out it would be synchronized throughout the entire province.

"I know millions of kids that wouldn't walk out," she said "They don't think that walking out is going to help."

She, too, is in favor of a meeting with other schools should the petition fall.

Miss Elliott also expressed concern about some people's reaction to the student petition. She explained that many people felt that students against the lengthened year were student activists and student power advocates.

She said that most students just disagreed with the lengthened year in particular. "Disagreeing," she said, with the law, "doesn't mean we're student activists."

At Moira, according to Dennis Deveau, the petition is not doing to well with only 25 signatures. "Most don't want to sign it," he said.

Recommendations at Moira have been dropped in a minimum of 60 per cent because of the lengthened year whereas they would have remained at 95 per cent for the shorter term.

Many Moira students feel that the lower percentage will give them a better chance at examination recommendations.

Students are disagreeing with the longer year because it makes summertime working more difficult and does not give high school students a chance to make enough money for further education.

Clash Over Rhodesia

nique, to be issued on the final day, Wednesday.

Trudeau will enter Monday th e discussion on world economic affairs. He plans to fly to Rome Thursday to see the Pope.

Today he has lunch at the country home of Roy Jenkins, chancellor of the exchequer, and dinner at the country retreat of Michael Stewart, foreign secretary.

He attended a dinner Friday night at Cheouers, Wilson's country estate 40 miles west of London, and spent the night at a country inn, location undisclosed.

Scotland yard said the location was not made public for security reasons.

Trudeau is scheduled to return to London about midnight Saturday night, attend mass Sunday and Sunday afternoon hold an hour-long teach-in with Canadian students at the Westminster Theatre near Buckingham Palace.

Besides an hour-long private audience with the Pope Thursday, Trudeau the same day will see Italian President Giuseppe Saragat, Premier Mariano Rumor and Foreign Minister Pietro Nenni.

Trudeau gave a lunch Friday for President Julius Nyerere of Tanzania. They discussed Rhodesia and Nigeria.

Trudeau returned to the conference Friday afternoon and sparked off a flurry of press sources said was a polite freefor-all by asking questions on the Rhodesian issue.

Only three countries—Australia, New Zealand and Malawi—supported Britain on its latest Rhodesia proposals.

Twenty-five countries either opposed the British proposals or were undecided about them.

It was learned Friday that a Canadian domestic issue has been occupying much of Trudeau's time: representation by Ontario and Quebec at an international education conference of French-language countries opening Monday in Kinshasa, The Congo.

Trudeau worked so late on this problem Tuesday night that Heligoe contributed to a touch of flu the next day. He had to miss the Wednesday afternoon session of the conference and he slept for three hours.

CALGARY (CP) — Three weeks after his arrival from Czechoslovakia, Paul Siska picked up where he left off in cosmic ray research. The English-speaking physicist started work as a research assistant at the University of Calgary and will join its permanent staff next spring.

Business As Usual

Even though temperatures hung around zero, Mr. Sherman Babbitt set up his apple stand as usual. He has been selling produce from the market square for the last 26 years, and said that he doesn't like to miss a Saturday, no matter what the weather is like.

Carriers Protest Move

Belleville postal workers yesterday received full details of a Letter Carriers' Union protest against the five-day delivery week scheduled to start Feb. 1.

The union says that under the new scheme carriers would not have to return to a post office after their morning mail pickup and could eat their lunch on their routes.

In a letter to Postmaster-General Eric Kierans the union protests the move as the "most retrograde step imaginable."

Letter carriers must eat their lunch outdoor in winter, or hear the cost of eating in a restaurant.

Implementation of the five-day week which rules out Saturday delivery will eliminate one-fifth of the present carrier work force, the union claims.

The post office seeks to operate at a profit "in a manner detrimental to the employees and the public . . ."

Preparing for Big Flight

These four Malaysian pilots take instruction from Charles Robertson at CFB Trenton. They are currently taking a seven-week course to prepare them for flying the Caribou aircraft. Nine of these planes have been purchased by the Malaysian government at a cost of $750,000 each and are due for delivery in July.

Arson Charged After Fire

A man has been charged with arson in the fire that left Mr. and Mrs. Willimer Grieves homeless four days before Christmas.

Oscar Parcells, 39, of Havelock, was charged in Peterborough Friday in connection with the burning of the 1½-room former hotel in Blairton.

The building, built as a hotel nearly 100 years ago when Blairton, five miles northwest of Marmora, was a booming mining town, was owned by a brother, Robert Parcells, of Campbellford.

The fire had been under investigation by provincial police and the Ontario Fire Marshal's Office.

Meantime, Willimer Grieves, a disabled veteran, today said he had finally secured a new home for his family in Belleville. They will move into a house on Church Street immediately.

The Grieves' — whose children range in age from 18 months to 8 years — lost all their possessions in the blaze.

Since that time they have been staying with relatives in Belleville, Mr. and Mrs. John Lake, of Byron Street.

Lodge Installs New Officers

New officers for 1969 were installed at a recent meeting of The Belleville Lodge, AF and AM No. 123.

Harold C. Bailey was installed as worshipful master with W. Franklyn Ray stepping down to immediate past master.

Also installed were W. J. Needham Throop as senior warden, Wilbur C. Purcell as junior warden, William Slack as treasurer and Raymond Gunsolus as secretary.

Also installed were Clarence Fuzzen as assistant secretary, Robert Cruickshank senior deacon, Walter Beevor as junior deacon and Howard Burley as senior steward.

William Stewart became junior steward, Niels Mortensen chaplain, George Montford director of ceremonies, George Rutledge historian, Harold McNish organist and C. A. Stanley Smith is the new tyler.

Too Much Noise

Want Restricted Use of Snowmobiles

The mounting popularity of snowmobiling as a hobby has begun to generate public reaction in some parts of Hastings county.

Tweed residents are complaining about noise made by snowmobiles driven on village streets late at night.

In a move to counter the possibility of enactment of local municipal by-laws restricting snowmobile use, John Thompson, president of the Tweed Snowmobile Club, has asked his members to refrain from using the vehicles in Tweed streets after 10 p.m.

Members of Tweed's club are anxious to co-operate with the public and avoid the imposition of restrictions, Mr. Thompson said in a statement to the press.

Police officers with the Trenton, Belleville and Ontario Provincial Police detachments here report no complaints concerning snowmobile operation.

Operation of the vehicles is governed by the recently passed Motorized Snow Vehicle Act. According to an OPP spokesman, licensed snowmobiles may be operated on any highway numbered over 500. Their use is forbidden on major highways such as 401 or No. 2.

Driving a snowmobile on sidewalks is forbidden at any time. Their use is legal, however, on city streets.

"It is up to local municipalities to pass by-laws regulating snow vehicles within their boundaries," said Trenton police chief Robert Rutherford. "This is likely to happen only if the vehicles become a hazard."

City Employment News

There was some improvement in the local employment picture during the past month as regards to additional workers being required for job vacancies. Labor demand for women seeking work was 20 per cent less than for males.

However, it is observed that the past few weeks of winter weather has curtailed the construction activity which in turn has affected firms engaged in supplying materials to the construction industry.

In view of the back-log of known and prospective local construction projects, it is anticipated that the present slow period will only be of short duration.

This construction lull would be a good time for anyone planning house renovations, and similar projects, to get this work done now. The Belleville and District Winter Employment Campaign Committee recommend that Community residents support the 1968-69 campaign. The slogan is "Keep People Working" by doing it now before the Spring and Summer rush.

The following employment opportunities are available:

In the female division locally there is an opening for a mature and capable woman to work as a hotel housekeeper at a high supervisory level. An experienced bookkeeper is in demand, whose duties would also include some typing and sales work. A bank has a position for a qualified stenographer who would also be required to do some clerical work. A large retail outlet is seeking sales clerks who would be willing to work 25 to 30 hours per week on various shifts. Salswomen are required by a publishing firm for selling work throughout Canada. There is a position available for someone experienced in the collection field. Other local vacancies call for nursemaids and house-keepers.

In the male division locally openings are available for trainees in the retail and financial field. An industrial plant is seeking a Grade XII Commercial graduate to commence work as a trainee in their cost accounting department. Other industrial plants have vacancies for experienced floor moulders, a knitting machine fixer possessing at least 5 years experience; production managers for shift work; qualified technologists and accountants, in addition to an experienced cupola charger.

Reeve Against Turning Churches Into Residences, Chicken Coops

Reeve George Cunningham of Ameliasburg township thinks that churches closed as the result of amalgamation should be torn down rather than be turned into residences or chicken coops.

He made the comment at a meeting of township council during discussion on a proposal to change the status of the Salem Church for residential occupancy.

The women from Toronto had voiced interest in buying the church as a summer residence.

"I feel that a line should be drawn with respect to the disposal of churches," Reeve Cunningham said. "It makes me sick every time I drive by a church that was sold, and turned into a chicken coop."

"When I see a manure chute sticking out a church window I am more convinced it should have been torn down at the end of its useful purpose as a place of worship."

Under the township zoning regulations one acre of land is required for a residence in areas designated agricultural. The land where the church is located measures 60 by 60 feet.

Reasons For Decline

Pollution Book Well Received

By ROY PEACOCK
Staff Reporter

A city man who possibly more than any other person has helped to spread the Belleville name has been commended by provincial officials for a 40 - page article on the disastrous effects which pollution has had on the area's economy and in the decimation of fish and wildlife.

Albert E. Duesberry, 123 Albert St., possessor of the only known complete collection of North American pond and river carved duck models has received commendation from the Ontario department of lands and forests; the Ontario Water Resources Commission and The Toronto Anglers and Hunters Association for his article "Authentic Facts re the Bay of Quinte, Lake Ontario and Trent River."

Background for the article dealing primarily with the decline of fish and wildfowl in the Quinte area was gained by Mr. Duesberry through 69 years study.

For many years Mr. Duesberry was a commercial fishermen in the Bay of Quinte and in Lake Ontario until diminishing catches forced him to hang up his nets.

He recalls when he first took up commercial fishing at the age of 18, full nets of fish were the rule rather than the exception.

But eventually the amount of fish caught hardly paid for net replacement let alone provide a living for himself and his helpers.

According to Mr. Duesberry pollution was the reason for the diminishing catches of fish.

"The waters of the Bay of Quinte and Lake Ontario are no longer productive," he says. "There is no longer the natural food in the water to allow fish to grow to maturity and to reproduce."

And until the pollution is stopped and the natural food is restored, he feels the fisheries department is wasting its time replocking waters with fingerlings.

"When I first started my study there were no German carp in our waters, all our waters were productive and fish and wildfowl were abundant," writes Mr. Duesberry in the introduction to his article.

"One would never believe the transformation and the destruction which has taken place.

Chemicals running into the water are destroying marine vegetable life, and Mr. Duesberry says he sometimes wonders if pollution of waterways has destroyed fish and wildfowl life to the point of no return.

"Stopping the pollution is the first step, but I cannot imagine how everything that has been destroyed is going to be put back in our waters," he says.

As well as bountiful catches of fish, Mr. Duesberry recalls the day when ducks literally filled the Quinte district marshes.

"I used to hunt ducks commercially and we thought nothing of shooting 100 or more in a morning."

The ducks were sold to butcher stores at about 60 cents a pair.

But now many of the marshes have dried up and the wild rice on which the ducks fed has for the most part disappeared—killed by carp fish which feed on vegetable matter.

Mr. Duesberry is widely known throughout sporting circles on this continent for his realistic collection of carved wild duck models. His collection consists of 16 different species, male and female, all painstakingly carved to scale and hand painted in natural colors.

On the average Mr. Duesberry estimated that at least 100 or more hours of work went into the carving and painting of each duck model.

"It's the only complete collection of its kind in North America," he says.

His collection has been given wide prominence in wild life magazines, and some months ago was featured in a Canadian weekend magazine.

He has shown them on several occasions at the Toronto Sportsman's Show and at shows in Belleville.

Hon. Rene Brunelle, Ontario minister of lands and forests, has written Mr. Duesberry complimenting him on his article on the effects of pollution in Quinte district waters.

"..... My staff and I were impressed by the many interesting observations which you have made," wrote Mr. Brunelle.

"We are especially pleased to note that many of your observations which were made with keenness and accuracy, led to the conclusion shared by many scientists that the environmental changes taking place are the over - riding cause for the decrease in much of the fishery."

Continuing, Mr. Brunelle said that many commercial fishermen report times of interest on their monthly returns.

"But I know of none to date who has collected them in one writing such as yours and brought many of them to the kind of conclusion you have."

Mr. Brunelle said Mr. Duesberry's 40-page outline has been circulated among his own staff and that it would be passed on to interested fisheries people in other departments.

A copy has been placed in the lands and forests department fish and wildlife library where it will be most available.

New Warden Discusses Project

PICTON (Staff) — Regional government, a new county home and the Prince Edward Airport plan are all on the discussion agenda as far as the new warden of Prince Edward County is concerned.

Although Warden George Foster of Sophiasburg township feels that regional government should be confined to Prince Edward County, at least for the moment, he does feel "one of the biggest things during the coming year will be regional government."

"I would like to see a committee set up to study regional government immediately," he indicated this week "consisting of elected persons as well as private individuals."

"We must prepare for regional government," he stated.

And with all the money that has been spent on education during the past years Warden Foster said he thought that perhaps more money could be spent on things such as a new county home and the fairgrounds.

The fairgrounds especially deserve more attention said the warden since it is now being used as a recreation centre as well as the location for the fair.

Finishing up Warden Foster said that if the airport plan for Prince Edward, which has

Celebrates 90th Year

Mrs. Albert Houser, of Madoc, celebrated her 90th birthday on Sunday, Jan. 5, 1969, at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Fred Sexsmith with whom she makes her home.

Mrs. Sexsmith served a chicken dinner. Guests present included three sisters, Mrs. Ida Palmateer, Campbellford; Mrs. Lorne Ruttan, Lodgeroom Corners, Tweed; Mrs. Ethel Scranton, Campbellford; and Mrs. Harper Tufts a sister-in-law who resides with Mrs. Clarke. A nephew, Arthur Palmateer also attended, from Tweed. Other relatives called during the afternoon.

Mrs. Houser was born in Dungerford Township and after she married Allan Houser they lived on several farms in the area. When they lived at the Bernard Hunt farm west of Tweed, they were well-known as they supplied butter to most of the homes in Tweed.

Kiwanians Induct President

TRENTON — The Trenton Elzeana club Thursday night held their inaugural meeting for the New Year which saw Neil Robertson inducted as president of the group which claims upwards of 50 members.

Mr. Robertson said he looked forward to 1969 as president of what he believed to be the most effective service club in Trenton.

Frank Miron moves down from his former post of president for the past year and takes up the slot of past president. Thanks and congratulations were expressed to Mr. Miron for a job well done in 1968.

Bringing organizational experience to the new slate of officers will be Jack Wilson who is manager of the Trenton Chamber of Commerce.

He takes the post of vice-president of the club.

The post of secretary will be occupied by Bill Aikens for the upcoming 12 months with Frank Hyland serving as treasurer.

Ivor directors who are beginning a two year term include Ben Krock, Austin Scott, Vern Nutley and Bernie Blamire.

THE BEST OF CENTENNIAL IN PICTURES
CANADA 67
Text by Blair Fraser

As fireworks on Parliament Hill died away on the New Year's Eve that ended Centenial Year, Canadians were looking back to the greatest national birthday party ever held anywhere. The pages of this splendid volume recapture the excitement generated by these celebrations and the response of Canadians to the centennial happenings which have helped make the Centennial of Confederation the success it deserved to be.

- 192 pages
- 196 full-color illustrations
- 107 black-and-white illustrations
- Big 10½" x 13" size

The Best of Centennial in pictures is dedicated to all the people of Canada, as a reminder of what we have done together and as an expression of faith in what we can do in years to come. Bilingual.

The New County System

In the administration of education today the trend is toward centralization. That is the thinking behind the new county-based system. And all, theoretically, in the name of efficiency and the provision of the best facilities and teaching for the greatest number of students.

To this end the county system has been established and now faces the formidable task of effecting a smooth transition. Director of the new system is Eric Runacres, who comes to Hastings from North York where he was superintendent of general administration of the board of education.

Mr. Runacre's qualifications for the job are impressive and his interim administrative organization, already outlined in this newspaper, is indicative of his desire to waste no time in establishing a smooth-running administrative machinery.

Yet so much is involved, from curriculum to audio-visual education, that with the best will in the world there are bound to be problems ahead. We have come a long way from the days of the little red schoolhouse, but is the modern generation any better educated?

* * *

In the new administrative set-up we are told that board functions will be divided into four groups, with a superintendent in charge of each group and responsible in turn to the director. But where do the students fit into all this? After all they remain a significant human element in our increasingly computerized, insensitive, society. We are told for instance, that curriculum, including courses of study, utilization of time, staff, students and space, promotions and transfer of staff, and special adult and audio-visual education will come under the jurisdiction of Group A and its superintendent. He in turn will organize area representatives in Bancroft, Madoc, Trenton, Belleville and Stirling.

It may not be an important point — after all, education today is many things, involving a host of disciplines — yet it is disconcerting to find the students, not to mention staff, buried away there in the middle of "Group A." At least they are in Group A, so presumably they do enjoy some measure of priority under the new system.

* * *

The irony of it all is that with centralization now a fait accompli, Mr. Runacres hopes to preserve some degree of local autonomy. Saying he is strongly in favor of it, the director adds that in administering the county system "it is essential to reach a balance between centralization and decentralization."

Without saying how it is to be accomplished (after all, much of the local autonomy has gone), Mr. Runacres observes: "There should be one educational authority in each local area to whom trustees, staff and parents could come with problems. This person in turn would be a vital communication link between local people, the board and headquarters."

Once again, what about the students? Of course, they will have school counsellors. Yet the way things are nowadays, what with student power and all that, they too should have access to the educational authority.

* * *

There is another aspect of the improved facilities the central system is supposed to achieve — psychological services. Students, like many adults, are said to be in greater need of such aid than ever. Often home life, or lack of it, leaves much to be desired. There may be problems of alcoholism at home, or of rejection, even cruelty. Yet more than the service of psychologists ,what is needed in the school system, as in society at large, is less of the automation mentality, less regimentation and more warmth, humor and affection. In short, more humanity.

The school system could also do with more emphasis on physical education If the students could even get out and do some jogging now and then, that would be better than the little or nothing that characterizes physical education for the great majority of young people today. If there were such a balance between the academic and recreational aspects there would be little need for psycho-analysis in the schools.

Boredom Likely to Be Least of Trudeau's Problems

By RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA — Excitement, says Prime Minister Trudeau, very, very doesn't, is where you find it.

To bear him — and take it all seriously — he hasn't been finding it in the cabinet, his caucus, or the Commons.

He may be finding a little of it in London right now at the Commonwealth Conference.

And it should be only a foretaste of what is ahead when the Commons reconvenes next week.

The freshman prime minister may not know it but he is almost certain to discover when he returns from London that the honeymoon he enjoyed in the first half of his first session is over.

The political love-in opened in September, with almost everyone in the Commons, including Opposition Leader Stanfield, handling the young prime minister tenderly.

Even that towering thunderhead of a man, Dief the Chief, rumbled, but gently, with a certain uncharacteristic restraint.

It was all very disarming and even more unrealistic. Nobody in the cabinet or the party caucus was naughty, nor anyone in the Commons nasty to the new prime minister.

So, carefree, off he jetted to the Caribbean for his year-end holiday skin-diving, and then to London for his new year job of Commonwealth conferring.

It was in a warm mood of political euphoria that he left snow-bound, ice-locked Ottawa.

Things could scarcely be better, he allowed at his year-end press conference, or going more smoothly.

So unruffled were the calm waters of government that not only was life for the prime minister in the serene Capital uncexciting, but even "boring."

That was the word he used.

Maybe, he suggested, this was so because "good government is always unexciting" in its "quiet process of anticipating and preventing crises."

Then just his faintest shadow of suspicion crossed his face.

Things might seem this dreamy, he groaned, because in the recent politically explosive Pearson - Diefenbaker decade, they had been so nightmarish.

But while it lasted, political peace was wonderful.

"We have a very good cabinet a very good caucus, a very good staff, a very good civil service," he beamed expansively, so who was surprised that "things should be responding so positively well!"

Not the well-content prime minister was plain to see.

For, he purred, "cabinet is working very well, the ministers very hard," and as might be expected, more decisions were being spun off the machine of government in less time.

Then, with the sign of resignation of somebody awakening from a beautiful dream to face not-so-lovely reality, the prime minister wondered out loud how long it could last quite this good.

Next week he comes back to a Parliament with 80 legislative days remaining in its working schedule and 40 bills, many of them wildly controversial, to ram through a contentious Commons.

The big decisions are still ahead.

For starters there is national defence and the questions to answer about NATO and NORAD.

And interlocked with defence there is diplomacy and the making up of the government's mind as between the two Chinas. Red and regular, and the problem of how to keep the very vocal oneworlders quiet over providing more foreign aid out of less money.

Then here on the home front. Remized the contentedly confident prime minister there were the problems of rising unemployment, worsening regional disparity between the have and the have-not provinces, and the increasing friction of bilingualism and language rights.

But nothing, he seemed to say that could not be handled.

In the months to come, for wry laughs, he might like to turn back to the transcript of his thoughts about the "boredom and nexcitement of quiet government."

"My apologies, chaps — I've never known her to act like that before."

A Gatecrasher's View of the Commonwealth Conference

Peter Newman in
The Ottawa Journal

The demonstrators became increasingly agitated as the Rolls Royce carrying the delegates began to pull up and to escape the crush, the frenzy and the drizzle, I edged up the steps of Marlborough House to watch the prime ministers arrive. The doorway of the historic building was ringed by more policemen and guardsmen in ceremonial uniform all bent on checking credentials.

By some wild chance or wilder inefficiency I was herded through in a delegation, stood about uncertainly for a moment in the main hall and was approached by a man in a morning coat who asked me with intense courtesy "whether he might take my coat and then direct me to the delegates' lounge sir?"

Since the press is being treated here with bare tolerance and is strictly forbidden any close contact with delegates, the enormity of the guide's mistake very nearly unnerved me but I followed his decorous figure across the marble hall and found myself standing beside Harold Wilson.

Wilson stared at me sourly for five seconds and then turned back, irritably issuing orders to Michael Stewart his foreign secretary, while glowering about the room at the assembled statesmen, apparently disenchanted with his role as villain of this conference at a time he is plagued with so many domestic political problems.

Everywhere prime ministers and their advisors were whispering to each other, sounding like a group of professors forming up an academic process just before a university prize-giving. Close up they all seemed to be discussing British failures or tumisions. The British ought to have taken a firm stand on Rhodesia — the British had no business supplying arms to Nigeria — the sanctions against Rhodesia have been disappointingly ineffective, etc.

Most of the prime ministers looked at me in bewilderment, as though they suspected I might be part of a recent coup d'etat in some distant corner of the Commonwealth but they left me alone, secure in the knowledge that with all that pass-checking outside I couldn't be there unless as an official delegate.

Then Pierre Trudeau spotted me, registered incredulity, and demanded, "how did you get in here?"

We shrugged at each other eloquently, exchanged three or four inane pleasantries ("what will you do here this morning" "Oh. I don't know." (shrug). "what would you do?") that were one-part Marx brothers, one-part Peter Ustinov and then Trudeau went off, shaking his head, to seek the company of his peers.

The prime minister of Ceylon came up grandly and expressed the hope that Rhodesia would not be at the top of the agenda and I said I hoped it wouldn't and the president of Zambia gave us both a dirty look.

Mitchell Sharp suddenly appeared smiling his India rubber smile, and instantly went into a complete External Affairs "this is a recorded announcement" statement about how the Commonwealth had to maintain its function as a consultative body because for it to make any actual decision would place Ukraina on the organization that it might not endure. (The gist of all this seemed to be that if the Commonwealth had any point it would no longer exist.) Wellsatisfied, Sharp disappeared into the conference room.

By now the lounge was nearly empty as the delegates took their places inside the conference chamber and the security guards began to eye me oddly. I burst into laughter which plainly was not allowed and soon found myself quickly being escorted back out into the rain.

The Press Looks at Trudeau

Windsor Star

Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau knows all about Hastings, Magna Carta, Crecy, Agincourt, Plassey and on through to Ypres and Mons.

Mr. Trudeau appreciates what these and other milestones of history have meant to the fabric of the old British Empire and present British Commonwealth.

But, where so many fall back on the past and are content to blandish in the reflected glory of years long gone by, the Canadian Prime Minister is looking toward today and tomorrow. The past is past and cannot be recalled, no matter how glorious it may have been.

Mr. Trudeau has been and is a student of history; but, more than that he is anxious to be an architect of history. That may come as something of a shock to his colleagues at the conference of Prime Ministers in London. It is a shock they all need.

Ottawa Journal

Is Trudeau just a show stealer, as one London paper says? We in Canada know well he has a natural informality that is refreshing and that has won votes. Doubtless he will not object if that natural informality wins him attention on the world scene, doubtless he won't mind stealing a show once in a while. Come to think of it, the old boy who used to turn up to these meetings in tam top hats with silver-handled canes were probably trying to steal a show too. If it is proper to steal a show in a tailcoat is it improper to steal it in a white raincoat?

Living up to the image of a gay young blade at 47, or 48 or 49 isn't easy, and now the poor tired man is up and down with the flu.

Ah well, underneath his debonair manner is a man of substance and depth — and one of these days he'll have a heart-to-heart talk with the troubadour, we hope.

More Farmers Giving Up the Struggle

Ottawa Journal

The Ontario committee on farm income in its report explodes two outdated assumptions.

1. Land and property ownership, the report says, is no guarantee of freedom. It may represent "trapped resources" of people, money and land that should be put to a more productive use.

2. There's no virtue in people staying on land and suffering hardship. The report said that 42,000 viable farms, about half the number actually being operated, could have produced all the agricultural products sold in Ontario in 1966, the last census year.

The inefficient farm, doomed to failure because of poor soil, bad luck, or, very often, the owner's inability to spend enough money on improvements, is a familiar sight in the Ottawa Valley.

H. D. Callan, general manager of the Eastern Ontario Development Council, said yesterday that surveys by his organization had forced it to this conviction.

"We feel that taking a good percentage of the people off the land is the only answer."

Farmers agree that the situation in hundreds of farms is becoming increasingly intolerable.

Indians Have Grievances

Kingston Whig-Standard

The Canadian Indian has been robbed and victimized by the federal Government. The Indian has precious little left of that which he once enjoyed in this bountiful land. Is it too much to ask that those treaties which do guarantee some rights be honored until the Indian himself decides if or when he should abolish reservations?

The fact remains that Indians of this province have once more been quietly relieved by the white man of ancient rights granted by the Government. In January of this year, Judge Eric T. Richard, now retired, criticized "the ceaseless encroachment of the white man on the rights and privileges of the Canadian Indian population. He accused the Government of not fulfilling its obligations, creating a situation in which the law does not recognize the treaties made prior to Confederation. His criticism certainly applies in the case of the St. Regis Indians.

Vancouver's Lonely Hearts

Allan Fotheringham in the Vancouver Sun

Pierre Elliott is not the only one who is sorry that Leap Year got away without him "making the kind of deal I would have liked." The bigger the cities get, with their supposedly carefree sexual swappings, the more it is revealed that the opposite is true: thousands of lonely single people simply do not know how to get to meet each other. We are getting back to the day of the church social to introduce people. Another new singles club, The Single Key, will open next week with plans for a session every Friday night at a different major hotel. The backer, young hotel man Ron Diddarevich, has the first one going Jan. 10 at the Bayshore . . . and that there's The Swingles Roster, being pushed here by Paul Barry, Gerry Thompson and Ray Harding. Idea is to send in your picture and particulars. The picture phone book is then distributed and you pick out someone you'd like to meet. It costs $10 to join.

Two hundred acres, even 400, will not give a good living in many areas. Young people have moved to industry and the trek continues. Older people have on, their arguments for the joys of farm life fading fast.

What is striking about the Ontario report, and in the policies now being implemented through the federal Agricultural Rehabilitation and Development Act, is the abandonment of the old assumption that it was a farmer's duty to stay on the land, producing food for people in the cities.

Now ARDA encourages him to turn over land to better purpose than its existing use and assists him in making the transfer.

The Ontario commitee even suggests it may become desirable to provide alternative employment for almost half the present farm population.

The Ontario report will cause another gush of sentimentality, chiefly from people who have escaped the land.

But farmers who work on the land today are no longer shocked by proposals for compulsory marketing programs or by ideas to change the use made of their land.

And they are not as reluctant as their city cousins expect them to be when they are offered escape from farm to a more comfortable life.

A number of residents in the southern part of Murney Ward in the vicinity of the CNR crossing, have had considerable inconvenience and discomfort yesterday owing to the water being a-to on their premises. This was the result of the cold snap which caused a large amount of anchor ice to come down the river blocking the passage and overflowing the river bank. Some of the residents on the west side of Front Street contained considerable water. Today the water has gone down some.

Hastings Park Bible Chapel Is Formed in City's West End

A new church congregation is being organized in Belleville — its founding movement involved about 10 young couples, says Grant Collet, Quinte Secondary School history teacher and one of the founders.

"The purpose is to meet the spiritual needs of an area, which, at present, doesn't have too many churches," says Mr. Collet. "Despite 20th century materialism there is a spiritual vitality in this day and age in being a Christian."

Several of the young founders were previously associated with Bethel Chapel in Belleville, and Bethel's resident preacher, W. E. Belch, will be first speaker at the inaugural services, he said.

As yet, construction of a chapel is "in the speculative stage" and may take one to two years, believed Mr. Collet.

However, by establishing itself now, the congregation hopes to grow along with the area.

In the meantime, its services and Sunday School at Centennial will draw on guest speakers and preachers.

Scots Disturbed by Decision Of Queen to Read Kirk Speech

By HUGH DAVIDSON
Canadian Press Correspondent

EDINBURGH (CP) — With traditional wariness of south-of-the-border actions, many Scots are disturbed by a decision to have the Queen officially attend the General Assembly of the Church of Scotland next May.

Touchy political and religious problems are involved in the first such attendance by a reigning monarch since the union of the British and Scottish Parliaments in 1603.

While the Queen is head of the state Church of England, she has no say in the affairs of the Presbyterian kirk. The custom is for the monarch to have an address read to the assembly by a lord high commissioner appointed for the purpose, usually an eminent Scot but occasionally a member of the Royal Family.

The decision for Queen Elizabeth to read her address in person and thereby break with a 350-year custom is looked on here as a political one. The kirk has expressed "delight," but Scots as a whole take the cynical view that it is a concession to the rising tide of Scottish nationalist feeling.

Winnie Ewing Donaldson, chairman of the resurgent Scottish Nationalist party, says bluntly that the Scottish residence—had using the Queen for political purposes.

Kirk officials have shown some concern, too, over the British government announcement that the Queen will attend a communion service in St. Giles Cathedral on the second day of the assembly. Some have brought up the question of whether the head of the Anglican church can partake of the sacraments of the Scottish church.

A Church of Scotland spokesman said it had raised an important constitutional issue but, after some research, a precedent was found for it.

Queen Victoria during one of her many visits to Edinburgh in the first sovereign to use this highland retreat for the official Scottish residence—had communion at the little church of nearby Crathie.

Just the same, the spokesman said, it is "a very, very tricky situation for her to be in."

Some consider that her taking communion might be construed as trying to influence the fusion of Anglicans and Presbyterians —a burning issue north of the Tweed where it is known as the bishops-in-the-Kirk question.

In any case, the communion decision is regarded as having placed Her Majesty on the tightrope of protocol. A false step could create a row.

This will not be the first time the Queen has been present at the assembly. She attended a special sitting in October, 1960, to mark the fourth centenary of Scottish Restoration but that was her lord high commissioner carried out the official functions.

The future King George VI attended in 1929 when he was Duke of York and acted as lord high commissioner for his father. The Duke of Gloucester, uncle of the Queen, represented her in 1963. Last year Queen Mother Elizabeth—a Scot—was designated as lord high commissioner but had to withdraw because of illness.

The Royal Family attendances are regarded as a tribute to the importance and influence of the assembly, the only Scottish elected institution to carry on since the Scottish Parliament was adjourned—not dissolved—in 1707. The date will be recalled often in the coming months in the present political climate of Scotland.

Modern Melodies Utilized

NEW YORK AP — The source is up front, in the men and the band, but the tune quickly spreads through the entire congregation, infusing it like some vibrant, elemental current of life unleashed.

"People still unborn," they sing to a calypso beat. "A people still unborn will praise the Lord."

It's the gradual or chant following the first Scripture reading of a Roman Catholic mass at Manhattan's Church of St. Thomas the Apostle, where music director Eddie Bonnemere has reanimated the worship with modern melody.

"Church music has to be natural, in the idioms of our time, if people are really going to express themselves in it," he said in an interview.

And that's what he provides them, scoring the sung parts of the liturgy to a contemporary combination of jazz, rock, calypso, cowboy blues and bugaboo harmonizes, along with hymns in updated mode and lyrics.

A jazz pianist and modern composer, Bonnemere, 42, has organized an eight-piece band and a young people's choir to stimulate the musical aspect of worship at the mostly Negro and Puerto Rican uptown church.

If response is any indication, the people love it. You can spot feet tapping, shoulders swaying and hands punctuating the rhythms as the service moves into the rock beat of the climactic sanctus.

"Holy, Holy, Holy, Lord God of Hosts." It's a jubilant, joyous buildup of musical celebration. "Blessed is He who comes in the name of the Lord."

Many people came to communion humming.

Bonnemere, a chubby, bespectacled Negro who also teaches instrumental music in New York public schools, has composed contemporary masses for the four major Christian seasons — Advent, Christmas, Easter, Trinity.

YOUR ANTIQUES

First Cut Glass Design Patented in New York

One of the most popular patterns in cut glass, an early development of the "brilliant" period of glass-cutting, was the "Russian" pattern. It was patented in 1882 by Philip MacDonald for T. G. Hawkes and Co., Corning, New York.

"Russian" is an over - all straight line pattern. It was copied in pressed glass as "Daisy and Button" although it continued to be called "Russian" in cut glass.

In 1866 a variation of "Russian" was developed called "Parisian". It was the first cut glass pattern to utilize curved lines in cutting and influenced later designs. It represents a significant advance in the technical processes of cutting glass.

Pressed glass patterns were made in imitation of cut glass so the styles of cut glass were copied. To a limited extent, pressed glass can be dated by the corresponding pattern date for the cut glass original.

The pattern illustrated is known as "Daisy" and is a variation of the "Russian" pattern. "Daisy" incorporates bands of three parallel straight lines. "Russian" uses the same number of cuts, but in a radiating design. A further variation is known as "Cane", similar to "Daisy" with two parallel lines. It looks exactly like the pattern of a cane-bottom chair.

The fabrication of "Daisy" is obscure. It came out after the "Russian" pattern and is not attributed to any glass house in Canada or the United States. It turns up in color, particularly green but may be found in amber, blue and yellow, as well as clear. It is attractive and now not too expensive.

"Daisy" is akin to "Nova Scotia Diamond" and "Daisy and Depressed Button" of the Burlington Glass Works, Hamilton, Ontario. Both these patterns are well-documented and correspondingly expensive. The pieces shown run about $35 a set for either pattern. With butter dish and spoon-holder added the price rises to $65 to $75 for four pieces.

With an archeological approach to pressed glass now prevalent, "Daisy" will shortly be identified. If it can be attributed to any Canadian glass house the price will certainly go up. At the moment cream and sugar can be bought for about $15 a set. Yellow is the most desirable color, followed by amber, blue, green and clear.

"Russian" in cut glass was one of the most durable patterns. It was copied by major firms such as Doerflinger, Fry, Mount Washington, Sinclaire and New England in the United Stes and lesser firms which cannot be identified on both sides of the border. It even appeared as a window glass pattern, pressed and frosted. Countless Canadian homes built between 1900 and 1941 have an arched panel in "Russian" or "Daisy and Button" set above what was once the "Parlor" window.

MR. AND MRS. GEORGE F. BALLENTINE

Ballentine – Mitchell

Dr. H. M. Davis performed the marriage ceremony at Bridge St. United Church in Belleville, when Victoria Lee Mitchell, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert L. Mitchell of R.R. 7, Belleville became the bride of George F. Ballentine, son of Mr. and Mrs. A. F. Ballentine of Scarborough. Organist Alec Gordon rendered various appropriate selections, while the soloist was Miss Cheryl Taylor.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a floor-length A-line gown of white French lace. It featured long sleeves, pearl and crystal beading on the mandarin collar, and cuffs of the dress. Her headdress was of white flowers with pearl and crystal leaves attached to a chapel veil edged with French lace. She carried a cascade bouquet of yellow roses, with sprigs of stephanotis and pine with gold tipped leaves.

Maid of honor. Miss Monica Roehner, Barrie, wore a floor-length emerald green velvet silk gown, with empire waist, and rounded neckline. The train was trimmed with embroidered green lace flowers. Her cascade bouquet was of yellow and bronze 'mums.

Bridesmaids, the Misses Sherry Ballentine, sister of the bridegroom, and Marilyn Mitchell, sister of the bride, both wore bright gold dresses, identical to the maid of honor.

Flower girl was Miss Bonny Mitchell, sister of the bride. She wore a green identical to that of the other attendants, but in emerald green. She carried a white basket of bronze and gold 'mums.

Best man was Michael Woolfenden, of Scarborough, while the ushers were Ian Gordan, of Bobcaygeon, and Robert Mitchell, brother of the bride.

For the wedding reception, which was held in the Sun Luck Gardens, the mother of the bride received the guests attired in a light blue silk dress interwoven with lace and gold threads. It featured a rolled collar and neckline embroidered with sequins and gold and crystal beads. She wore a lace French blue velvet and gold accessories which were enhanced by a corsage of pink sweetheart roses. Assisting her, the mother of the bridegroom chose a green silk dress, with a matching beaded green and white rolled collar coat and green accessories, completed by a corsage of talisman roses.

For the wedding trip to Ottawa and Detroit, the bride donned a grey wool knit dress and three quarter length jacket of grey, gold and brown stripes. Her attractive green coat and brown accessories were further enhanced by a corsage of Christmas corsage. Upon their return, the couple will reside in Weston, Ontario.

Couple Celebrate Silver Anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Baker recently celebrated their silver wedding anniversary.

Previous to their anniversary they were treated to a delicious dinner in Trenton, by their youngest daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas De Haan.

Following supper, they were greeted with a surprise party, held at the home of their eldest daughter and son-in-law, Mr. and Mrs. Clare Homan, R.R. 1, Corbyville.

They then opened the lovely gifts presented to them by friends and relatives from Havelock, Holloway, Trenton and Belleville. Following the opening of their gifts, they cut their anniversary cake, which was made and decorated by Mrs. Charles Doolittle.

The guests were then served a tasty lunch, bringing a memorable and pleasant evening to a close.

Women's Institutes

RIVER VALLEY W.I.

Mrs. Vernon Harry was hostess for the January meeting of the River Valley Women's Institute with 16 members and four visitors in attendance.

Mrs. Ernest Derry, convener of the program introduced their cousins, Mr. and Mrs. Fred Cheval, of Vancouver. The couple gave an interesting travelogue with colorful slides of their recent visit to Greece, Morocco and other points in Europe. They also showed several souvenirs of their visit.

The co-convener, Mrs. Sheldon McIntosh introduced and made the presentation of a small gift.

Mrs. Roy Tucker presided, and plans were completed for the 11 card parties to begin Friday evenings. The correspondence included a letter of thanks from Belleville for the box of gifts for the Mental Health patients.

The public relations officer stated that the new unit of MacDonald Institute, Guelph, was Dr. Janet M. Wardlaw. It was also announced that the Bay of Quinte Branch will be hostess on May 13 for the Eastern West District.

For Friendship Links, Mrs. Roy Tucker read two letters from Abbots Leigh W.I. in England. They received their individual Christmas gifts on Dec. 12.

The meeting closed in the usual manner, followed by refreshments. Mrs. Percy MacMullen voiced thanks to all those who had contributed to the success of the afternoon.

Fashion Forecasts Fabulous Furs

Furriers, an habitually anxious lot, and understandably so, considering the amount of investment involved, are jubilant for once with orders galore. Perhaps the current revolt against uniformity has something to do with this sudden upsurge of interest in the individuality of fur but due credit must also be given to the designers whose canvases ordain body fit and a diversity of styling that fur has never seen before — perhaps one should say has never been allowed. For instance, there is Canadian fisher with all the thickness and softness of dark Russian sable, and skunk — the blackest of all the black furs.

Diverse though the styles may be, they are accommodating. Hemlines flare to make room for fuller skirts. Sleeves bell out to fall over fullness gathered in at the wrist.

Femininity, fashion's answer to violence, is all over the place in fur. Belts emphastise the waist. Evening coats spread right down to the floor in ever widening bands of longhaired fur. The Garbo trenchcoat in sheared beige beaver has a huge shawl collar in luxuriant fisher. To go with the Dietrich pants there are longhaired coats in fox, lynx, lynx cat and winter-white raccoon.

Colors, too, complement the current fashion spectrum. Besides the 12 shades in Canada Mink, ranging from darkest brown through greys and beiges to white, the deep velvety bumbleberry brown of Matera Alaskan fur seal is noteworthy and Swakara broadtail has black frosted with red, with blue, with green, with bronze as well as a dark, night-sky blue, string, champagne and a shade called 'terra verde'.

So what else is new? Well, to get away from all this froth of femininity—Canadian-made fur coats for men. The men love them in Europe but we are not a nation of swingers and the answer of the average Canadian male to the exigencies of fashion would still appear to be either a beard or a clean white shirt.

Church Groups

FRANKFORD CHURCH GROUP

Frankford Full Gospel Tabernacle C.A.'s held their weekly meeting on Thursday evening, Jan. 9, with president Ricky Reilly opening the meeting.

Song leader was Mrs. F. Strome. A basketball Bible game was conducted by the president with two teams. Rev. J. Dunlop's team defeated Rev. K. Goodman's team with a score of 8 to 2.

Announcements were given of coming events, and later in the evening, the offering was received by Larry Reilly. Miss Dorcas Grant rendered a piano solo.

Rev. K. Goodman of Stirling was guest speaker for the evening. Following prayer, he brought a challenging message. After Rev. Goodman's message, the service closed with the singing of a hymn and a prayer.

ENGAGEMENT NOTICE

Mr. and Mrs. John E. Dyke announce the engagement of their daughter, Barbara Jane, to James Harris Reid of Smith's Falls, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Rowat of Carleton Place. Marriage will take place on February 8 at 2 p.m. in Albert College Chapel.

Ann Landers

Alertness of Mothers Can Protect Youngsters

DEAR ANN LANDERS: God bless you for writing that letter about the old uncle who molested the little girls in the family. You'll never know what you did for me.

I am 16 years old and for years — exactly how many, I can't remember — I have kept a secret locked inside me. Just reading that letter has made me feel 100 per cent better. I always thought I was a freak — that no one but me had ever had so horrible an experience. Now I know I am not alone.

I could have been more than four years old when my uncle did things to me that I now realize he had no business doing. It all started when he took me swimming. I didn't know what he was doing and I didn't realize it was wrong. After he molested me he took me for long rides and bought me candy. He always told me never to tell anybody what happened.

My uncle died when I was seven. I remember how happy I was. I really feared and hated him. And then I felt guilty because everybody was crying and I was glad.

Please Ann Landers, tell your readers how little girls can be protected. Thank you for giving me the chance to express myself on a subject that has been haunting me for years. — BEEN THERE.

DEAR BEEN: I'm glad you wrote, and I urge others to do so. It's good therapy.

And now for the advice: Mothers should be alert to all male friends and relatives who show undue interest in their young children. When youngsters return from a ride or an outing they should always be asked where they went, whom they saw and what happened. Any reluctance to speak should be interpreted as a danger signal.

The number of children who are molested and raped every year is appalling, and the guilty party is usually not a stranger, interestingly enough, but a family friend or a relative.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Our daughter was 15 in September but she looks and acts older. Sandy started to date when she was 12. I wasn't very happy about it but she was always ahead of her years and there was no way I could hold her back.

Sandy has gone crazy over a sailor who is stationed near here. The boy is 20 years old, doesn't say much, and for the life of me I can't figure what she sees in him. He has a hula dancer tattooed on one arm and a U.S. flag on the other. The boy is never without a cigarette in his mouth. He stands with his thumbs hooked in his pants. My husband can't stand him.

Last night Sandy said they want to be "pre-engaged" before he ships out. This means they promise to wait for each other and the promise is sealed with a ring. We are ready to say yes just to get some rest. Should we? — TIRED OF FIGHTING.

DEAR TIRED: No. A 15-year-old girl has no business getting pre-engaged, whatever that means, and you should not allow it.

Parents would be surprised at what can be accomplished if they take a position and let their kids know they mean it. It's always easier to say yes than no, but the easy out adds up to total abdication of parental responsibility.

DOGGY DELIGHT

"Life is not life at all without delight." — Coventry Patmore (1823-1896).

* * *

"See, here he comes. Right on time. One could keep time by him."

Sure enough, the plump little brown short-haired dog is hurrying past our Belleville friend's house on to a neighbor's. He continues on their sidewalk which leads to the back door (nor steps once on the lawn) and then sits on his haunches as he scratches the door with his two front paws.

In answer, the door opens. The neighbor bends down, pats the dog, then presents him with a bone It is eagerly accepted and enjoyed, at once.

Isn't that the cutest thing? See, now he's away, the way he came. Tomorrow, he'll be back. He's quite a highlight in our day: a dog and his way like that delights me."

Perhaps just as a dog and his way, such as "Dandy" delighted the famed naturalist, W. H. Hudson, and writes how the big black dog's biscuits were kept on a low kitchen shelf so he could help himself anytime. "But he didn't like the trouble the arrangement gave him," and would sit down and bark, "loud and deep" barks, a dozen times at spaced intervals, and anyone nearby gladly gave him a biscuit for peace and quiet's sake.

A little dog and his way delighted many in Belleville some years ago to such an extent that Mr. P. L. Roughton we are told by Mrs. W. H. Latimer, dedicated a poem "to a small black and white dog known to all Rotarians as the 'sentinel of the south door' of the Quinte Hotel where he is to be seen every Monday noon awaiting the arrival of his master Mr. Chas. Spalding."

Mrs. Latimer gave us this copy which had appeared in the Intelligencer at that time and reads:

Chippy is our little dog.
He came to us one day.
His coat is white with big black spots.
He's really just a stray

I don't know who his parents were.
I don't know where he's been.
And when folks ask what breed he is
I laugh and say 'Holstein.'

He's really quite remarkable:
He's smart as he can be.
For every single Monday noon
He goes to Rotary.

You'll always see him waiting
Outside the Hotel door.
He's been there every Monday
From June right through December.
Perhaps he thinks they'll make of him
An honorary member.

Everybody calls him Chippy:
He's really quite well known
He even has a special place
To get an ice-cream cone.

And he is most affectionate:
He's quite a dandy pet.
If there are any smarter dogs
I haven't seen them yet.

P.S. The special place to get an ice-cream cone was none other than Lattimer's Drug Store: a little dog Mrs. Latimer says she remembers with fondness and delight.

Women's Institutes

(MARMORA WI)

MARMORA — The January meeting of Marmora Women's Institute was held at the home of Mrs. Frank Sweet which opened with an auction sale with Mrs. P. J. O'Neill as auctioneer.

It was announced that donations during the last month included those to the Christmas fund of the Mental Health Service, Belleville, to the Legion, Branch 237, for Christmas baskets, and a gift of sheets for a burned-out family. A short course in upholstering to be held at Chatterton was made known in a letter from the Department of Agriculture.

Mrs. Harold Nayler entertained with a humorous recipe for elephant stew. Brunch economist, Mrs. Nayler also discussed the ban on seeling paint containing oxide, stressing the check that is being made on toys painted with red oxide. Other points covered were milk that is now being processed from soybeans for those that are allergic to cow's milk, and fabrics on the market of man made fibres.

Miss Grace Warren gave the history of "A Tree That Grows in Dummer" a large elm tree growing in Dummer Township which had been split by lightning about 50 years ago, and its unusual growth since that time.

Program included a humorous reading by Mrs. Percy Gordon and another by Miss Warren.

Men Beware

NEW WESTMINSTER, B.C. (CP) — Judo appealed to Sheila Mainland when she and a friend watched a judo demonstration at the YMCA here in 1958. Since that time she has worked her way up to a second degree black belt and says she's the only woman in Canada to hold the honor.

Reader's "Hospital Hints" Excellent

By DORIS CLARK

Dear Doris: Thought I would write you my Hospital Notes while they are fresh in my mind. Hope you can read them, as I am lying down — actually feel wobbler today then I did yesterday.

First. The important things, for me, were the things Sally (your sister) did. No buttering up — but she thought out the things that were real problems. They wouldn't matter so much to someone with a husband or other adults in the house, but to a widow with one boy, they were the biggest things, once I had found someone to look after George.

1. Driving me to the hospital and staying with me so I didn't feel like an Orphan (with a capital O), and talking to me and waiting till I was established in bed so that I didn't have time to start brooding and worrying.

2. Bringing me small things like cards and stamps, which I would never have remembered, and some scented soap — morale boost again.

3. Picking me up and taking me home and making a cup of tea. There is an awful letdown coming home to an empty house, and this prevented it.

4. Doing the shopping. What a relief! I sent George for little things, but it was so nice to have a good roast, and enough food in the house when I came home that I didn't have to go over there and back the crowds. Or live out of tins.

The other things — nursestaff — I was telling Sally about. Several people from the school (where I teach) phoned and offered to come up for a visit and I told them quite honestly I'd rather not. I just wasn't up to visits.

My roommate's visitors were the worst trial of the whole experience, and they were kind and well-meaning. But they were in the wrong place. Sometimes there were seven of them all at once, and while it might be great for a cocktail party, it was hell on the nerves. Perhaps for patients who are well enough to enjoy visitors there could be some kind of reception room, but I don't think they belong in a hospital room.

Transistor radios. They're a great comfort and pass the time, but everyone should have earphones. You could hear them blasting all down the hall.

Let's see — I enjoyed phone calls. I loved getting the cards every day from you and Sally and Mary; just a little boost to the spirits. I think a lot of money spent on flowers and things is sort of a waste; the more there are, the less you appreciate them individually; and since you're not getting any exercise and usually the tummy is queasy, gifts of food are apt to be more of a torture than anything.

In fact, I think socializing, flowers, gifts, whatever all, might better be saved for when you're out. Though I suppose this is going to vary a lot with specific illnesses, individual tastes and length of sentence. — Victoria.

Let's see — Victoria. I know you're busy getting the cards every day from you and Sally and Mary; just a little boost to the spirits. I think a lot of money spent on flowers and things is sort of a waste; the more there are, the less you appreciate them individually; and since you're not getting

Delicious Pineapple Squares Are Everyone's Favorite

By MARY MOORE

QUESTION: You have printed several recipes for Pineapple Squares in the past three years or so but the one I liked best was the one from the Fall of 1965. I remember you tasted them in the home of a relative following the funeral of a loved one. Do you remember them? Sharon B.

ANSWER: I think these were my favorites too.

PINEAPPLE SQUARES
(will freeze)

Lower Crust:
¾ cup butter (do not substitute)
½ cup granulated sugar
1½ cups sifted all-purpose flour
¼ teaspoon salt

Topping:
one 20-oz. can crushed pineapple, well drained
1 egg
¾ cup light brown sugar
¼ teaspoon salt
½ teaspoon vanilla
½ cup coconut (flaked or desiccated)

Roll and make Lower Crust cream together the butter and granulated sugar well then add flour and salt and beat until thoroughly blended. (This now resembles soft shortbread dough.) Press into unbuttered 3½ x 8½" pan, using your moistened finger tips to make it smooth.

Drain pineapple, making sure excess syrup is pressed out. (Use leftover syrup for some other purpose such as the liquid ingredient in a jelly dessert.) Spread drained pineapple evenly over lower crust.

Beat together in a bowl the egg, brown sugar, salt, vanilla and coconut. Spread evenly over pineapple. Bake at 325 deg. Fahr. for 35 minutes or until top is baked and gold all over. Let cool in pan, but mark into small 1¼" squares while warm.

NOTE: Because I planned to freeze these, I lined the bottom of the pan with foil. After cutting and cooling I put them in a double plastic bag and froze them. When they were hard I lifted them from the pan on the foil, cut them in halves lengthwise, put one half on top of the other, returned them to their double bag, froze them, and stored for a future tea party.

Points for Parents

Mother: "Give me that purse. You know you're not supposed to get into it. You'll lose my money for me."

Mother: "This is your purse. There are some new things in it. I'll put my purse away until I'm ready to go shopping."

A toddler must learn about "mine" and "this" but the learning will be more peaceful if you can substitute an interesting and perhaps similar item for the forbidden one.

Won't Collect Activity Fees

Student Newspaper Angers College Officials

REGINA (CP) — Take $33.25 annual activity fees from each of the 4,000 or so students on the University of Saskatchewan Regina campus.

Put it into a fund and allocate 90 per cent for student athletics, social functions and a student union building.

Turn the rest over to the student newspaper, the Carillon.

There's the rub.

The university board of governors, angered by the newspaper which it said pursued an editorial policy "aimed at undermining confidence in the senate, the board of governors and the administration," announced Dec. 31 it wouldn't collect the fees.

The board said the Carillon's pictures and language had offended an "increased segment of a public that respects better of an institution of higher learning."

The Dec. 6 issue featured a sexually graphic illustration of a woman giving birth to a child while Ho Chi Minh, flanked by sexual symbols, looked on.

Students who wanted to continue supporting the Carillon would have to do so on a voluntary basis, the board said.

"The issue isn't the Carillon," student union President Dave Sheard retaliated, whether it is good or bad, whether it is obscene . . . or not obscene, but who has final control of the student newspaper.

"If we pay for the thing, write the thing and distribute the thing, we should have control of the thing."

Usually described as a moderate, Mr. Sheard said he was "quite prepared to stand in front of a firing squad of students, but not in front of a firing squad of the administration."

The administration, meanwhile, said it had tried for months to get the students' union to accept responsibility for publishing the Carillon.

But the union said it simply gave carte blanche to Carillon editor Norm Bolen.

Bolen, naturally hostile to the board's decision, said it wasn't really upset by the Dec. 6 issue illustration, the work of a man who, "as an artist, was free to do what he liked."

Bolen said the board's action was "a cover for deeper political charges."

Reid Robinson, president of the Regina Faculty Association, said the board's action was "somewhat abhorrent . . . a fiscal sledgehammer being used for censorship."

In the meantime, campus Principal W. A. Riddell, who had recommended the board stop collecting the fees, said the campus would honor its commitments to the western Canada Intercollegiate Athletic Association until the dispute was settled. He did not say how the university planned to do this.

Cobourg Publisher Acts As Town's Ombudsman

COBOURG, Ont. (CP) — To Foster Meharry Russell, publisher of Canada's oldest weekly newspaper, the duties of a newspaper man sometimes include being an ombudsman.

Russell, 61, who has been writing outspoken editorials for the 138-year-ole Cobourg Sentinel-Star for 22 years, said that "more and more, people are not going to church with their problems—they are coming here."

And he has been helping solve their problems—sometimes at serious risk.

At a bitter strike at nearby Port Hope, about 70 miles east of Toronto, in 1965, Mr. Russell was hanged in effigy for supporting employees of the Nicholson File Co. who did not want to join the United Steel Workers of America.

With his wife Jean at the helm of their car, he went to the strike scene, took pictures of the hanging and the pickets as they surged towards him. "I got my pictures boys," he said, jumping into the car as Mrs. Russell drove away through the crowd.

It was for coverage of the strike that he became the first newspaper man outside the United States to win the Elijah Parish Lovejoy Award, presented for courage in journalism by the University of Southern Illinois.

Another time, Mr. Russell charged the mayor of Cobourg with ethnic discrimination, quoting him as saying that a certain "goddamn Greek" would not get a particular concession in the town-owned pavilion.

The mayor resigned a week later when the editorial was reprinted in the Toronto Star.

Mr. Russell came by his profession honestly. His father Levi was a printer with the Millbrook, Ont., weekly where Russell was born. Now 85, the elder Russell resists all efforts to make him retire, working regularly in the Sentinel-Star printing department.

His son's editorials were reprinted in more than 200 communities in Canada and other countries last year.

One of the first stories in the Sentinel-Star, first published Jan 11, 1838, as the Cobourg Star, described a mail robbery on the road between the Ontario towns of Kingston and York in which a lone rider was robbed of his mail bag.

The early story criticized the condition of the road which forced the rider to travel alone. After that, the mail courrier had an armed companion on the ride.

Students Back to Class

Boycott Ends on Cornwall Campus

CORNWALL, Ont. (CP) — A three-day student boycott of classes at the Cornwall campus of St. Lawrence College of Applied Arts and Technology ended Friday night.

Student and administration representatives announced the agreement to return to classes Monday following an all-day negotiation session which was interrupted when R. C. Short, college president, was unable to continue the talks because of illness.

"After many hours of exhausting deliberation, we have come to an agreement with the administration of this college over our grievances," Gary Robertson, spokesman for the 11-student delegation, said in an interview. "We are therefore requesting all students to return to classes Monday."

Meanwhile, there was the hint of an investigation into the dismissal of a teacher which prompted the boycott Wednesday. The students also demanded a review of past dismissals and arbitration to ensure fairness in any future cases.

Mr. Robertson said there would be some kind of inquiry, but he refused to discuss it until Monday.

The Friday meeting began at 8 a.m. and lasted until 10 p.m.

The students claimed that seven teachers and two other college employees were asked to resign or were dismissed in the last 18 months.

They also asked for a seat for students on the college executive committee, more administrative representation for the Cornwall campus and guarantees of immunity from reprisals for protesters.

When asked how many of the student demands had been met, Mr. Short replied:

"The students were satisfied with answers given to the five demands."

More than 100 students boycotted classes Wednesday, but support dwindled Thursday.

Montreal Bombings

Oratory Used to Store Dynamite

MONTREAL (CP)—Police say 34 sticks of dynamite left behind St. Joseph's Oratory on Mount Royal since the spring of 1968 had deteriorated to the point where some could explode spontaneously when they were found earlier this week.

Officers found the dynamite after four students charged with planting, bombs confessed to using the rear of the shrine as a storing place for 34 sticks of dynamite and about 50 detonators.

Police said Friday the students admitted to storing the explosives there after they had been questioned nonstop for five hours.

The four boys, two aged 13 and the others aged 15 and 16, have pleaded guilty in social welfare court to charges of planting bombs. Three of the pleas were not-accepted however, because the boys' parents were out of town. The boys will appear in court again Jan. 22.

Sgt. Robert Cote, head of the city police bomb squad, said the dynamite found at the base of the shrine was in dangerous condition. It had begun to crystallize at the end of the sticks and a rise in temperature could have caused a spontaneous explosion.

The dynamite and detonators were believed to have been stolen from a construction site at the University of Montreal last March.

Thirteen of the 34 sticks were planted at Ecole Secondaire St. Luc in suburban Cote St. Luc Monday night. Only one stick exploded, damaging an outside wall and shattering 10 windows. Police said 12 of the sticks were too wet to explode.

Another four dynamite sticks were planted under a police car on a west-end car lot Nov. 26. The bomb was dismantled before it could explode.

The boys charged with the bombings have not been identified because of their ages.

Two of them, aged 13 and 15, were arrested at their homes in west-end Notre-Dame-de-Grace Wednesday night. Two others, aged 13 and 16, were picked up at their west-end homes Tuesday night.

Assistant Director Paul-Emile Olivier of the Montreal police department said Friday that the students have made no statements that would indicate "they were linked to any terrorist organization."

A story indicating there was such a link was published Thursday by the Montreal Star and used by The Canadian Press. The Star published the police denial Friday also ran a boxed note saying information carried in the Thursday story "was given to this paper's reporter by sources within the police department."

Det.-Lieut. Kasimir Kryszak of Montreal police said the boys planted the bombs for "kicks" and because they did not like the principal and a teacher at the school. There was" no other reason."

Police said the four arrests stemmed from a report from the mother of a student who attends the school bombed Monday.

Her son had mentioned the name of a student alleged to be involved and the woman notified police.

It was not known whether the woman is being considered for a $21,000 reward posted by the city, the Quebec government and a union for information leading to the arrest of persons responsible for 50 bomb incidents in the Montreal area in the last nine months.

Insurance Executives Waged Personal Vendetta: Judy

TORONTO (CP) — Judy LaMarsh, former secretary of state, said Friday Canadian insurance companies waged a personal vendetta against her when she was health minister, and did everything in their power to oppose the Canada Pension Plan.

In the second of two syndicated television interviews with Pierre Berton, taped in Toronto and broadcast Friday night, Miss LaMarsh said insurance company executives became angry after learning that the government was serious about starting a pension plan.

None of the insurance executives were identified by name.

"They had the benefit of Great-West Life start a great vendetta against me," she said. "He said, in effect, 'let's stop the government cold'."

Miss LaMarsh also discussed her feelings about the CBC, which are contained in her newly released Judy LaMarsh: Bird in a Gilded Cage.

She said she was surprised last year at the reaction in her accusation that there was "rotten management" in the CBC.

She said that when she made the statement in a television interview, she thought it was generally accepted that the CBC was poorly managed.

Alphonse Ouimet, former CBC president, was unaware of what was going on in the corporation and in the country, Miss LaMarsh said.

She said he once commissioned a management report that came to the conclusion that the trouble in the CBC "started at the top."

Man Released from Jail -- Wife Gets Divorce

OTTAWA (CP) — Accused murderer Donald Joseph Phillion, 29, was released from jail for about half an hour Friday—long enough for his wife to be granted a divorce.

Mr. Justice Henderson of the Ontario Supreme Court issued a special order so that Phillion, charged with two other men in the slaying of two motorists a week ago, could appear in court for the divorce proceedings.

Mrs. Phillion, the former Betty Ann Hash, a short, slight woman with brown hair and wearing glasses, testified that she had married Phillion July 16, 1966. She had not lived with him since August of the same year. There were no children.

Phillion, a native of Cobalt, Ont., has no fixed address.

The court issued a decree nisi on the grounds of adultery.

Phillion was returned to his cell in Carleton county jail after the brief hearing. He is charged, along with David John Breault, 23, of Ottawa, and David Edward Dwyer, 23, of Windsor, Ont., with non-capital murder in the highway deaths near Carp, Ont., of Gerald MacDonald, 31, of Ottawa, and Kenneth Vallee, 42, of St. Clair Shores, Mich.

Colts Had Lone Loss En Route to Super Bowl

MIAMI (AP) — New York Jets and Baltimore Colts held light workouts Friday in preparation for Sunday's Super Bowl game.

The Colts, champions of the National Football League, are 18-point favorites over the Jets of the American Football League. The NFL won the first two games of the series inaugurated in 1967.

Kickoff time is 3:05 p.m. EST.

At stake for the players, in addition to the pro football title, is $15,000 a man for the winners as against $7,500 for each loser.

Baltimore won 13 of its 14 regular season games to take its division title, then defeated Minnesota for the NFL's Western Conference crown. The Colts went on to smash the Eastern Conference champion Cleveland, 34-0 in the NFL championship game.

In the AFL, the Jets won their first title with an 11-3 record in the Eastern Division. They won the title game, defeating Oakland Raiders 27-23.

The game matches clubs with high powered offences and stout defences. The Colts in 18 games scored 468 points, and allowed the opposition only 158, posting three shutouts. The Jets scored 419 points and allowed 280.

The big question is defence...

Coach Weeb Ewbank of the Jets, who once coached Baltimore to two NFL championships, insists his less experienced team has an excellent chance to be the first AFL Super Bowl winner.

"We are the best AFL team to play in the Super Bowl," says Ewbank.

Jet quarterback Joe Namath was the club's leader this season. He completed 187 of 380 passes for 3,147 yards and 15 touchdowns. He can throw long and he gets the ball off fast, and he's accurate.

Namath has three prime receivers in Don Maynard, George Sauer Jr., and Pete Lammons.

Earl Morrall, the 34-year-old journeyman quarterback who has been with a number of NFL teams, was acquired by the Colts from New York Giants for tight end Butch Wilson after the great John Unitas developed a sore arm. Almost overnight, the veteran of 13 NFL seasons became a star. He threw 26 touchdown passes in leading Baltimore to its first NFL title since 1958.

He was voted to the all-NFL team and selected player of the year by Don Schula, Baltimore coach, says his quarterback didn't have a bad day all season.

The Baltimore defence is spearheaded by a powerful and quick front four consisting of ends Bubba Smith and Ordell Braase, and tackles Billy Ray Smith and Fred Miller. This four should put the Jets' offensive line and Namath to their biggest test.

Itch for Game 'Cowardice' Say Soviets

MOSCOW (Reuters) — The Soviet amateur hockey team today renewed a challenge to Canadian professional players and suggested the Canadians are afraid to play them.

In an article headlined Pride or Cowardice?, Anatoly Tarasov, coach of the Soviet team, said: "We have repeated our challenge several times now. we have tried to find words so strong that they would provoke a response.

"We have said that we and not you are the champions of the world. . . . Let's play and see if you can win from us and prove that you are the strongest in the whole world, not just in the Western Hemisphere."

Tarasov's article was the major story on the front page of Sovietsky Sport, Russia's leading sports newspaper, and reflected the intense interest in a match between Russian players and Canadian pros, whose abilities are legendary here.

Tarasov said Canadian amateurs no longer are a match for the Soviet team. Canadians had beaten Russians only twice in the last three years, both times on a Canadian rink and with Canadian judging, he said.

The 1968 Canadian national team, which twice beat New York Rangers, lost 5-0 to the Soviet team at Grenoble, France, last year, he noted.

In contrast to Canada, he said, Russia is not afraid of a meeting and is not afraid of playing by the rougher professional rules.

"We are to assure you that our boys will be able to knock the eagerness for rough-housing out of anybody who tries to play rough against a Soviet hockey team," he warned.

What obviously irked Tarasov was the Canadian view that professional players are so much better than Soviet amateurs that there is no point in a game between them.

"We beat your (amateur) team and we hear, 'We are still the strongest because we have the professionals. . . .' he said.

It is time, he said, for Canadian team officials to forget their arguments against the match and let the world see a "most interesting, most gripping spectacle that would afford enormous pleasure to everyone who has occasion to see it either in person or on television."

Pittsburgh Transfer Claimed a Possibility

VANCOUVER (CP) — The Province says that if Oakland's National Hockey League franchise is switched to Buffalo, N.Y., then the Pittsburgh franchise might be shifted to the Oakland-San Francisco area.

At the same time, the morning newspaper quotes Joe Crozier, general manager of Vancouver Canucks of the Western Hockey League, as indicating the bid to move the Oakland franchise to Buffalo could fail.

The move would need approval of nine of the 12 NHL governors. Crozier says: "We have it on good authority that such a move would fail one or two votes short."

A Buffalo group, headed by banker Seymour Knox III, has purchased the Oakland franchise and 'he proposal to switch the franchise is on the agenda of the NHL governors' meeting in Montreal Jan. 21.

Vancouver interests oppose the switch on grounds Vancouver has been promised the next NHL franchise. Said Crozier: "I consider any move the same as the next franchise."

The Province says there is speculation that David Molson of Montreal, Stafford Smythe of Toronto and Jack Kent Cooke of Los Angeles, would oppose the transfer of the Oakland franchise to Buffalo. It says Bruce Norris of Detroit might also vote against it.

Meanwhile, NHL president Clarence Campbell said from Montreal he will be in Vancouver Jan. 24 when Canucks play San Diego Gulls in the first anniversary game in the new 15,000 seat Pacific Coliseum.

But, he said: "I certainly do not intend to become involved in any franchise hassle."

'Not for Sale'

TORONTO (CP) — Pittsburgh Penguins have no plans to move to another city, the team's representative on the National Hockey League's board of governors said Friday.

Donald H. Parsons, a Detroit lawyer, said in a telephone conversation that the Pittsburgh team is not for sale "and will not be in the foreseeable future."

"Let me also add that the possibility of a switch from Pittsburgh to some other city is not now contemplated, and will not be in the foreseeable future. I stress that we will work to develop the Pittsburgh area in hopes the team will gain approval."

Parsons was commenting on rumors that the Pittsburgh franchise would be shifted to Vancouver as a west coast replacement for Oakland Seals who apparently are destined for Buffalo.

Football Merger Official in 1970

MIAMI (AP) — Pro football commissioner Pete Rozelle said Friday the merger of the National and American football leagues, set for 1970, is in effect now, Rozelle told a news conference: "We are in effect merged now. All that remains is a new schedule alignment which will take place in 1970."

ANDY CAPP

by Maurice Switzer Sports Editor

Curling addicts leave no stone unturned to prove that they get more than a warmup for housework by flailing their brooms up and down the pebbled lanes.

Now Medicine Hat researcher J. C. Muirhead has come out with results of a study showing that sweeping CAN add distance to rock travel by lowering air resistance in acting as a windshield for the moving granite.

The Alberta scientist-curler's exhaustive digit-doodling has taught him that there's enough "air drag" on the average stone to reduce its overall travel by 2.5 feet.

And that's a significant distance in the regulation 138 feet from hack to house.

But the critical question — whether or not sweeping reduces ice-to-stone friction — remains theoretically unproven, even if everyone knows it's a fact.

If they couldn't prove HOW or WHY sweeping action works on pebbled curling surfaces, Galt engineers Bill Meyer and Reg Werlich did the next best thing in 1965 — they showed it DID work.

They devised an ingenious finely-calibrated, tripod-mounted pendulum to assure that rocks in their experiment would be delivered with a consistent velocity, and imparted with an identical curl.

The findings showed that sweeping carried rocks an average of 18 feet further on pebbled ice than nonswept deliveries from their sure-fire swinging mechanical arm.

Significantly, it was found that sweeping made an appreciable difference on a smooth ice surface.

This tended to support the theory that a broom's cutting action on ice pebbles increased a rock's travel by diminishing friction.

One general principle the Werlich-Meyer experiment did establish for certain: the fellow pushing the broom represents the critical sweeping factor.

Under that broad heading, they claimed the following should be borne in mind before the unnecessary development of sciatica:

— One strong sweeper is as good as two strong sweepers;

— Two "mediums" are as good as one strong, but one medium isn't as good as two mediums;

— Sweeping is more important in the latter ends of a game;

— The type of broom — whether Scottish push-style or standard Canadian — doesn't make a "whisk of difference."

Once upon a Canadian time, National Hockey League games were something you heard on the radio, or watched on television, but only got to see on the event you won tickets in a sweepstakes, or had them left you in a will.

Nowadays, just about every newspaper boy in the neighborhood has seen the interior of the Forum, or walked along Carleton St. into the Gardens.

One of the more pleasant, and increasingly more popular side-effects of the ticket-availability boom is the emergence of package deals that entitle purchasers to transportation, a chance to see the sights of Toronto or Montreal, accommodation, and tickets to the NHL game in that city.

Locally, the Kinsmen Club, in co-operation with the Canadian National Railway, is promoting their version — a "Hockey-a-Go-Go," package for the February 1st Montreal game against New York.

We've come a long way from Foster Hewitt's "Hockey Night in Canada."

Leafs Are Stuck with Sixth-best Power Play in League

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

One of the mysteries of the National Hockey League season is Toronto Maple Leafs' inability to score goals when they have a manpower advantage.

The Maple Leafs on paper should have a stronger power play this season than last, but statistics show otherwise. In 38 games this season the Maple Leafs have scored 15 power-play goals compared to 21 at the same point last year.

Ron Andrews, NHL statistician, said Friday the Maple Leafs are sixth in power-play goals in the Eastern Division and probably 11th overall.

Two players not with Toronto at this time last season—Pierre Pilote and Norm Ullman—are central figures on the power play, Ullman is the NHL's sixth leading scorer and Pilote is a veteran of the potent Chicago Black Hawks' power play, so it is difficult to imagine why the team has trouble scoring.

The Maple Leafs' power play may get a chance to redeem itself tonight when Los Angeles Kings visit Toronto.

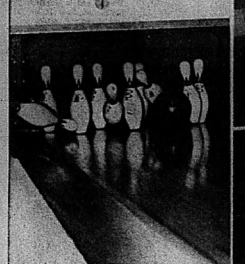
In other NHL games, Boston Bruins play the Canadiens at Montreal, New York Rangers face the Red Wings at Detroit, Chicago is at St. Louis in one of the Blues, Minnesota North Stars welcome Philadelphia Flyers and Oakland Seals clash with the Penguins at Pittsburgh. Sunday, Pittsburgh is at Boston; Oakland visits Detroit, Los Angeles journeys to Chicago and St. Louis is at Minnesota.

Toronto manager-coach Punch Imlach shrugs off suggestions his power play has been unproductive.

"There's nothing wrong with it," he said in an interview Friday. "We scored a power goal last night."

He was speaking about the Maple Leafs' 3-2 loss in Boston Thursday night when Ullman picked up a power-play goal, his seventh of the season.

Paul Henderson usually teams up with Ullman and Pilote on power plays. Others who have seen action when Toronto has a manpower advantage are Dave Keon, Mike Walton, Tim Horton, Larry Mickey and Jim Dorey.



Los Angeles, meanwhile, has had trouble just scoring goals under any conditions. The Kings have only three in their last five games and 78 for the season—the lowest total in the NHL.

Los Angeles was beaten 6-2 at Detroit Thursday, but it was a moral victory for the Kings because the two goals ended a three-game scoring drought.

The game between Montreal and Boston—the most important one tonight—involves two of the three scoring teams in the NHL.

Chicago leads with 149 goals while Montreal is second with 138. Boston has 125, but has played two less games than Chicago and three fewer than Montreal.

The Canadiens lead the Eastern Division with 52 points, three more than Boston. But Boston could move into first place with a pair of weekend victories and still would have two games in hand over Montreal.

SIGNS OF THINGS TO COME are written all over Don Flieger's face after he releases his ball. The result — a strike of course! Don, who discovered the ten-pin game only six months ago, sports a 147 average. Don bowls in the men's Major "A" and Bowlero Mixed League at the Brunswick Belleville Bowl. Don finds ten pins interesting and enjoyable and has given up five pins to devote his time to his new interest.

To Your Good Health

Always Follow Medication Orders

By Dr. George C. Thosteson

Dear Dr. Thosteson: About three months ago I had a strep throat. The doctor gave me a shot and enough pencillin for 10 days. In a few days I thought I was well and did not take all the pills.

In about a month I get this bad throat infection again. This time I had some nodes in my throat and the lymph glands swelled.

My throat got all right after medication but the lymph nodes are still there. The doctor examined my throat again and said he couldn't find anything wrong and told me to come back in a month. Now I help worrying about it. Would you recommend my seeing another doctor, or do you think I'm just scared? — Mrs. A. K. B.

Just scared, I'd say. But next time when your doctor gives you penicillin or other antibiotic to take for any specified length of time (or any particular number of tablets or capsules) take them all.

To understand why, you need to know how the wonderdrugs work. They do not destroy germs. Instead, they prevent them from multiplying—and then your body's natural defences can take care of the remaining germs.

When you stopped taking your penicillin, you evidently did so before the infection in your throat was entirely stamped out. You felt better — but some germs still survived. So presently they began to multiply again, and soon you had a full-blown infection again.

There is a second, and important, danger in stopping too soon. Some of the surviving germs by then may have become resistant to the antibiotics — that is, they can continue to multiply in spite of the medication, and then another one has to be used.

Anyway, with your second bout of infection, your system had to go to work harder fighting the germs. This put extra strain on your lymph glands, with resultant swelling.

The probability is that these glands will return to normal size in time. They usually do, if they have not been subjected to too much overloading.

If I were you, I'd go back to the doctor, as he directed, in a month. I see no purpose in going to anyone else or in being so scared.

But next time you are told to take a specified amount of medication, follow the instructions. Your doctor didn't give you enough for 10 days just because he is stingy. He gave you that much because you needed that much to control your infection thoroughly instead of just temporarily.

* * *

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I have been hoarse for months and also have a constant phlegm throat and plugged-up and runny nose. I have been to two doctors. One said I should have a cancer test and the other said it was sinus. I have put off having the cancer test because I am afraid of having the doctor put anything down my throat. Could sinus cause me to be hoarse? — Mrs. B. W.

Stop wasting time and taking chances. Continued hoarseness is one of the "cancer danger signals." Your sinus trouble, plus perhaps other factors, could cause hoarseness but, since cancer is the more serious threat, have that examination before waiting any longer.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I have always had a protruding abdomen and it seems to get worse. I am 21. What can I do to reverse the situation or keep it from getting worse? I am 5 feet and 3½ and weigh 130 pounds. — Desperate.

To be blunt about it: practice better posture, lose 20 pounds, and take up bowling or some other regular exercise

Minister Transferred

TWEED — Mr. A. Lents, hold his last church service recently in Plevna, he has been transferred to Rideau Ferry, and before his departure, early in January, oh behalf of the United Church Women of Plevna charge, Mrs. Leola Gorr, president, and Mrs. Cora James, presented he and his wife, Mrs. Lents with a "Rose" quilt and cushion made by the U.C.W. They wished them luck in their new charge. They will be sadly missed by this congregation.

Also, on a Saturday evening, some of the young people of Plevna, and the district, gathered in the Centennial Hall for a going away party for son Steve.

Group Names New Officers

DESIGNED TO FILL THE EMPTY DAYS!

In 1890, James Naismith was trying to figure out a game to fill the gap between the end of curriculum between the football and baseball seasons. Basketball was the name of his invention. It's the only major sport competitive sport of purely American origin!

It's a wonderful invention used all over the world to sell no needed merchandise or almost anything . . . here we have it being used to sell you and you get it by dialing 962-9171.

NERO PLAYED THE BAGPIPES?

Although we think of the bagpipes as a Scottish instrument, it was very popular in ancient Italy and the Roman Emperor Nero had one, too. Made of a leather bag and reed pipes, the bagpipes was a popular folk and military instrument in Scotland and Ireland.

Whether you wish to sell a good set of bagpipes or any other no longer used musical instruments at your house, rely on a fast-acting Intelligencer Ad to do it for you! Call 962-9171 for information.

'Radio Free Derry' Completes Week of Broadcasting on Feud

LONDONDERRY (A P) — The Bogside People's Republic, unique product of Northern Ireland's political feuding, completed a week of independence today with a broadcast on underground radio.

Bogside is the Roman Catholic area of divided Londonderry, which says it got the worst of police retribution in last week-end's riots in which nearly 200 persons were injured.

Since Sunday no policeman has passed its barricades.

Vigilantes keep the area picketed day and night.

The entrance to Bogside is barricaded by a bulldozer, an overturned dump truck, planks and iron sheets. Behind the barricade are liberal supplies of cobblestones. On the wall of a house is painted the sign: "You are now entering free Derry."

A clandestine radio calling itself "Radio Free Derry" started broadcasting from Bogside Friday. It is run by five youngsters, presumed to be students from Belfast.

They invited reporters to look over their installation in a small house inside the picketed area.

Its first broadcasts gave local news and suggested topics for debate by the Bogside citizenry —perhaps 3,000 of Londonderry's 57,000 population. The operators said they shift the transmitter—not much larger than a typewriter—from house to house to avoid detection.

The marchers whose civil rights trek from Belfast to Londonderry set off last week's conflict, meanwhile, head for another confrontation with police, bringing fears of more casualties.

This time the chosen battleground was Newry, a port and market town near the border with the southern Irish Republic. Newry is a stronghold of the Nationalist party—the opposition to the pro-British provincial government at Belfast.

Government Messages Don't Get Through

HALIFAX (CP) — The federal government talks to the people of Canada through its information services, but usually the message doesn't get through.

That was one of the recurring themes at a meeting here Friday between the task force on federal government information services and 70 Maritime businessmen, provincial and federal information officers, representatives of newspapers, radio and television, teachers, and public relations officers.

D'Iberville, Fortier, chairman of the task force, and his two fellow researchers, Bernard Ostry and Tom Ford, heard some acid criticism of the way government public information officers do their jobs.

Mr. Fortier himself referred to a lack of candor among some officers when they were discussing departmental problems.

Arbitration Board Hearing

Judge Biased: Oakville Police

OAKVILLE (CP) — Oakville police Friday asked Judge Garth Moore to resign as chairman of an arbitration board hearing their wage dispute because they said he was not able to give a fair judgment.

Kenneth Brooks, president of the Oakville Police Association, said Judge Moore was in a position of bias because he had been a member of three police commissions. Mr. Brooks also said the judge had attended at least one meeting of the Association of Boards of Police Commissioners.

Judge Moore has served on commissions in Vaughan and Markham townships and Richmond Hill.

Judge Moore replied that since he could not judge his own case, he suggested the association "apply to the Supreme Court of Ontario for a writ of prohibition against me on the grounds you state. . . ."

He allowed the association three weeks to make their application and adjourned the hearing until Jan. 31.

Wilfred Healey, Oakville municipality counsel, said no such objection had ever been made before.

He said county court judges had been members of arbitration boards for years and in most cases judges were members of police commissions.

Mr. Brooks said the policemen are seeking a raise to $8,300 for the one-year 1969 contract, an increase of $786 over last year's contract.

'Pride, Humility And Gratitude'

Spacemen Back to Houston

NEW YORK (Reuters) — Apollo 8 spacemen Frank Borman, James Lovell and William Anders were scheduled to return to the Houston Space Centre today after being given a heroes' reception during a hectic one-day visit to New York.

The astronauts, who made history by orbiting the moon 20 times, were given a rousing welcome in one of New York's coldest and loudest ticker tape parades.

Later they visited the United Nations and wound up the day at a state dinner given by Gov. Nelson A. Rockefeller.

At the dinner, attended by Mayor John V. Lindsay and Roman Catholic Archbishop Terence Cooke, Borman, the spacecraft commander, told 2,000 guests in the grand ballroom of the Waldorf Astoria Hotel: "We have pride, humility, gratitude and a commitment to this country and earth."

Thousands of New Yorkers, some standing 12 deep, lined the route from the tip of Lower Manhattan to the city hall Friday to give the astronauts one of the loudest welcomes since Charles A. Lindbergh was honored after his solo flight across the Atlantic in 1927.

Tons of confetti, ticker tapes and computer cards rained down from hundreds of offices in the financial district as the spacemen rode in an open convertible car in well below freezing temperatures.

The city changed the names of Broadway to Apollo way for the day.

After a city hall reception, at which they received gold medals, the spacemen attended a luncheon at the New York State Theatre in Lincoln Centre.

During the afternoon the astronauts visited the UN Security Council chamber where Secretary-General U Thant welcomed them as "the first true universalists."

Saturday Post Folds

NEW YORK (AP) — The Saturday Evening Post, in existence for 148 years, will cease publication with the Feb. 8 issue, it was announced Friday.

"Apparently there is just not the need for our product in today's scheme of living," Martin S. Ackerman, president of the Saturday Evening Post Co. said at a news conference.

He estimated the magazine's losses for 1968 at about $5,000,000.

Apollo Commander Explains Problems

HOUSTON (AP) — Three rocket engines must fire perfectly, one of them several times, for the moon-landing crew to return to earth safely, the Apollo 11 commander told reporters Friday.

Neil A. Armstrong, commander of the first United States space crew with a chance to land on the moon, said all the firing of rocket engines around the moon will have to be completed for all to come back."

"I recognize that no matter how good things get, there's always something that can malfunction," he said, when asked of the dangers of the flight.

Armstrong, a civilian, air force Col. Edwin E. Aldrin Jr. and air force Lt.-Col. Michael Collins were named to the Apollo 11 crew by the National Aeronautics and Space Administration Thursday. They held a lengthy news conference Friday.

Aldrin and Armstrong will make the descent to the lunar surface aboard the lunar module. Collins will stay aboard the command module in lunar orbit.

Aldrin said the astronauts will carry onto the surface equipment for three experiments. Two devices, a seismograph and a laser light beam reflector, will be left on the moon. A third device, a strip of foil which will measure the solar winds, will be left on the surface a brief time and brought back by the crew.

But Armstrong said, the most important thing to be learned on the first landing is how well man can work in the airless moon surface where gravity is one-sixth that of earth.

The crew will also bring back a number of samples of lunar dust and rock.

Reaction of the crew's wives varied.

Armstrong said his wife was "very happy" once she was assured he really wanted to go.

The Pontiac Challenge:
Find a car to match Pontiac, feature for feature, deal for deal!
You won't find another car in Pontiac's class with more standard power! The standard V8 is biggest in its class, with 350 cubic inches, 250 horsepower! And if that's not enough, choose one of several V8s with up to 390 horsepower! Want the economy of a six with power to spare? There's none bigger than Pontiac's 250-cubic-inch, 155-hp engine.
You won't find another car in Pontiac's class that offers more luxury, more style! Concealed windshield wipers enhance the long, sweeping hood; the rear deck is smooth, clean and tasteful. And just wait until you examine those lush interiors!
You won't find a lower priced two-door hardtop in Pontiac's class than the Strato-Chief Sport Coupe. You save more than $200 over Pontiac's lowest priced hardtop last year.
Parisienne Sport Coupe
You won't find another car with a wider front track than Pontiac! More car between the wheels provides better handling and control! The feeling of stability makes Pontiac driving a completely new and very enjoyable experience!
You won't find another car in Pontiac's class that matches Pontiac's all-around protection features! The Endura bumpable bumper up front, plus side-guard beams in the doors for side-impact resistance! And on most models, vinyl-filled body moldings down both sides for parking lot protection.
You won't find a better deal than you'll get on a Wide-Track Pontiac! And don't forget Pontiac's high resale value record! A better price at trade-in time means lower overall motoring costs! An important saving!

Party Boss Attacks the Press

PRAGUE (AP) — The Slovak Communist party boss, Gustav Husak, often criticized for being too friendly with Czechoslovakia's Soviet occupiers, celebrated his 56th birthday Friday night with a slashing attack on the country's press and "disrupting forces in our country."

It came while his public standing was at a particularly low ebb. Many feel Husak has been a prime mover in the party campaign to demote National Assembly President Joseph Smrkovsky, a liberal leader too popular for the Kremlin's liking.

Husak told applauding party officials in Dubnica, central Slovakia, that some members of the mass media are "putting the knife to the throat" of the Prague leadership.

In a televised speech Husak called for an "offensive against anti-party activity aimed at people who meet secretly in various corners . . . and then get these campaigns through the mass media into the public."

This referred to recent press attacks on Husak during the political crisis over Smrkovsky and public threats of strikes and demonstrations if the government does not enact reforms promised before the Soviet invasion last August.

Two Czech artists immediately complained to President Ludvik Svobida that Husak's remarks, were "one step away" from police interrogation. . . .

In a letter to Svobods, film director Jan Nemec and playwright Vaclav Havel said that "in a time when the highest state and political organs of our country are trying to find a way for peaceful and understandable solutions of the rising political questions, Dr. Husak is offending a wide strata, showing haughty intolerance, inflaming national passion and inventing untruthful constructions about workers of Czechoslovak television, radio and press."

Husak supported many of the reform policies launched last January when Alexander Dubcek supplanted Antonin Novtny as Czechoslovak party chief. But his popularity waned shortly after the invasion when he advocated a "realistic" policy of accommodation to Soviet power.

When public petitions poured in to the Prague leadership, demanding that Smrkovsky be retained as chairman of the new Federal Assembly, which replaced the old National Assembly Jan. 1, Husak labelled such campaigns "right wing" and "inflammatory." Radio broadcasts and newspapers retaliated, charging Husak is "a pro-Soviet extremist."

Last week the Czechoslovak party presidium, of which Husak is a member, recommended that Smrkovsky be demoted to deputy chairman of the Federal Assembly under Petr Colotka, a Slovak.

Jean Dixon's Horoscope

For Jan. 12th.,

Your birthday today: Practical application to the key to your activities during the coming year. Everything you touch may well turn into a dividend. The art of getting along with people outside your community becomes important to success. Today's natives diversify, and usually possess much energy for their pursuit.

ARIES (Mar. 21 — Apr. 19): You are tempted to overdue; take it easy. Loved ones are rooting for you whilst friends argue. Restrain your impatience; you will be glad you did when you hear the end of the story.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 — May 20): Partnership or marriage matters are responsive to fine nuances. What you say and do become extremely important. Your relationship may be worth more than control of any decision.

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): Bring your people out to help in the community. Changing activities back and forth isn't the answer. Meditate and rest. Opportunity tomorrow!

CANCER (June 21—July 22): Get out early, stay out and enjoy. Some half-forgotten promise may be abruptly filled. Accept invitations for fun.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22): This is a friendly, family sort of Sunday. Everybody gets out around him, and it's good to share with mate and younger people. Invite guests or find a lively party in the evening.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 — Sept. 22): In spite of the lighter-than-usual Sunday traffic, you tend to find the route hazardous or tangled. Allow enough time and enjoy a good talk with anybody going with you.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 — Oct. 22): Affection, love, respect are there for you (according to what you've been pursuing). Make the day enjoyable, memorable. Bring young people into the evening doings.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23—Nov. 21): Good news from distant places is likely. Offer or accept invitations freely. Get your favorite music going and share it with intimates.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): The urge is to rush to help a distressed friend before you have the whole picture. You overtire early, then find there is a lot more to do before you can quit.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 — Jan. 19): Those who love you understand and make allowances. Those who don't can only get wrong impressions. The evening becomes more peaceful and you can have something good for.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb. 18): Your ideas follow yesterday's pattern. Let them ride along until another line of activity beckons. Physical sports and hobbies are easiest to overdo. Relax early.

PISCES (Feb. 19 — Mar. 20): Spend the day exploring. Everybody you know introduces you to somebody new if you charm your way along the chain.

For Jan. 13th.,

Your birthday today: Dramatic episodes add interest to the coming year. Your urges toward radical self-expression run into conflict. There is opportunity for you to study, particularly the occult. Today's natives are noted for their philosophic turn of mind, scholarly and mystical pursuits.

ARIES (Mar. 21 — Apr. 19): The main problem this week will be keeping your information straight. Check all your facts before acting. Go right in the work this morning with gusto. Make plans tonight for the morrow.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 — May 20): If you fail to report enough details, your week-ends do not get the whole picture. Aside from this, you can receive recognition. Expect belated acknowledgment of your help.

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): Think out your position quickly, settle on one decision or the other and stick to it through the day, at least for argument purposes. Be definite about what you say.

CANCER (June 21—July 22): Now it's your sort of day again, take advantage of any openings. Keep your own counsel about your aims, and keep up and moving steadily.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22): This is the time to begin selling some ideas. Just be sure you are doing as good a job of listening as you are selling. Help is underfoot. Be ill at ease, most of it with few or no strings; there will be more.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 — Sept. 22): Clear ahead on balance today an odd break is coming; you need to spot it quickly. Preventive maintenance timely repairs, vigilance pays off, either at home or on the job.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23—Nov. 21): Every shortcut turns out to be the long way around. Everybody you care about disagrees. All this passes, with the help of the young in spirit, so hold on to your love of humor.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): Put on a bold front while actually playing it straight. Follow your own convictions without starting arguments about them. Assume you're using. This evening don't talk shop.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 — Jan. 19): You are dealing with astute people today, so think what they have to gain from your interests, new contats. Tonight make notes and review.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb. 18): Avoid new deals today, particularly where the finer points are hazy. You have favorable backing which is not visible at the moment. Joint affairs tend to prosper.

PISCES (Feb. 19 — Mar. 20): The day is full of gossip — don't buy it to confirm or deny; your reaction may be the purpose of the story. Put your talents front and centre on the job. Considerable progress is promised.

Bluenose Crew Lauded

HALIFAX (CP) — Don J. Oland, vice-president of the firm which owns the sleek schooner Bluenose II, was to fly to Bermuda today to congratulate her skipper and crew for bringing her safely through a perilous Atlantic storm.

The storm lashed the vessel last Wednesday when she was three days out of Halifax on a winter cruise to Bermuda with a charter party of six passengers.

Crew member Neil Robitaille, 22, of Yarmouth, N.S., was lost when washed overboard by a huge wave, but another, sailor, also swept overboard, was rescued.

Mr. Oland was taking with him equipment to repair the ship's steering gear, a jib to replace the sail torn to ribbons in the storm, and two liferafts to replace those washed overboard.

Mr. Oland, a member of the Halifax brewery firm of Oland and Son Ltd. which owns the Bluenose II, said Friday evening he estimated the vessel was some 184 miles north of Bermuda, and would arrive there tonight or Sunday morning.

She was out of range of radio signals for most of Friday so it was difficult to forecast her exact time of arrival.

Mr. Oland will sail with the vessel to Antigua where she is scheduled to pick up another charter party for a Caribbean cruise.

Tyendinaga Reserve

TYENDINAGA RESERVE — Robert Hill, who has been in the Belleville General Hospital for several months, underwent surgery last Thursday. He is making satisfactory progress.

Jerry Minaker of the York Road was admitted last Thursday to the Belleville General Hospital.

Mrs. Melvin Maracle was admitted to the Belleville General Hospital last week.

Ralph Marcele of Camp Borden spent the holidays with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Albert L. Maracle.

Mrs. Herman (Susan) Claus of the York Road is a patient in the Belleville General Hospital.

Saturday afternoon the Sunday School children of the Tyendinaga Parish, had a good time at their party in the community hall. Parents came along also, to help and to watch the fun. Superintendent is Arnold Brant.

First Western Country

Sweden to Recognize North Vietnam

STOCKHOLM (Reuters) — Sweden offered Friday to establish diplomatic relations with North Vietnam.

Although Sweden is the first Western country to offer Hanoi full recognition, a foreign ministry communique issued after a cabinet announcement said Sweden has maintained unofficial contact with the North Vietnamese for the last three years and observers said the move therefore has little practical significance.

In Washington, United States officials, while expressing concern at the move, said a decision on any diplomatic response would be left to the incoming Nixon administration.

Informed sources in the U.S. capital said President-elect Nixon might indicate U.S. displeasure at the Swedish government action by delaying the appointment of a new ambassador to Stockholm.

The U.S. state department issued a mildly-worded statement saying the Swedish action will not help the cause of peace in Southeast Asia.

A crisis blew up about a year ago in relations between the U.S. and Sweden over Vietnam, reaching a climax when Education Minister Olaf Palme—one of the Swedish cabinet's bitterest critics of American involvement in Vietnam—led a protest march of about 5,000 persons.

Another sore point with Washington is a Swedish policy of giving residence permits to American military deserters protesting the Vietnam war.

Formal recognition of North Vietnam has been a top priority objective of Swedish Foreign Minister Torsten Nilsson for some time.

A few weeks ago the 64-year-old former bricklayer told the Swedish legislature the movement was imminent but said Sweden did not wish to disturb the atmosphere of the Vietnam peace talks in Paris.

In Oslo, the Norwegian foreign ministry announced the government will soon discuss the question of establishing diplomatic relations between Norway and North Vietnam.

A foreign ministry official said later the government probably will meet early next week to discuss the situation arising after the Swedish decision.

Central Bankers Tackle World Financial Problems

BASEL, Switzerland (Reuters) — Western central bankers today tackled the problem of how to prevent financial chaos through international currency speculation.

Efforts so far to devise a viable system to neutralize speculation capable of driving a currency to the brink of devaluation have met with little success.

The bankers—from Canada, Western Europe, the United States and Japan—at a weekend meeting here will consider what limits should be set to any plan and who should benefit under it, continental central banking sources said.

Pope Sounds Cautious Note

Paul sounded a cautious note of optimism on world peace today, saying he saw a glimmer of hope for the Middle East plus hopes for the end of the Vietnam and Nigerian wars through negotiations.

The pontiff spoke in his annual meeting to exchange New Year greetings with members of the diplomatic corps accredited to the Vatican.

In contrast to his Christmas speech to the world, the Pope's words reflected a strong tone of optimism.

Italians Face Major Gas Strike

ROME (Reuters) — Rome returned to normal today after a chaotic 24-hour transport strike —but Italian motorists immediately faced the prospect of a gas strike.

A strike by city bus and street car drivers which ended at midnight Friday night brought most of Rome's 700,000 cars on to the streets Friday, causing giant traffic snarls.

Thousands cycled or walked to work; although the strike did not bring the almost total traffic paralysis caused by a similar stoppage two days before Christmas at the height of the shopping spree.

The transport companies said the drivers' union wants pay raises totalling 2,400,000,000 lire (about 13,800,000,000), a sum that they said would drive them to bankruptcy.

Meanwhile, gas pump attendants throughout Italy plan to go indefinite strike Monday to press demands for higher pay and better working conditions.

The attendants warned they would sell gas only to ambulances, public buses, fire engines and doctors.

The strikes are the latest disorders that have spread through Italy during the last few months. They follow demonstrations by lawyers and magistrates in Rome and Milan against the legal system, a series of walkouts by factory workers, and student unrest.

Lawyers and magistrates in Anacona and Bologna announced plans for protest demonstrations, similar to colleagues in Rome and Milan.

The municipal council of Bologna, a Communist stronghold, said its members would boycott the ceremonial inauguration of the new legal year in the city Sunday to draw attention to "the serious crisis of justice."

In Anacona, lawyers decided to boycott an inaugural ceremony Monday.

The demonstrations are in protest against antiquated laws, long trials, overwork and poor court facilities.

Brokers Not Sure Rally Will Last

Canadian Press Staff Writer

An unexpected plunge on Wall Street set off the sharpest three-day slump for several years on Canadian stock markets this week, although a re every picked up Thursday and Friday.

The Toronto industrial index, the main indicator of quality stocks, fell 4.41 to 186.27 over the week, while the composite index on the Montreal and Canadian exchanges dropped 4.63 to 183.08.

The late recovery wiped out about 30 per cent of the original losses, but brokers were far from sure how long the rally will last.

Prices were well below their best when Canadian markets closed Friday, and the revival had already petered out in New York.

The weakest groups were western oils, banks, food processors, retailers, chemicals, steels, oil refiners and trust and loan stocks. Almost every major industrial group was slightly lower.

Among declines, Dome Pete fell 6 to 85, Canadian Tire 3¼ to 171, Asamera 3¼ to 23, Seaway Multi-Corp. 2¾ to 33¼, Revenue Properties 1¾ to 17¼ and Rio Algom 1¼ to 30¾.

Speculative stocks in the junior industrial and real estate group, the star performers of 1968, took a beating with the rest of the market.

The Toronto index of seven real estate stocks fell about five per cent, and J. H. Crang and Co's "go-go stock" index of 79 junior industrials lost about three per cent.

Both indexes went through the market's plunge and recovery swing, touching their lowest point Wednesday.

No-one predicted the sudden slide this week, and there were few constructive explanations available when New York started drifting sharply downwards.

Trudeau Now Convinced Commonwealth Valuable

Cunard Liner On Reef

LONDON (AP) — The British liner Carmania ran aground on San Salvador Island in the Bahamas Sunday night with about 450 passengers aboard, the Cunard Line announced today.

The 22,600-ton ship was on a cruise from Port Everglades, Fla., and most of the passengers were Americans, a spokesman said.

There were no reports of casualties or damage, the spokesman added, and the ship did not appear to be in danger.

At least one tug was speeding from Bermuda to help pull the liner free. A skindiver examined the underside of the vessel and reported she was resting on coral and no holes had been punched in the steel hull.

The Carmania left Port Everglades Saturday on a 12-day Caribbean cruise, her first of the year, and crunched onto the coral sands at 10:40 p.m. Sunday.

Sharp Meets Envoys

LONDON (CP) — External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp today opened a two-day review of Canadian policy towards Europe, including the Soviet Union and East European Communist states.

Sharp held the discussions with 21 Canadian ambassadors and other heads of missions who were brought to London from their posts especially for the meeting.

All turned up except Jean Morin, ambassador to Portugal, who became ill in Lisbon during the weekend.

The ambassadors met with Prime Minister Trudeau at a Sunday night reception at the home of High Commissioner Charles Ritchie. An official said that at the moment there are no other plans for a meeting between the ambassadors and Trudeau.

Trudeau is particularly concerned about Canada's relations with France. While he is enjoying his stay in London, the Canadian leader particularly yearns for an invitation to Paris to confer with President de Gaulle.

Trudeau expressed to a reporter during the weekend his regret that such an invitation hasn't come forward.

Letter Carriers Plan Strike If Pact Broken

MONTREAL (CP) — A delegation representing the 12,000-member Letter Carriers' Union of Canada decided Sunday to notify the federal treasury board and the postal department of intended strike action if their labor contract is "continuously broken."

The delegation, comprised of 131 delegates of 86 union locals from Halifax to Vancouver, met to discuss action against the five-day mail delivery week to take effect Jan. 27.

A resolution passed condemned the proposal and accused the postal department of using the elimination of Saturday deliveries as a "smoke-screen" to arbitrarily institute job changes.

They described the single mail process—straight-through delivery with a half-hour lunch break—as detrimental to the health and welfare of the letter carriers and to the general public.

The delegation took no official action on a proposed merger of the Letter Carriers' union with the 13,000-member Canadian Union of Postal Workers.

Czech Printers Censor Material

PRAGUE (AP) — The ability of union printers to force changes in material contained in a Communist party organ is a new development in this Soviet-occupied country, showing that workers are flexing their political muscles in defence of reform.

Printing workers did not threaten when they saw some material they didn't like in Tribuna, the weekly of the Czech branch of the party. They simply refused to print it and at their union congress that ended Sunday, adopted a resolution saying members "have a duty" to reject material at odds with the post-January reforms instituted under party chief Alexander Dubcek.

PM Converted Into Supporter

LONDON (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau is reported today to have made up his mind that Canada will remain in the Commonwealth.

An informant said that after talking with a number of leaders, Trudeau is impressed with the benefits Canada can obtain from Commonwealth membership, despite the association's weakness as a decision-making body.

The informant said that the Canadian leader will say as much when he speaks at the Commonwealth conference during the day.

It is possible that one day something better may be devised, but until that day comes, Canada will stick with the 28-country group, the informant added.

Trudeau is reported to be particularly impressed with Singapore's Prime Minister Lee Kuan Yew and Tanzania's President Julius Nyerere.

Trudeau feels that Lee's power lies in his disciplined rejection of old and worn cliches and his great grasp of history. The two held a number of talks during various functions and the Canadian leader found Lee "very stimulating."

Nyerere impressed Trudeau with his realism and clarity of mind and his practical appraisal of situations. Trudeau also found President Kenneth Kaunda of Zambia fascinating and concluded that Kaunda's appeal came from his great feeling of emotion and passion.

Trudeau and Prime Minister Wilson have been reported as having reacted coolly to each other but the informant said this wasn't correct. Trudeau was "very impressed" with the quality of Wilson's mind.

Trudeau took a cautious approach in his talks with Wilson because he found that Wilson was a tough debater and "very clever" in putting over his political views.

Generally, Trudeau sized up the Commonwealth meeting as valuable. He has remarked that Canadians tend to speak in the past of the fathers of confederation and the fathers of American republicanism. Canadians tend to forget that some of the fathers of new countries are currently attending the Commonwealth conference.

Africans Boycott Talks

LONDON (AP) — African countries today boycotted high-level Commonwealth talks called to tackle the politically explosive problem of migration between the multi-racial association of 28 states.

The move by the African members of the Commonwealth, officials who took part said, was based on the argument that the immigration difficulties which have arisen are primarily the concern of Britain.

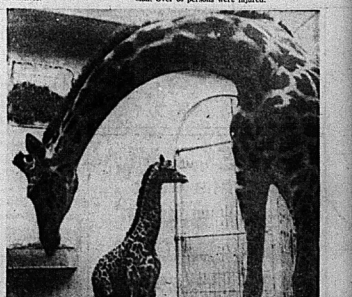
Mainly Asian and West Indies delegates attended what was to have been 17-nation talks on migration matters on the sidelines of the Commonwealth conference. British and Canadian representatives also were said to have been present.

The ramp meeting had before it two general propositions:

—A Pakistan scheme for the formulation of an immigrants' charter.

—A British proposal for a continuing Commonwealth study of the problels created by migration within the Commonwealth.

However, the chief purpose of the 17-nation talks appeared to be largely lost following the boycott by the key African countries.



University Classes Suspended

MONCTON, N.B. (CP) — Officials at the University of Moncton are to meet today to decide what action the university will take following a weekend occupation of a key campus building by 100 students. All classes at the university have been suspended indefinitely.

The students took over the university's science and administrative building Saturday and were still there early today.

Real Berube, public relations director at the French-language university, said officials were not at all clear why the building had been occupied . . . but we are told it concerns our finances."

He said there was no violence involved in the takeover. Students had already advised the security officer on duty they would not leave the building.

Viet Cong Blows Up Fifteen Copters

SAIGON (AP) — The Viet Cong blasted their way into the biggest U.S. airfield in the Mekong Delta early today and blew up 15 helicopters, worth an estimated $5,000,000 before they were repelled by base defenders.

Another six helicopters were reported damaged in a mortar barrage at the headquarters of the U.S. 9th Inagry Division 40 miles away. One officer called the attacks an "coming beginning" of the long-awaited enemy offensive in the 14,350-square mile delta south of Saigon.

The Viet Cong attack on Can Tho, 80 miles south of the Capital, was the first major ground probe against an airfield in several weeks. It hit the headquarters of the U.S. Army's 164th Aviation Group, the nerve centre for military operations in the Mekong Delta.

Enemy sappers broke through the airfield's defences under cover of a heavy mortar, rocket and machine-gun barrage that pinned down the Americans while the Viet Cong attached explosives to the helicopters. A barracks area west of the airfield was attacked simultaneously.

Field reports said five cargo and troop-carrying Chinooks and 10 smaller helicopter gunships were destroyed or damaged. U.S. casualties were eight killed and 10 wounded.

A spokesman said the American fire killed four Viet Cong.

Forty miles north of Can Tho, Viet Cong gunners slammed about 10 mortar rounds into the 9th Division headquarters at Dong Tam. Field reports said there were no casualties but six helicopters were damaged, including the command chopper of Maj.-Gen. Julian Ewell, the division commander.

Ten helicopters were damaged at Dong Tam in a similar shelling three days ago.

North Vietnam Rejects Compromise

PARIS (Reuters) — North Vietnam turned down what United States officials called an important concession in an American attempt Sunday to get the Vietnam peace talks under way.

The concession, under which North Vietnam and the National Liberation Front, political arm of the Viet Cong, would speak first and choose the order of their speakers, was part of a "package deal" which would also have the conference table divided by a thin strip of baize, the officials said.

The package, offered by deputy chief U.S. negotiator Cyrus R. Vance during a private meeting with Hanoi representatives, was turned down by Col. Ha Van Lau, deputy chief North Vietnamese negotiator, they said.

Teachers Personally Liable When Strapping Youngsters

Teachers in the separate schools of Hastings and Prince Edward counties and southern Nipissing district have been notified to give "close attention" to the minister of education's recommendation on restraint in the use of the strap.

"Strapping in the schools is contrary to popular opinion and teachers were told that each is personally liable for any unfortunate public relations incident through its use," said separate school board superintendent, F. B. Aliore.

In a memorandum sent to regional directors and superintendents, principals and school board secretaries Dec. 13, G. L. Duffin, assistant deputy minister of education said, "It is considered that the use of corporal punishment in any form is not appropriate in the schools of Ontario and it is recommended that principals and teachers refrain from its use."

Mr. Duffin stated that the regulation calling for pupils to submit to such disciplines as would be exercised by a kind, firm and judicious parent" should be interpreted as providing "an atmosphere of respect and trust between students and teachers with the cultivation of individual responsibility."

Because the memorandum was sent to every principal in the system, Hastings County Board of Education officials have sent no directives to the teachers of the county.

It is believed further action on the matter if any will have the attention of the minister of education Eric Runacres when he takes over his position Feb. 1.

North Marysburg Elections

Unlocked Ballot Box Criticized

PICTON (Staff)— A charge that North Marysburgh elections were conducted illegally under section 92 of the municipal act was discussed Friday at a council meeting of that township.

William F. Calver a resident of North Marysburgh made the charge a few weeks ago and claimed that the ballot box at the polling station where he voted was not locked and sealed. After making an official complaint of this fact to township clerk George Bolen and deputy returning officer Herbert Creasy, Mr. Calver wrote a letter to the Ontario Municipal Board when he received what he termed "curt answers" from these officials.

However, a return letter from minister of municipal affairs Darcy McKeough stated that although the OMB could not interfere a letter would go out to clerk Boles drawing attention to the act.

At Friday's council meeting Mr. Calver, who was in the gallery, was asked by Reeve Harold Harrison to make any comments he wished after the OMB correspondence was read. At that time Mr. Calver reiterated his charges.

Clerk Boles then accused Mr. Calver of questioning the honesty of election officials.

"This is a most contemptuous way all of us are friends and there is no crookedness here," the clerk said.

After the discourse began to get a little out of hand Reeve Harrison interrupted and settled the matter.

"The municipal act is there for a purpose and it should be complied with." the reeve said.

Mr. Calver said he was questioning no one's integrity adding that he only implied corruption in the township. He was thanked for bringing the matter to the attention of council.

Ski Run Will Be Developed

TWEED — Near the Lodgerooms Corners, the initial development of a ski hill, about four miles west of Tweed Village has been brought to life, as it were by one of the many sibling enthusiasts and instructor, Grant Elliott.

He anticipates having one trail cleared away and ready for use by this coming weekend.

The entire procedure is an experiment, and for the time being, he has no plans to put a tow-rope or other equipment in use, although he is hopeful to get a parking area cleared and a small building erected so that skiers may get warmed.

He also hopel to have the area packed and a good trail developed, shortly, so that persons who attend the coming Tweed Winter Carnival may bring their skiing equipment and add to the carnival weekend activities.

Mr. Elliott feels that the area could be developed for family skiing and that snowmobile trails and an outdoor rink could be included in this scene.

Skaters Successful In Tests

TWEED — Eight members of the Tweed Kiwanis Skating Club were successful in passing the Dutch Waltz, one of the preliminary dance tests.

The tests were held Jan. 5 in the ice arena at Trenton where official judges of the Canadian Figure Skating Association tested the skill of skaters from both Tweed and Trenton. The Tweed skaters were: Deidre Baldwin, Dianne Beach, Mary Beech, Ann Foster, Angela Goodfellow, Karen Hivers, Nicole Goodfellow and Nancy Goodfellow. This group and other candidates are scheduled to try further dance tests in Feb.

Mrs. Gail Brown, president, Mrs. Beth Baldwin, executive and George Stroempl, test chairman of the club accompanied the skaters.

A reception was held following the tests where experiences were exchanged with the executives of Trenton Club.

CFB Trenton Sends Helicopter to Rescue

TRENTON — A Labrador helicopter was dispatched late this morning on a mercy flight to the Manitoulin area in attempt to save the life of a trapper who lies unconscious in his isolated cabin. Manitowki is 50 miles north of Mallorytown.

Pete Chausse, 45, had been seriously ill since yesterday in his cabin, at Lake Wapus, 65 miles north of Manitowki.

The search and rescue unit at CFB Trenton this morning received a call from Quebec Provincial Police asking for aid in transporting the sick man to a hospital in Maniwaki.

Police tried to take the man to safety by snowmobile, but Mr. Chausse was too weak to make the journey.

Capt. J. Gilbert of 424 Squadron said the mercy helicopter was dispatched at 11 o'clock this morning, and is expected to reach its destination by 1.15 this afternoon.

A doctor, Capt. A. D. Heron, a nurse, Lieut. Shirley Begin went on the flight.

Police are unable to state the nature of the man's illness, but say that he is currently unconscious, and has to be taken to hospital immediately.

Reeve Holds Banquet For Township Staff

AMELIASBURG — "The prestigious place township borough Township holds in the province and county is due to the hard and conscientious work of staff employees and appointed and elected representatives," stated Reeve George Cunningham here on Saturday night.

He added any township is only as good as you people who worked for it.

The occasion was a dinner followed by the showing of a colour movie hosted by the Reeve and his wife for the staff employees, members of council, boards and committees in the village hall.

The five Cunningham children helped their mother and father to serve the food to the guests.

Mr. Cunningham said that the family decided it was the only way for them to express genuine appreciation to those who developed it.

The invitational affair was attended by nearly 70 persons.

Snowmobile Club Formed

PICTON (Staff) — About 20 interested people showed up at Prince Edward Yacht Club over the weekend to participate in the formation of the first snowmobile club.

Elected president of the new organization was Terry Whatam and Howard Mallett was elected secretary treasurer.

Dues were set at $5 annually.

Officials of the new club were disappointed that so few people came out. According to the licence bureau 100 snowmobiles have been registered in the township to date and it is thought that there are at least 300 to 400 snowmobiles in the county.

Perfect Hand Scored

After 30 years of eribbage, a Belleville man has finally obtained a 29 point perfect eribbage hand.

This weekend M. R. Bone, 53, of 181 Mary Street, played eribbage with his son Robert, 18, and managed to obtain the unusual hand.

Mr. Bone held three fives and the jack of hearts in his hand. The fourth five in the deck was turned up, enabling him to score the 29 points.

Stricken with a heart attack at his home, 7 West Street, on Saturday night, Alexander "Sandy" Smith died suddenly.

Mr. Smith was born in Belleville, 54 years ago a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Harry Jackson Smith and had resided in Belleville practically all of his life.

He enlisted during World War Two at Toronto in 1941 and served in France and Italy and was discharged in Toronto in 1945. Mr. Smith was a member of the Royal Canadian Legion, Branch No. 99 in this city.

Mr. Smith was an employee of the Rosebush Fuels for some years.

He was an adherent of Christ Church.

Surviving are one son, Donald Smith of Woodstock, one brother, Harry A. Smith and one sister, Mrs. George (Marg) Butcher, both of Belleville.

Also surviving are four grandchildren. His wife, the former Meda Mullens, died some years ago.

Mr. Smith is resting at the John R. Bush Funeral Home. Private service will be held in the Funeral Home on Wednesday.

Interment will be in Belleville cemetery with Canon R. B. Wright officiating.

SCERRI — In loving memory of a dear daughter and sister who passed away accidentally Jan. 12, 1963. Deep in the heart lies a picture, A loving heart that knew no guile, Dearly loved and sadly missed, Dear Joy is now some other bright star. Dear God took her home, it was His will, But in our hearts she liveth still. No thought of self, but of the other, A smile for all she met, Our dear daughter. —Remembered by mother and father, sister Mary and brother Frank.

SCERRI — In loving memory of a dear daughter Josephine who passed away accidentally Jan. 12, 1963. Loving and kind in all her ways, Upright and just in all her days. Sincere and true in her heart and mind, Beautiful memories she left behind. —Always remembered, Hilda.

SCERRI — In loving memory of a dear friend Lillian Victoria, who passed away accidentally January 12, 1967. Dear friend time heals all sorrow, And helps us to forget, But memory keeps you lovely proved, And that we'll never let. Each time we see her picture, Or speak her name we say, "Don't cry, I'm only sleeping, We will meet again someday." We never said goodbye to her, But left her sleeping there, And forever sacred and sweet shall be To a friend we loved so well. —Lovingly remembered by Donna Brenda, Pauline and Cheryl.

More Jobs Needed

New Student Employment Plan Proposed by Quinte Teacher

Thanks to the efforts of a Belleville school guidance department head, Quinte district students may have a better chance at summer employment this year than in 1968.

Concerned with the lack of summer employment opportunities for secondary school students, R. E. Henderson, guidance teacher at Moira Secondary School, has decided to do something about "this serious problem facing the secondary schools."

His proposal: "A youth summer project" to involve all the community in the creating and finding jobs.

The matter will be brought to the attention of Chamber of Commerce directors at their meeting Thursday. The Belleville YMCA, which ran a casual labor project last year for students, and Mrs. Robin Jeffery, instructor of the Cafe Moira project, will also be asked for assistance.

"I can see the summer employment picture will be darker than ever this year," said Mr. Henderson, in outlining his project.

"Some might think this is none of my business," the teacher said. "But anything affecting the welfare of our students to the extent lack of jobs does is very much a teacher's business."

Mr. Henderson has called for a committee composed of representative of: business and industry in the community. Specifically, he would like to see represented on the committee members of the Chamber of Commerce, City Council, the retail merchants associations, secondary schools, Loyalist College, the YMCA and Canada Manpower.

Mr. Henderson lists four suggestions to brighten the bleak employment picture.

He calls for a publicity campaign among businessmen and industrialists, urging them to consider high school students as summer replacements for vacationing employees.

He suggests that local firms offer summer job opportunities to students instead of giving cash awards to academically high ranking students at the annual graduation exercises.

At present, cash awards ranging from $10 to $100 are made by local businesses to superior students in the four city high schools each year.

In outlining his "bursary job" scheme, Mr. Henderson suggests that since the same employers would be getting labor in return for their outlay, they might consider upping their annual contribution to students.

The guidance teacher would also like to see a clearing house for student employment operated in conjunction with Canada Manpower, co - ordinating efforts such as that of the YMCA in 1968 with those of the government and other private agencies.

Finally, Mr. Henderson would like to see jobs created for students through such special projects as Cafe Moira, the open-air refreshment stand and cafe operated by students on Front St. last summer.

Belleville's Snow Clearance Program Keeps Snow at Reasonable Level

Winter may be working magic — changing drab landscapes to glistening wonderlands — but public works crews would settle for a breathing spell any day.

At the moment that's what they're getting in Belleville. And the city's works department is taking full advantage of it.

It's now a good two weeks since the Belleville area was snowed to a virtual standstill in the worst winter blowout of the season. That was around the Christmas-New Year period.

Today, the snow clearance program is still in full swing.

A fleet of rented dump trucks move in almost steady procession through city streets, laden with the residue of the cleanup campaign.

Purpose of the program is two-fold: (1) To widen streets narrowed by the heavy fall-out and subsequent snowplowing and (2) To keep snow levels at reasonable levels in the event of future fallout.

Winter isn't over yet — there's almost another eight weeks for the weather to get in its licks.

But, saving another big blow in coming days, the present cleanup drive might have attained its objectives in a week, says a works department spokesman.

Keeping the fallout level under control also guards against another problem which could be serious when winter ends: Spring runoff.

The less snow the less sloppy will be the first days of spring when the long-awaited thaw sets in.

The snow is being dumped on open land between the mouth of the Moira River and Zwick's Island.

The constant trek of trucks daily adds scores of tons to the growing mountains of street deposits. So much so, a bulldozer is in constant operation — packing the pileup into solid formations, making room for the constant supply streaming in from the streets.

Come spring and the big buildup should quietly disappear into the nearby Bay of Quinte without fear of flooding.

The threat of floods also is being closely watched in the city. The Moira River has a reputation for causing inconveniences along its buildup near banks in Belleville.

Last year, ice blockage necessitated a lengthy — and costly — removal operation after the river rose above its banks in downtown Belleville.

As yet, no menace is seen along the waterway, says local emergency measures organization director Angus Duffy.

Ice at the CPR bridge near the river mouth pushed water levels two feet higher several weeks ago. But it was still about two feet below the flood mark. A similar situation north of the city caused minor flooding at Plainfield — the first in years, says Mr. Duffy.

The threats to be watched are a combination of sudden thaw and rain—unlikely events at this time of year.

Water levels are high but there is no precipitate situation if the runoff is gradual as winter ends.

"Right now there's no danger if it stays cold," says Mr. Duffy. "And if it (the snow buildup) goes down gradually we have no problems."

The Big Blow !

Snow-blower goes into action along Dufferin Avenue today, part of continuing cleanup campaign of city streets. Works department — not waiting for spring but doing it now — are widening thoroughfares, guarding against big snow buildup in the event of future storms.

They're Moving Mountains

Winter street-cleaning causes big buildup elsewhere in Belleville. Bulldozer must move mountains of snow on open land near Zwick's Island to make way for steady stream of trucks dumping residue of cleanup campaign.

Trenton Manufacturer Plans Major Addition to Plant

TRENTON — An addition is to be built to the Morton Parker plant here in Trenton, which will provide 10 new jobs, initially, and an additional 13 jobs over a five year period.

An Ontario Development Corporation loan totalling $185,000 will aid in financing the construction of the 7,900 square foot addition.

Owner of the plant, Ted Parker, expects to sign a contract with a builder in 10 days, with construction to start about March 15.

It is hoped that the addition will be ready for occupancy by May. The expansion program allows the firm to step up production. In previous years, orders were turned down because production was not at a high enough level to keep up with the demand.

The addition will give the firm a 75 per cent larger manufacturing area, and will boost the total number of employees to 100.

The company manufactures silver plated holloware, which is sold to restaurants, department stores and jewellery retailers across Canada.

Mr. Dress Up Appears At Loyalist on Weekend

Quinte-area youngsters next weekend have the chance to get directly involved in one of their favorite TV shows — Mister Dress Up.

Mr. Dress Up himself — in real life versatile artist Ernie Coombs — is coming to Belleville.

The CBC show is now nearing the end of a road tour and will play to young audiences at Loyalist College Saturday and Sunday.

The production here results from a happy coincidence. Stu Gilchrist, director of Loyalist's communication arts program, was the original producer of the show and its predecessor, Butternut Square, also a Coombs vehicle.

Coombs is a combination of talents — an actor who sings, mimes, draws, a storyteller who draws his accents from the child's world of fantasy and reality.

One key to the show's continued success is the manner in which it involves its young audiences.

As Mister Dressup, Coombs dips into a trunk and comes up with costumes which inspire character animation.

The show plays Loyalist Saturday at 10.30 a.m. and 2 p.m. and Sunday at 2 p.m.

Rhodesian Stalemate

The Commonwealth's debate on the Rhodesian question has ended in a stalemate, and it really is not surprising.

What can the Commonwealth do about the issue? At present, nothing. The rebel white government of Ian Smith is still firmly entrenched in Salisbury, and remembering what happened when the blacks got their independence in the former Belgian Congo in 1960, who can blame them?

Sanctions thus far have failed to topple the Smith government. The situation could receive itself in revolution, but the blacks are hardly ready for, or capable of that in face of a strong Rhodesian defence force. There is always the possibility of outside interference, but that too is unlikely.

Canada's attitude in all this is puzzling. In one breath Prime Minister Trudeau supports the concept of NIBMAR (No independence before majority rule), and in the next warns Commonwealth leaders against making a fetish of majority rule. In this context he referred to the fact that in Canada many French-Canadians, as well as Indians and Eskimos still feel they are discriminated against. He urged the leaders to listen to the complaints of minority groups. Mr. Trudeau made more sense when he said that if NIBMAR was not practical, "we owe it to ourselves and to the Rhodesians to look for something that does work."

The key idea here is that Rhodesia must be allowed to continue as a functioning entity. As matters stand only a white government can guarantee this. Any other solution, ray the immediate handing over of responsibility to the Africans, could result in chaos.

There is no denying though that NIBMAR must remain the ultimate goal. A quick political settlement however could be catastrophic, and in any event the Smith government is unlikely to accept any such settlement imposed from outside.

The alternative is to permit the situation to work itself out. This way the Africans, in time, should be in a better position to accept responsibility for governing the country. Precipitate action meanwhile should be avoided. The problem is far too complex to admit of any clear-cut, overnight solution.

Old Churches

Amelisburg Reeve George Cunningham raises a legitimate complaint when he says he feels a line should be drawn with respect to the disposal of churches.

Township Council turned down a proposal to change the status of the Salem church for residential occupancy. Two Toronto women had expressed interest in buying the property as a summer home. In any event, under the zoning by-law, one acre of land is required for a residence in areas designated agricultural.

Old school buildings are one thing, as a recent auction sale that disposed of many of them as summer homes has proved, but I agree with Mr. Cunningham when he says church buildings should be demolished once they are closed.

The reeve spoke of churches sold and turned into chicken coops and of manure sticking out of windows. Such a prospect is not an attractive one. Houses of worship deserve respect, even when no longer used. Better that they be torn down than be desecrated in this fashion.

Flug Bug

Belleville thus far seems to be getting off relatively lightly with the flu—the Hong Kong type or otherwise.

Overall there have been scattered reports of the bug laying citizens low, and unfortunately there have been some deaths.

Health department officials in Montreal revealed last week that 17 people died of flu or flu-caused pneumonia during the week ending January 4. However they expect the outbreak will reach its peak by mid-January or the beginning of February.

Meanwhile the possibility of an outbreak locally cannot be discounted. In Brockville, hospital authorities are taking preventive measures by restricting visitors to the city's two hospitals until further notice. General hospital administrator Jack Wilson, himself ill with flu, made the announcement from his sick bed. Several staff members at both hospitals are reported ill.

'Treat French With Respect,' He Said

Sir John A's Letters Envisaged Rise of Quebec

By FRASER MacDOUGALL

OTTAWA (CP) — Sir John A. Macdonald wrote to a Montreal friend in 1857 that the trouble with English-speaking people in Quebec was that they sought ascendancy over French-Canadians.

"... the truth is you British Canadians can never forget that you were once supreme, that Jean-Baptiste was your hewer of wood and drawer of water," he wrote to Brown Chamberlin, a Montreal barrister who was publisher of the Montreal Gazette from 1853 to 1867 when he was elected to the Commons. In 1870, Chamberlin was appointed Queen's Printer.

The letter appears in a new book prepared by the Public Archives of Canada and published by the Queen's Printer, Entitled Letters of Sir John A. Macdonald 1836-1857, it sells at $10 a copy.

The book marks the beginning of an ambitious project undertaken by the Public Archives—publication of a series of books on The Papers of the Prime Ministers.

The introduction to this first volume remarks that the Public Archives has almost 3,000,000 pages of correspondence of Canadian prime ministers. More letters and papers are in other public or private collections.

The long-range plan calls for publication of the correspondence of every prime minister, a project that will call for possibly 100 volumes. The target is at least one volume a year.

The first volume contains letters written by Sir John A. between 1836 and 1857. Subsequent volumes will cover later periods in the life of the country's first prime minister and his successors.

Of the letters Sir John A. wrote in the 1836-57 period, slightly more than 1,400 survive, the book notes. About half are printed in full.

A reader might wonder what Sir John A. might think about all this. He is reported to have once advised a friend: "Never write a letter if you can help it."

An occasional letter admonishes the recipient to destroy it. Students of the man and his period can be grateful that the advice went unheeded.

His comments in the letter to Chamberlin about English-speaking people in Quebec is about the only one that deals with the B and B problem.

He tells Chamberlin:

"... You struggle like the Protestant Irish in Ireland, like the Norman invaders in England, not for equality, but for ascendancy. The difference between you and those interesting and amiable people being that you have not the honesty to admit it. You can't and won't accept the principle that the majority must govern."

French-speaking people made up roughly two-thirds of Lower Canada, or Quebec's, population. The English had nearly one-third of the province's representation in the parliament of the old province of Canada, which took in the present Ontario and Quebec.

In 1857 half the government officers and fully half the judges were English-speaking.

"It would surprise you to go over the names of officials . . . and reckon the ascendancy you yet hold of official positions."

As to the future, "no man in his senses, without sacrificing the status of his race or lineage, he must respect their nationality. Treat them as a nation and they will act as a free people generally do—generously. Call them a faction, and they become factious."

"Pull yourself together, buster — your aim is lousy!"

Burden of Death Duties

Windsor Star

Comparatively few persons in Canada are aware of the blow struck by estate and succession duties and the general taxation levied at death.

Yet, many are hurt indirectly by the result of these taxes.

So-called personal or family businesses are forced to sell to raise the cash to meet the taxes. That means a forced sale. And, there are always big money groups ready to swallow up the smaller ones.

Also, as United States money is available, some Canadian firms have to sell to American investors. This means the elimination of a Canadian-owned company and its replacement by outside capital.

In a nation supposedly trying to encourage Canadians to own and operate Canadian businesses, the death tax knock this idea into a cocked hat. No matter how vehemently officials at Ottawa or Toronto may deny the assertion, the facts prove it to be true.

Some families sell before the death occurs. This gives them cash to meet the demand of the tax gatherers.

Other families try to weather the storm and find they would have to borrow so much, the debt would be intolerable trying to clear the debt. Yet, without the weight of taxation, they could carry on easily, continue to give employment and expand and offer more jobs.

The amount raised by the duties is not so much in the total revenue. But, it is sufficient to kill the bell for many a business.

Better Than Average in 'Gab' Stakes

St. Catharines Standard

Canadians have always been pretty gabby people as far as the telephone is concerned and, sure enough, in 1968 we made more telephone calls per capita than any other country.

And St. Catharines people are even worse. We made 754 telephone calls per person, which was 86 above the national average.

Many a parent of teen-age girls would probably swear that each of them personally accounted for probably three times the national average.

The Crisis on the Farm

Peterborough Examiner

The report of the Ontario committee on farm income is more likely to spread discouragement among struggling farmers than bring them much semblance of hope.

The report is honest to a point of ruthlessness in indicating the need for a thorough shake-up in the farming industry that would separate the professionals from the incompetents.

The committee may, in fact, have risen just a little too high above the soil in its seat. Its suggestion that a commission be established to control land-use planning to counteract chaotic and indiscriminate development by municipalities, will, for example, cause heavy breathing in many a council chamber—especially where regional government is being resisted.

The farm machinery industry will be far from happy with the committee's proposal that a crown agency become the middle man for all sales and will be positively livid at the suggestion that foreign prices be examined to see if there is advantage in importing farm equipment.

As for the farmer, it is difficult to predict what reaction will be generated by the recommended amalgamation of all farm organizations into a single body but our guess is that it will require something of the stature of a Vatican Council to accomplish it. The conservative loyalties of the farmer will not easily be diverted by the authoritarian type of efficiency experts, especially when they coldly recommend the elimination of wasteful subsidies and insist that farms be made available eventually only to agricultural technologists.

But the fact remains that about 30,000 farm families in Ontario are living in serious poverty and unless they and the entire farming economy is geared for a revolutionary adjustment to progress then dissension and despondency will continue to fester.

The report raises many practical considerations—a comprehensive food production and marketing system, a central warehousing system for farm machinery spare parts, emphasis in rural schools on farm education, establishment of a federal - provincial farm credit bank — in addition to those of a more disputatious nature.

Generally however the report gives more consideration to the farming economy than it does to overcoming the deteriorating condition of the farmer himself and his gradual displacement. The areas of decay in the farming system have been neglected for too long. It will take a brave government to arrest the situation on the stringent lines recommended by the report—even though the need is so obvious.

U Thant Holds Talks

UN Making Heavy Weather Over Middle East Crisis

By STEPHEN SCOTT

UNITED NATIONS (CP)— Where does the United Nations go from here in the Middle East question?

The question seems to loom large in the mind of Secretary-General U Thant.

He has recently talked to the ambassadors of Lebanon, France and the Soviet Union, presumably on the Middle East crisis.

He sent some documents to Gunnar Jarring, Swedish ambassador who is about to start his second year as UN Middle East envoy whose job is to assist the Israelis and Arabs reach a political settlement.

The document were sent last week with Ralph Bunche, a UN under-secretary with vast experience in the Middle East, when he went to Norway to attend the funeral of former UN secretary-general Trygve Lie. UN spokesmen have declined to say what is in the documents.

Norwegian Gen. Odd Bull, head of the UN observer corps in the Middle East, also was at the funeral. It would seem possible that the UN's next step would be discussed by the three.

The UN Security Council met 42 times on the Middle East last year and 33 times the year before. Last year Israel was condemned or criticized five times, including last month when the 15-member council expressed the condemnation of most world governments over the attack on Beirut Airport in which 13 planes were destroyed.

Israel angrily rejected this condemnation. During the year the Arabs were not expressly condemned once, although there were resolutions saying the ceasefire in the area must be adhered to.

The Security Council's last action of substance was in November, 1967, when it passed a resolution which still is considered the basis for any political settlement in the Middle East.

It was under this resolution that Jarring was appointed and under it he has held meetings with the leaders of all states in the conflict with the exception of Syria which will have nothing to do with him.

Some authorities here say that while Jarring has not been able to achieve anything, at least by providing an avenue for talk, he has kept the lid partially on the Middle East.

But the deteriorating situation of the last couple of months has put the usefulness of the Jarring mission into more question than it has ever been before.

The Soviet Union has talked to foreign affairs officials in London, Paris and Washington. But it apparently has been very successful in selling the idea of a settlement that would be favorable to the Arabs.

Now there is talk here of yet another Security Council meeting, with the Big Four—the Soviet Union, the United States, Britain and France—making some kind of steps toward political settlement.

Members of the Belleville Engineers' Educational Club held their regular meeting at the Engineers' Hall on Pine St. when ranking officials of the CNR motive power division attended. Guest speaker for the meeting was E. R. Bartley, Toronto, chief superintendent of motive power.

A strong committee composed of representatives of schools and service clubs, the city parks board, board of education, the inter-service club council and the chamber of commerce endorsed unanimously a recommendation to City Council requesting that a recreation commission be set up in the city.

Sinclair were appointed high school trustees.

Riots in London

Commonwealth Conference to Deal With Economic Problems

LONDON (CP) — The Commonwealth conference was expected today to deal with economic problems after a weekend during which the Rhodesian issue prompted further tough debate among officials as well as riots in the streets of London.

(The Associated Press reported that a majority of Commonwealth countries have urged a referendum among white and black Rhodesians to test any compromise settlement Britain might reach with the rebel colony.

(African, Asian and other delegates expressed grave doubts that Prime Minister Ian Smith's white-minority Rhodesian government would permit his country's 4,000,000 blacks to express their views freely on a settlement.

The street violence erupted around Rhodesian and South African centres while, elsewhere in the British capital, Prime Minister Trudeau renewed Canada's pledge of support for present sanctions against the Smith government.

Weekend discussion of Rhodesia was part of efforts by aides of Commonwealth leaders to thrash out agreement on how the final conference should treat the issue.

HAROLD WILSON

British officials were reported to feel that the drafting sessions went more smoothly than might have been expected.

The main dispute seemed to be whether the communique should gloss over, or state explicitly, the differences between Britain and those countries such as Canada which to varying degrees do not welcome the latest settlement proposals made by London to the Smith administration.

Reflecting the uncompromising stand of Smith's most rabid enemies were the left-wing demonstrators who tried to storm Rhodesia House Sunday.

Failing in this some of them smashed windows and pitched flaming rubbish at the London headquarters of the South African government, situated across Trafalgar Square from Canada House.

Police and demonstrators scuffled fiercely. And there were struggles between left-wing lists and extreme right-wingers who shouted pro-Smith slogans.

Police said two factions were involved, the right-wing National Front which supports brekaway Rhodesia, and the Black People's Alliance.

"Rule Britannia!" "rightists hailed. "Down with black power. We want white power. Stand by Rhodesia."

Their opponents chanted: "Fascist scum. Long live Chairman Mao."

While dozens were injured or arrested in these outbreaks, the meeting at which Trudeau reiterated Canada's fidelity to sanctions saw 400 Canadian students, in Sunday-best attire, welcome the prime minister with virtually no display of angry dissent.

Later, he participated in a reception at the Mayfair home of Canada's high commission, Charles Ritchie.

There, Trudeau, who had conferred with some top British officials earlier this weekend, mingled with Toronto actor John Colicos and other prominent Canadians.

Among questions discussed with the British officials he met earlier was the working of the legislative process at Westminster, a matter of relevance to Trudeau's plans for reforming parliamentary organization in Ottawa.

For his performance with the students, he receives a verbal pat on the back today from The Guardian.

Sniped at in recent days by a number of prominent British publications, the Canadian leader is credited by Guardian writer Geoffrey Moorhouse with not yet developing "the inscrutable coffish eyes of power (and) . . . the overweening superiorities of high office."

"We haven't seen anything quite like it before," writes Moorhouse about Trudeau's treatment of the students.

While some journalistic disappointment in Trudeau's conference performance has become evident recently, Prime Minister Lee Kuan Yew of Singapore continues to be quoted by observers respectful of what one commentator calls his "brutal" realism.

The Singapore leader warned Africans during one conference session that British action against the Rhodesian government is unlikely because such would clash with the interests of Britain itself.

Black Africans anxious to realize their own solution of the Rhodesian problem would have to pay the price, said Lee Kuan Yew.

He cited the success of the Viet Cong against the United States in Vietnam and told the Africans they would have to develop the discipline and durability a war of attrition demands if they mean to get their way in Rhodesia.

"Rhodesia is on the way to creating a tragedy of its own," comments The Guardian.

African leaders at the conference have urged stepping up an international campaign of sanctions against Rhodesia that was begun when Smith's government declared itself independent in 1965 rather than accept African majority rule.

PIERRE TRUDEAU

Many also demanded that Britain continue its refusal to recognize Rhodesia's independence until that country's African majority is ready to assume power.

Informants said the draft communique to be presented today gives a British assurance that sanctions would be stiffened pending a settlement.

But they said Britain has refused to scrap its proposal of a compromise settlement and was offering early recognition of Rhodesian independence if Smith's government liberalizes its racial policies.

An organization called the Middle East African League claimed today that many Commonwealth delegates support its novel solution to the Rhodesian crisis—creation of an entire African population and form a new black state somewhere on the West Coast of Africa.

"We are not thinking of a refugee camp; we are thinking of a state," said League Secretary John Salakov of Nigeria. "We think the only solution to Rhodesia is to let the whites run the country and let the African people run their own state elsewhere."

There was no immediate comment on this idea by any conference delegates.

In other matters the Commonwealth conference:

—Deplored the invasion of Czechoslovakia and accused the Soviet Union of violating the principle of non-interference and breaching the UN Charter;

—Voted unanimously to support efforts by the Big Four powers to promote a Middle East peace settlement.

Boston Professor Criticizes The Hall-Dennis Report

TORONTO (CP) — A Boston University professor Saturday criticized the Hall-Dennis report on education in Ontario for failing to recommend the introduction of "such taboo subjects as political, social and sexual mores" in secondary schools.

Theodore Brameld, an education professor at the university, told a teach-in on the report that he would have liked to see a more radical change from its stand-pat approach.

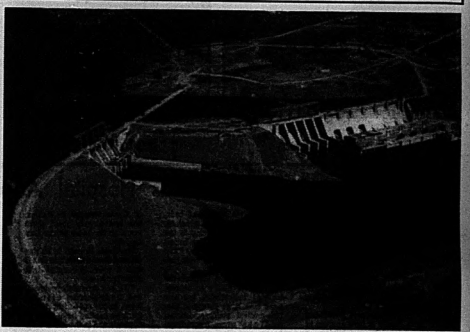
"It's no wonder there are so many disillusioned young people in society, when education seems to be engaged in a conspiracy to prevent young people from discovering their identity and their relations to the problems of our time."

Mr. Brameld said at least one third of all formal education should take place outside the classroom, but added that he could find no more than a passing reference to field trips in the report.

The report, enthusiastically acclaimed by educationists when it was released seven months ago, was debated for seven hours at the Ontario College of Education of the University of Toronto.

Many of the 100 persons attending doubted if the 258 recommendations in the report, which included abolition of grades and examinations, would ever be implemented.

J. R. H. Morgan, a secondary school liaison officer at the University of Toronto, suggested that all the report's recommendations could be put into practice without changing "a very sterile and structured type of learning situation."



"One can hardly operate a school system without some established procedures-call them arbitrary if you like-for to attempt to do so is to substitute a mild tyranny of order for an intolerable tyranny of anarchy," said Mr. Morgan.

Mr. Morgan also criticized the report's suggestion that "the child is a natural and self-propelled learner . . . who, left to his own devices, will educate himself."

"The early adolescent tends to be introverted and lethargic-lazy if you like," he said.

Lee Peperman, a 15-year-old Toronto student, criticized the report for its "protectionist" attitude.

"You say you want to protect us from the world, and protect us from ourselves," he said. "You can't protect us from Vietnam and Biafra-it's all around us."

Radical Approach to Development

New Brunswick's radical approach to Industrial development, the creation of a whole group of related industries in a major growth area, is expected to begin with a project based on metal-working industries around Saint John, the province's largest urban area. The $118,000,000 Mactaquac dam on the St. John River, above, has given the province ample power as a development incentive. (CP Photo)

Single Exchange Proposed

TORONTO (CP) —J. R. Kimber, president of the Toronto Stock Exchange, called Sunday for a national stock exchange in Canada to eliminate costly duplication of facilities.

Mr. Kimber said in a lecture at York University that a single exchange would also add liquidity to the market through centralization.

Comparing the role of a national stock exchange to that of a central bank, he said:

"If the trend continues for insurance companies, pension funds and other institutions to place larger portions of their funds into equities, then the equity market will become of growing importance to the national money market."

He predicted a continued and rapid capitalization of new resources and services in Canada in the coming years.

Interest on the part of investors and those seeking to raise capital would be more and more focused on the equity market rather than on fixed income debt securities.

He warned that competition among exchanges could retard the raising of capital and said the development of a national exchange is part of the evolution of the equity market.

Mr. Kimber also suggested that a national exchange should be established here in Canada. Toronto exchange does 75 per cent of the dollar volume in Canada.

Atlantic Provinces

Manufacturers Push Sales in Caribbean

HALIFAX (CP) — Atlantic provinces manufacturers and produce exporters who want to increase their sales in the sunny islands of the Caribbean need more aggressive sales techniques and better transportation.

That's the opinion of Al M. Farmer, supervisor of area services and marketing for the Nova Scotia department of trade and industry.

Mr. Farmer was a member of a five-man trade mission which visited the Caribbean before Christmas. He said businessmen in the Atlantic area can make gains in the Caribbean—"but first we've got to get better and faster transportation."

Chief competitor for Atlantic manufacturers in the area is the United States which has greatly increased its business there in the last few years. British businessmen also find the Caribbean an attractive market area.

"The Atlantic provinces can improve their position, however," Mr. Farmer says, "It's just a matter of giving a lot of thought and work to the problem and applying more aggressive methods."

Increased sales can be expected of fish, consumer products and construction materials, he said there is also a big market for the provision of services—architects, engineers and consultants of many kinds."

Mr. Farmer's trip to the Caribbean was sponsored by the Atlantic Development Board with the assistance of the federal department of trade and commerce. The federal department arranged the itinerary, which included Jamaica, Barbados, Guyana, Bermuda, Bahamas and Puerto Rico.

The members of the mission were given a briefing by trade department officials in Ottawa before their trip, and they also discussed transportation problems with Air Canada and the Saguenay steamship line.

"Air Canada wants to improve its freight service to the Caribbean," he says. "In February it will start using jet transports for freight flying from Montreal and Toronto to Caribbean areas."

Others from the Atlantic region taking part in the fact-finding mission were Ronald Searles of Fredericton, marketing officer for the New Brunswick department of economic growth; Tom Flood, manager of Industrial Enterprises Inc., Prince Edward Island; Richard Crew of Newfoundland's department of economic development and M. R. M. Dale, export advisor for the Atlantic Development Board.

"We are convinced that the Atlantic area's trade position can be improved in the Caribbean," says Mr. Farmer. "But it requires careful planning and time."

In line with this need for time for adequate preparation was the decision last week by a group of Halifax businessmen to postpone a Caribbean trade and travel fair. The fair "tropical heat wave" was to have taken place here this week.

But the organizers said they want to allow more time for potential exhibitors, particularly those from Bermuda, the Bahamas and the Caribbean, to prepare their displays.

"We've been helping them informally with this project and will be continuing to do so," Mr. Farmer said.

TORONTO STOCKS

TORONTO (CP) — Prices moved up firmly in mid-morning trading on the Toronto Stock Exchange today. Volume was moderately active.

The industrial index gained 0.85 to 187.02 and advances outnumbered losses by a wide spread.

Brokers say they are still taking a cautious view of market prospects after the unexpected slump which hit prices early last week.

A recovery started Thursday and almost half the original losses have been wiped out.

CPR gained 1⅛ to 77⅛. Dominion Stores ⅜ to 17. Hand Chemical ¾ to 23. Exquisite Form ⅝ to 8¾ and Alinco ½ to 17.

Among the most active industrials, Revenue Properties rose ¼ to 17½ and Inco ¼ to 41⅝.

Alcan advanced 1 to 29¼. The company is reviewing its price for aluminum following an increase by a U.S. company.

Asbestos Corp. lost ¼ to 27¼. Canadair Ltd., a subsidiary of General Dynamics Corp. of New York, has made an offer of $20 a share for 1,000,000 shares of Canadair.

Canadair said it will attempt to buy about 40 per cent of these shares on the open market.

Among mines and western oils, Hudson Bay Mining advanced ¾ to 76¼, Bethlehem Copper ¾ to 18 and Numac ½ to 10½. Dome Pete lost 1 to 84 and Jefferson Lake ¾ to 23.

On index, golds rose 1.99 to 250.68 and base metals .20 to 115.47. Western oils fell 1.46 to 238.20.

Volume by 11 a.m. was 1-159,000 shares compared with 1,520,100 at the same time Friday.

Floral Centrepiece Adds the Right Touch to Dinner Table

By LINDA GELDART

Company is coming. You have everything planned — the bars d'oeuvres, the main course, the dessert. But one thing is missing to make the picture beautiful: flowers.

A tastefully arranged floral centrepiece adds exactly the right touch to a dinner table. Grace, charm and, of course, color can be put to work for the enterprising hostess with just the right touch of flowers.

Often, the hostess will feel quite hesitant about making up her own centrepiece. However, with a few hints, an eye for color and artistic flair, it's very simple.

Miss Hazel Wilson, a floral designer for a local flower shop, passes on some suggestions and tips for the hostess.

When putting together a centrepiece, Miss Wilson suggested starting with a wide bowl, filled with styro foam, topped with a slice of "oasis" and covered by chicken wire.

These items are relatively inexpensive, and give the finished product a more professional effect.

Another advantage of using this type of base is that the flowers are given greater support. They also look more pleasing to the eye.

Larger flowers and deeper colors are usually placed at the bottom of the bowl, and high or tall flowers are left at the top, and brought to a point.

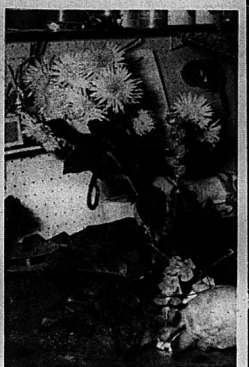
Various types of foliage can be used, to emphasize the flowers and enhance the centrepiece.

For example, one type of centrepiece may use pink snapdragons, and white and yellow 'mums. Snapdragons are placed at the top, and the colored 'mums are "grouped" together to compliment their contrasting colors.

The foliage is fitted in the bowl first, then the other flowers are fitted in according to their size, shape and color.

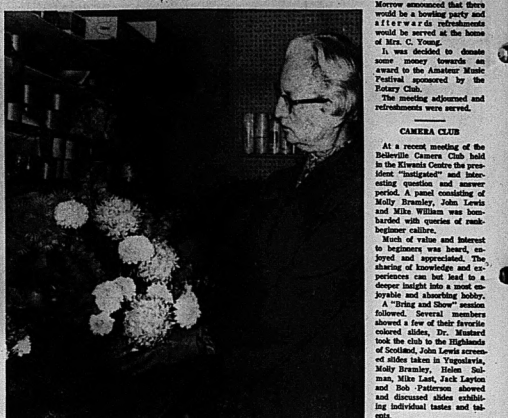
Miss Wilson explained that scraping the stems to a point will make the plant last longer. Woody stems, she added, must be pounded.

The colors of flowers one chooses should harmonize with dining room decor. Light colors, such as pink, yellow and white, are the ones most often used.



What type of flowers are most often chosen for these occasions?

"Flowers for dinner occasions are usually chosen according to the season. The most popular are carnations, 'mums and snapdragons. Roses are reserved only for formal occasions," the designer said.



Miss Wilson has been a floral designer for more than 18 years. How did she learn the tricks of the trade? "By observing, and by practical experience," she revealed.

Social Worker Becomes Hospital Administrator

OTTAWA (CP) — When Doris Routly graduated with a master's degree in social work from University of Toronto, she hoped to apply her knowledge to a hospital setting.

Instead, she became an administrator when she couldn't convince the Salvation Army that social workers in hospitals were necessary.

That was 28 years ago. Today Brig. Routly is lured at work at her new job—administrator of the Salvation Army's Grace Hospital in Ottawa.

Brig. Routly is embroiled in the many problems that go with major hospital renovation, increase in the number of beds, and change in patient structure.

She finds her training in the field of social work has helped her as an administrator. "You have to get involved with people," she says.

"The bigger the hospital, the less is your ability to become involved individually, but you work with large groups of people—medical staff, auxiliaries, doctors' wives, associations, board of management, and, of course, the employees—and understanding is important."

Before coming to Ottawa, the pleasant, grey haired woman was for 7½ years administrator of Grace Hospital in Halifax. She had already spent seven years at the same job in London, Ont.

The Grace Hospital in Halifax differed from Ottawa's in that it was a teaching hospital with clinic facilities.

"We had pre-natal, post-natal and family-planning clinics there. In our out-patient department we handled large numbers of people and in the family-planning clinic we averaged a case load of about 200 a month."

During the last part of her stay in Halifax, Brig. Routly noted an increase in the number of illegitimate births, particularly among younger teenagers, despite a general decline in the maternity patient load at the hospital.

"There is also a trend towards older unmarried girls having babies and keeping them to raise themselves, especially in the United States."

Although she doesn't have much time for hobbies and recreation, Brig. Routly enjoys reading, music, and live theatre.

"I really enjoy outdoor life, especially in the summer months."

Association For Retarded Holds Meet

CAMPBELLFORD —Campbellford and District Association for the Mentally Retarded held their annual meeting recently in Merryvale School. Reports were received and financial statements approved.

Plans were made for the annual sleigh ride to be held at Campbellford fairgrounds and arena on Saturday, Jan. 18.

Certificates of merit were presented to Mr. and Mrs. Richard Cook and Rev. and Mrs. E. A. Toombs for outstanding work among retardates.

Merryvale School as of Jan. 1 came under the new Regional School Board of Northumberland and Durham Counties.

The members of the Association now will direct their efforts toward establishing a workshop for adult retardates — those over 18 years of age.

Richard Cook, chairman of the nominating committee presented the following report which was accepted.

President is Mrs. Alex Rutherford; 1st vice-president, Mrs. Don Mclaroy; 2nd vice-president, Mrs. A. E. Toombs; secretary, Miss E. Weir; treasurer, Mrs. Morley Tanner; executive directors, Rev. E. A. Toombs, Mrs Keith Bailey, Richard Cook, Mrs. J. Rannie and Adrian Pice.

A new approach to the classic jacket outline is an adaptation of the Regency style. Brent and Collins, of London, have dropped the collar, but feature extra large lapels on a fly-fronted jacket which has vertical jetted pockets and a deep vent at the back. This British wool worsted suit is ideal for wear with a polo neck shirt.

Sister Paints as Hobby After 25 Years of Teaching

VICTORIA (CP) — Sister Mary Jean, 71, says painting as a hobby "is better than running around."

Since she retired as a teacher two years ago, Sister Mary Jean, of the Order of St. Ann, has painted 84 pictures Her room at the Roman Catholic Mount St. Angela convent here was not large enough to hold all hes paintings, so the sisters started hanging them in a back room of the building for public display to all interested visitors

Any money from sales is donated to her "favorite charity."

Sister Mary Jean taught drawing and academic subjects in the Yukon for 25 years and later taught in Victoria, Vancouver and Kamloops, B.C., before retiring.

She started painting 21 months ago "for relaxation." "It's better than running around."

Only recently has she started to work in oils and admits "th's is my first public display."

STATUE MISSING

POMPEII, Italy (AP) — A foot-high bronze statue of Fornosa, goddess of fruit, has been stolen from the ancient house where it stood for some 1,900 years after erupting Mt. Vesuvius buried this Roman resort town in ash and lava Guards at the unearthed ruins said the statue was worth about $600.

Lab Studies Behavior

HALIFAX (CP) — Dalhousie University has acquired a mobile laboratory to help researchers study the learning behavior of children.

The university's psychology department has been studying how children tackle various learning problems for the last five years.

The trailer-laboratory will take the university's facilities to the schools instead of having the children visit the university.

Dr. Barbara Clark, who teaches developmental and applied psychology at the university, is in charge of the program.

She says there is increasing emphasis today on the techniques children use to acquire knowledge or information.

"By learning how children learn, improvements may be made in teaching practices."

Dr. Clark also says she hopes that teachers and teacher-in-training by observation and practice may be able to benefit from the use of the mobile laboratory as a training device.

The 24-foot trailer has two rooms, one with table and chairs and the other with a projection screen for slide viewing and a one-way screen for observation.

It is staffed by three graduate research assistants.

Club Activities

ALPHA LAMBDA CHAPTER

The regular meeting of Alpha Lambda, Beta Sigma Phi, was held on Wed., Jan. 8, 1969 at the home of Mrs. R. Walton with Mrs. G. Brown as co-hostess.

Mrs. Hill announced that on Feb. 12, 1969 there would be the Ritual of Jewels held for the new members.

On Jan. 25, 1969 Mrs. J. Morrow announced that there would be a bowling party and afterwards refreshments would be served at the home of Mrs. C. Young.

It was decided to donate some money towards an award to the Amateur Music Festival sponsored by the Rotary Club.

The meeting adjourned and refreshments were served.

CAMERA CLUB

At a recent meeting of the Belleville Camera Club held in the Kiwanis Centre the president "instigated" and interesting question and answer period. A panel consisting of Molly Bramley, John Lewis and Mike William was bombarded with queries of rank-beginner calibre.

Much of value and interest to beginners was heard, enjoyed and appreciated. The sharing of knowledge and experiences can but lead to a deeper insight into a most enjoyable and absorbing hobby.

A "Bring and Show" session followed. Several members showed a few of their favorite colored slides, Dr. Mustard took the club to the Highlands of Scotland, John Lewis screened slides taken in Yugoslavia, Molly Bramley, Helen Salman, Mike Last, Jack Layton and Bob Patterson showed and discussed slides exhibiting individual tastes and talents.

The evening closed with a general social hour arranged by the club's hostess-secretary Twila Langman. The club welcomed guests from the CFB Trenton Camera Club.

LIONETTES

CAMPBELLFORD —Seventeen members attended the first dinner meeting of the new year held at George's Restaurant.

The dinner drew was won by Mary Hughes and the lucky prize draw won by Mildred Baker.

The guest speaker, Paul Smith, L.L.B. was introduced by Maureen Dikun. Mr. Smith's topic on "Making a Will" was of interest to all. He spoke of the background of law and wills and explained the different types involved in making a will, also of the taxes on estates and bequests.

Mr. Smith was thanked by Joan Sharp. After a brief business meeting the club adjourned until Feb. 5.

Boyfriend's Wishes Should Be Respected

DEAR ANN LANDERS: The other evening I went to pick up my girl to take her to dinner. When she answered the door I said, "Hi, Harold." I thought it was her brother.

June had on one of those pantsuits. With her short haircut and a button-down collar she looked just like a guy. I told her I didn't like the way she looked and, furthermore, I was afraid they wouldn't let us into the Rita Hotel dining room dressed that way. She gave me a black look and said, "I'll change but I think you are being very previncial." Her lower lip stuck out all evening and we had a rotten time.

ANN LANDERS

Will you please tell me if I was wrong to say anything? I told June when we said good night that if I wanted to date somebody in trousers there are two guys in the office who have hinted they'd like to go out with me. She didn't care much for that remark.

I love June and don't want to have any trouble with her. Please tell me if you think a man has the right to express his views on how his girl looks? — CHILLED CHUCK.

DEAR CHUCK: I do, indeed. Pantsuits are in vogue, and some women look smashing in them. If, however, a boyfriend or a husband prefers that the light of his life wear a skirt when she goes with him, his wishes should be respected.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Please don't think I am a selfish, possessive mother. Nothing could be further from the truth. The problem is the sort of in-laws.

My husband and I would enjoy being with our daughter and her husband for an occasional evening without the other in-laws monopolizing the conversation with "their plans, trips, projects."

Please understand, Ann, they are fine folks, but they are overwhelming. We can't get a word in edgewise. Whenever my husband and I return from an evening with the four of them we feel we could just as well have stayed at home.

What do you suggest? — MAIME DILEMMA.

DEAR DIL: Be honest with your daughter. Tell her you would prefer not to be part of a quartet, even if this means seeing her less often. In my opinion, your complaint is a valid one and you should speak up.

* * *

DEAR ANN: Our favorite niece announced her engagement five months ago. We were all thrilled. The young man comes from a fine family and is in his senior year at Brown. The date was set for January 26. Several parties were given and gifts sent.

Yesterday we received a cryptic three line note from the bride's mother. The wedding is off. No reason. Just "off." We feel she owes us an explanation. After all, we aren't strangers. Do you agree? — INSULTED.

DEAR IN: No. The reasons are nobody's business. If you are a real friend you will spare them additional anxiety and ask no questions.

Simple Diet Formula: Eat Less; Do More

By DORIS CLARK

How did your weight fare on Christmas Eve? Do the scales show that a few extra pounds moved in and took their abode? If they did, now's the time to solve them the way out.

How? It's not as hard as most people think. But arguments such as: "An apple isn't count", or "Just this small nibble of cheese isn't much", or "Tomorrow I'll start to diet" — all those will get you nowhere.

Doris Clark

The cold, undeniable fact is that if you consume more food than your body uses up as energy, the excess is deposited as fat. If you want to lose fat, you eat less than your activities burn up.

The best sense is in cutting down, not cutting out healthful foods. Learn to enjoy a main course made up of half-portions, eaten slowly. When it comes to sugar - laden and fat - laden desserts make your portion even smaller.

Mark my words: It will work!

* * *

Dear Doris: I was interested in a letter from one of the ladies stating that her nephew were having difficulty trying to correlate the theory of evolution with their early religious training. In high school this theory is usually taught as the only acceptable explanation as to how life in its present form came upon this planet.

However, there are some good books written to show some of the weaknesses of this theory which as yet has not been established as a fact. — Trying to be of Help

Dear Trying: Thank you. I have made a note of the books and authors, and will be glad to supply these names to anyone writing in about them.

* * *

Dear Doris: Joe and I have been going out steadily for the last five months. He is 20 and I am 18. He hopes to buy me a going-steady ring for my birthday. My biggest problem is, most of my family won't accept Joe because he is Italian.

My parents are my ministers. They preach about loving one another, and that all races have souls and we must accept them all. I wish they would do what they preach and accept Joe.

What really bugs me is they put the goodie goodie show on in front of Joe, but then run him down to me. They are trying to break us up. — Not A Fantasy

Dear Not A: Yours would not be the first parents to preach universal love and falter when it came to involving their own.

All humans are important; not one more than another. And girls have married boys of widely different races and made a go of it. Just the same, my concern would be for the clashes which un-similar backgrounds and cultures might cause.

Don't forget about that four years difference in ages, either. It represents a fifth of your lifetime! You'd be wise not to go steady with anyone, for quite some time.

* * *

Is it better to put with misunderstandings, or to begin talking things over? Let Doris help you see the light.

Fish Boning, Stuffing and Baking—All in One Lesson

By MARY MOORE

Truth and imagination are inextricably combined in this tale of a fish. Shirley's teen-aged friend Rick teased her into buying a whole frozen fish when he was helping her shop. Since it was only 79 cents for over 1½ pounds she gamely bought it. At home he held it up by the tail in full view of three and one-half year old Sharon and two-year-old Jody and said, "Look Sharon — see the fish!" Almost at once Shirley put it in her basement freezer. From then on the basement was either avoided, or if the children were playing there it was ever so quietly so the fish would not wake up and come out and "get" them.

Now this fish presented a problem to Shirley. She knew the children would not eat it because they had been frightened by it and besides, how do you bone a fish? I said, "bring it to me". She said, "You're welcome to it."

I think young housewives will welcome this fish boning and stuffing and baking lesson.

STUFFED BAKED FISH

One 1½ to 2-lb. fresh frozen cleaned fish

Stuffing:
- 2 tbsps. butter
- 2 cups soft breadcrumbs — not packed — see below
- 1 tsp. freeze-dried chives or chopped onion
- 1 tbsp. green relish or chopped sweet pickle
- ¼ tsp. MSG
- 1 tsp. lemon juice

Thaw fish. With sharp knife cut off head, tail and fins. Scrape off scales if still on. Now comes the removal of that pesky spine bone. Insert point of thin sharp knife at both sides of top and deftly use knife and finger tips and slide them down close to bone; edging knife out to pointed ends of bones as you go. Press on right down to tail and remove bone intact. Lay fish open on large sheet of buttered foil and cover one side with stuffing made by gently melting butter and adding breadcrumbs to pan. Crispen them a little in the butter. (I used 60 per cent whole wheat crumbs.) Stir in remaining ingredients. Cover with other side of fish. Brush top skin with lemon juice and dot with butter. Wrap in foil. Place on unbuttered baking pan and bake at 400 deg. Fahr. 20 min. Uncover top and brown 5" from broiler burner for 4 or 5 min.

Serve with Tartare Sauce made by adding to 1 3 cup mayonnaise, 1 tbsp. each, chopped sweet pickle, chopped ripe olives, lemon juice and shake of onion salt.

Tweed Winter Carnival Equals Family Fun

TWEED — The Tweed Chamber of Commerce met for their monthly regular meeting at the Hotel Tweeds-dale, this week.

Plans for the Tweed annual Winter Carnival took yet another step forward when the C. of C. who sponsor the popular event went into the plans and program. A number of committee members and other local organizations were also in attendance.

With the beginning of the carnival, Friday night's program, David Morton reported that a number of bands had been contacted and had promised to take part in the opening torch-light parade at 7.30 p.m. when floats and torch bearers will get the carnival underway.

Mr. Morton asked that anyone wishing to take part in this parade, contact the Chamber of Commerce Directors as soon as possible.

James Halpenny reported that he had been in contact with a number of hockey officials in Ottawa and Toronto and had been assured that two of the province's leading midget hockey teams would take part in the Friday night program at the Tweed Community Centre.

Weather permitting, skydiving at Stoco Lake will be the feature attraction of the Saturday afternoon program. If weather is unsatisfactory, on Saturday, it is hoped to include the sky-diving in the Sunday afternoon program. Hockey games will be played at the Community Centre during the day, and other events are also planned.

The Saturday night program will again feature figure skating, with top amateur skaters from the Toronto district. The program is expected to include an old timers' hockey game, and a band program.

A carnival draw, sponsored jointly by the Tweed Kinsmen Club and the Tweed Chamber of Commerce, will be made for a new Ski-doo, complete with trailer and cover.

Proceeds from these ticket sales over and above the expenses, will be used to further the development of Tweed and district.

Bluenose Takes Unscheduled Holiday as Gale Damage Mended

ST. GEORGE (CP) — The crew of the Bluenose II today began an unscheduled holiday in this small Bermudian port as workmen began repairing damage the Nova Scotia schooner received last week in a howling Atlantic storm.

"It looks like we're going to be here for four or five days," one of the crew said Sunday night. "And you don't know how good it feels to be on solid land again."

The Bluenose was towed into port here Sunday after a storm-tossed six-day voyage from Halifax. Neil Robitaille, 22, of Yarmouth, N.S., was swept overboard to his death when a huge wave battered the vessel on Wednesday.

The Bluenose was scheduled to stop here only overnight Sunday before heading for Antigua and the start of her winter charter cruise in the Caribbean. But Jim Cormier of Halifax, a crew member who also was nearly lost overboard, said it appeared the damage the Bluenose received would keep her here at least five days.

For the 13-man crew, the extra time provides a chance to recover from the emotional and physical strain of the voyage.

The Bluenose also carried its passengers on her voyage. They returned to Canada Sunday.

The six passengers were Michael L. Davies, general manager of the Kingston Whig-Standard; Gordon N. Fisher of Toronto, vice-president of Southam Press Ltd.; Toronto stockbroker David S. Osler; Lorne A. Flower of Kingston; John Rothwell of Toronto and Martin Yeatman, a member of a Halifax engineering firm.

(In a Toronto interview Sunday night, Fisher said the wave which swept the three crew members off the deck would have caused no trouble if there had not been so many people on the deck.

("At any other time, that huge wave wouldn't have caused much trouble, but there were so many people on deck working on the sails, that did it," Fisher said.

(He said the Bluenose herself was never in any danger from the rough seas.)

Cormier said the sleek, 143-foot-long schooner might have to go into drydock to complete the repairs. Full extent of the damage still wasn't known Sunday night.

It appeared this Caribbean cruise could be the vessel's last winter voyage.

Don Oland, vice-president of the Halifax brewing company which owns the Bluenose, said her owners did not want to take the chance of losing another man in winter weather.

"Once people had to go to sea and took their chances," Oland said Sunday. "But in this day and age, it just isn't good enough. I doubt we'll send the ship out again in the winter."

Robitaille was lost when the first of three giant waves hammered the 285-ton Bluenose Wednesday.

Cormier and Craig Harding of Liverpool also were washed from the deck. Harding was swept completely off the ship, but Cormier managed to grab a rail on the vessel's side and was swept back on board by the next roll of the ship.

"There were two of us who were lucky and one guy wasn't," Harding said in an interview after the Bluenose was towed into the harbor here.

Harding, 21, said he was tossed about 30 feet to the stern of the Bluenose, but managed to swim back to the vessel, grasp a rope trailing from her side and then catch a ring thrown overboard to him.

"I almost fell out of the ring a couple of times," Harding said. "Was I scared? I sure as hell was. I'm lucky I'm still alive."

He also said he nearly managed to reach Robitaille, but "couldn't quite reach him."

The schooner's skipper, Capt. Ellsworth Coggins of Dartmouth, N.S., said he had just gone below when the wave struck and almost everyone else was on deck.

"Nobody saw the wave coming," he said.

Oland paid tribute to the passengers, saying they had pitched in with the crew to help with the work.

"They didn't stay passengers very long after she left Halifax," he said.

Minutes after the Bluenose reached port, the crew members and passengers stood bareheaded in a driving rain as David Rawding of Liverpool, N.S., a close friend of Robitaille's, offered thanks for their arrival and prayers for their lost mate.

"We thank Thee we have reached this land safely, and yet deep in our midst we feel another still present with us," he said. " . . . Father, hear our prayers and have mercy not only on a friend but a true and devoted seaman."

Canadian Recognition of China and Vatican To Be Discussed by Cabinet Asserts Trudeau

LONDON (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau said Sunday the questions of Canadian recognition of China and the Vatican—he put them in that order—are ready for cabinet discussion and decision.

He added at a teach-in with Canadian university students that he hopes that there will be significant changes in Canadian foreign policy.

But he added that some of Canada's friends might not like his government's decisions and "maybe we will have to back down on some of them."

Trudeau said Saturday in a CBC interview he will discuss with the Pope in Rome Thursday the possibility of Canadian establishment of diplomatic relations with the Vatican.

The questions posed by some of the 400 students in the 70-minute session at the Westminster Theatre were mild.

But one student, Don Carmichael of Ottawa, took on Trudeau on the question of more housing for poor Canadians.

Trudeau finally said housing is a matter of provincial jurisdiction and "if you don't admit that, don't come back to Canada." He won loud applause.

Trudeau was speaking at the end of a busy weekend. He had dined with key members of the British cabinet and toured the English countryside.

BAB 'BOO-HOOS

There were a few scattered hisses at one or two of Trudeau's replies Sunday but the main dissenter, apart from Carmichael, was a baby-in-arms who began crying loudly. Its mother had to leave with the baby.

Trudeau said at one point that "we do have to put up with some bums in the Liberal party."

He added that some of the bums were beaten in the June 25 election, implying that some were elected. He did not identify any of them.

Trudeau said at another point that he supports true communism as an idea.

His definition of true communism was that each would give the best he had and take only what he needed.

Trudeau also said the provinces are not showing any desire to co-operate with Ottawa financially.

They were telling their people that they would have to raise taxes because they could not get any more money out of the federal government.

If Ottawa has to turn over 80 per cent, say, of its revenues to the provinces, it would lose control of the economy and this could be dangerous.

Trudeau said he hopes that foreign policy reviews by officials will be completed in the spring. These reviews were completed in the areas of China, the Vatican and Latin America and were ready for cabinet discussion.

The NATO review would not be ready until mid-spring.

After the reviews, there would be a government white paper and parliamentary debate on it before decisions were taken by the government.

Duke, Astaire Too Good For 'Best Dressed' List

NEW YORK (Reuters) — The Duke of Windsor and movie star Fred Astaire were described Sunday by fashion experts as men who were so well dressed they outranked any list of best dressed men in the world.

A committee of judges conducting a poll among 2,500 fashion writers and U.S. fashion industry personalities said both men were "above" competition and have never been topped in their lives."

Therefore, neither the duke or Astaire were mentioned in a list of best-dressed men, which this year was included in the annual poll for the first time.

The poll named the 10 best-dressed men in the world as: Wyatt Cooper, television director; Bill Blass, New York designer for men and women; Prince Philip; the Earl of Lichfield; actor George Hamilton; Paris designer Hubert de Givenchy; George D. Widener, Philadelphia sports figure; British photographer Cecil Beaton; Jean-Claude Killy, French ski star; Count Rudolfo Crespi, Rome society figure; Baron Alexis de Rede, French socialite; and Bernard Lanvin, also a Parisian couturier.

Trudeau Called Parley's Biggest Disappointment

LONDON (CP) — Terence Lancaster, political columnist in the mass-circulation newspaper The People, has aimed a broadside at Prime Minister Trudeau, terming him the "biggest disappointment" of the current Commonwealth conference.

"Polo-necked Pierre Trudeau, Canada's night-clubbing prime minister, is winning the headlines during the Commonwealth talks-but little else," Lancaster says.

"He was billed as a new, exciting figure, as the Great White Hope of an increasingly dark-complexioned organization.

"Instead he has turned out to be the conferences biggest disappointment."

The Sunday paper's columnist argues that the Canadian leader's "widely-reported expeditions with pretty girls seem to conceal a pretty conformist attitude after all."

The East Africans had expected Trudeau to give them fairly solid backing on the Rhodesian question. Nigeria and immigration, Lancaster says.

He reports them as, instead, feeling "particularly let down" and complaining that "it took only one weekend visit to Chequers for (British Prime Minister) Wilson to brainwash him."

Broadway Joe Greatest Prophet Since Cassius

MIAMI (AP) — Joe Namath has become the greatest prophet in the sports world since Cassius Clay called the rounds in which his foes would fall.

Namath, quarterback of New York Jets, "guaranteed" that the American League team would win the world football title, and he backed it up all the way Sunday when he led New York to a 16-7 upset of Baltimore Colts of the National League.

In the two previous Super Bowls, Green Bay Packers had clobbered the AFL entries. Kansas City and Oakland...and Baltimore was an 18-point favorite to keep the NFL mystique alive.

The game plan of the Colts was obvious. Their defence would take away the New York running game, opening the way for the big rush that would stop Namath. Then Earl Morra's passes and the slashing runs of Tom Matte and Jerry Hill would carry Baltimore to victory.

But Namath tore the plan apart. Right from the beginning, he established the Jets' rushing attack by ramming Matt Snell down the throats of the Colts. And when Baltimore still tried the blitz, he beat it repeatedly as he bombed the Colts with 17 completions in 28 tries for 206 yards.

Against a magnificent New York defence, Morrall and later Johnny Unitas found all avenues to victory closed to them.

Morrall, who this season replaced the injured Unitas and won distinction as the NFL's Most Valuable Player when he guided the Colts to a 13-1 season, had been given added incentive by Namath's pre-game crowing that Morrall was no better than at least five passers in the AFL.

But Morrall was unable to rise to the challenge. The scrambling Jets defenders allowed him only six completions in 17 throws for a measly 71 yards and came up with crucial interceptions.

"I don't think we did anything right," Baltimore coach Don Shula said. "On defence we didn't play like we should, and our offence didn't come up with the big plays like it has all season."

Coach Weeb Ewbank, who won two NFL titles with the Colts and now has guided the Jets to the heights, said:

"The Colts were great but we were greater. It was fabulous. Joe called another of his great games. This is the start of a new era in pro football."

Snell raced four yards for a Jet touchdown. Jim Turner kicked field goals of 32, 30 and nine yards, and New York held a commanding lead of 16-0 before the veteran Unitas came in for the final quarter and put the Colts on the scoreboard on a one-yard run by Jerry Hill.

Big heroes of the New York defence were Randy Beverly, whose two end zone interceptions prevented what looked like sure Baltimore touchdowns, Johnny Simple, who stole another at the Jet two, and Jim Hudson, who swiped one at the New York 12.

133 yards, got off on the wrong foot. After David Lee had punted dead to the New York nine in the first period, Namath hit Sauer with a short pass, but he fumbled and Rex Porter recovered for Baltimore at the Jets' 12.

The sellout crowd of 75,377 thought this would be the start of a Colt landslide as Matte, rushing star of the Colts, rammed to the seven on the first play. But when Morrall aimed for Tom Mitchell in the end zone, the ball bounced off his left shoulder pad and was deflected to Beverly.

Then Namath took the Jets 80 yards in 12 plays, with Snell hitting for gains of seven and 15 yards, taking a 12-yard pass from Namath, and running wide with a simple handoff for the touchdown.

With two minutes left in the half, the Colts were stopped by Sample's big interception. Breaking a tackle by Jim Hudson at the line of scrimmage, Matte had darted into the clear and just missed going all the way when Bill Baird caught him at the Jet 16. But when Morrall threw for Richardson in the end zone, Sample came across to pick it off.

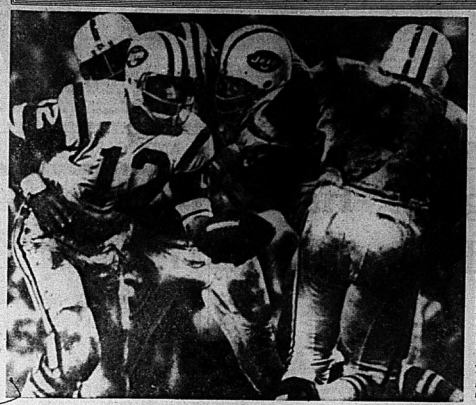
On the last play of the half, Hudson broke off another Colt threat with an interception on a throw Baltimore's way.

With the Colts on the Jet 41, Morrall handed off to Matte, who ran to his right and then tossed the ball back to Morrall. Morrall threw for Hill and Hudson came up with New York's third big interception of the first half.

On the first play after the intermission, Matte fumbled and Ralph Baker recovered for New York at the Colt 33.

With Snell leading the attack, the Jets moved to a first down at the 11. Here the famed Baltimore defence finally rose up in force. Lenny Lyles ran Emerson Boozer out at the 17 for a loss of six and Bubba Smith got to Namath for a loss of eight more—one of only two times the Jet quarterback was dumped.

But the Jets salvaged three points on the drive when Turner connected with his first field goal.



Soon afterward, Namath's passes to Sauer, Snell and Pete Lammons put Turner in position for his second field goal to make it 13-0. Turner's third, in the last quarter, came after a drive in which Namath hit Sauer with passes good for 19 and 40 yards.

Unitas, sidelined all through the regular season with an ailing arm, entered the game near the end of the third period.

The old master sparked a brilliant 80-yard touchdown march that ended when Hill scored from the one.

There was still time, with 3:14 left on the clock, and Baltimore hopes remained alive when an onside kick gave the Colts possession at the Jet 44. Unitas took them to the 19 but New York's defence lowered the boom by breaking up three Unitas passes in a row.

The victorious Jets received $15,000 each and the Colts got $7,500 a man.

Namath Gets Last Laugh

MIAMI (AP) — Joe Namath had just led his New York Jets to a stunning 16-7 victory over Baltimore Colts. He was elated.

He also was thirsty, dirty, tired—and bitter.

"Are you one of those NFL writers?" he asked each reporter who approached him in the Jets' dressing room.

Stripped to his football pants and socks, Namath slouched on a bench and well wishers and writers strained to get near him. It was at least 100 degrees in the crowded Jets dressing room and he was soaked with perspiration. His long black mane hung down in damp ringlets.

"Nobody believed we would win," he kept saying. "Nobody but the New York fans gave us a chance. Where were you guys?"

After about 20 minutes of questions and congratulations, a little man wearing a Super Bowl straw hat pushed through and tapped Joe on the arm, almost timidly.

"Hey, Dad," he yelled, "where'd you get that hat?" Then they hugged each other.

After an hour, Joe made his way to the training table and began cutting away the tape on his feet and knees. The purple scars on his knees stood out in contrast against the white flesh.

They were the only signs of wear on the 25-year-old who made football history when he signed a $400,000 contract with the Jets four years ago.

"Do you feel sorry for Morrall?" he was asked.

"Better him than me," replied Joe. "Do you think anyone would be crying for me now if the Colts had won? Hah!"

Joe was angered when someone asked him if the Super Bowl had been his greatest game.

"You must be one of them NFL writers," he sneered. "Just because we beat an NFL team doesn't mean it was our best game.

"I was confident we would win . . . we all were," he said.

NEW YORK (Reuters) — Up to 14 teams will take part in the North American Professional Soccer League in the 1969 season scheduled to start in April, officials said Saturday. It seemed until recently there would be no league at all because of large sums of money lost by league clubs last year. Officials said that of 17 cities which operated last year, the following 11 were considered fielding a team in 1969 — Atlanta, Baltimore, Boston, Chicago, Cleveland, Dallas, Detroit, Kansas City, New York, Oakland, St. Louis, San Diego, Toronto and Washington.

TORONTO (CP) — Delegates to the annual meeting of the National Association of Canadian Race Tracks were divided Saturday on a proposal that all provinces use the interference substance rule in treating race horses. The rule, already used in British Columbia and Alberta, prohibits the use of certain injected medicaments because they interfere with the identification of outer drugs in urine samples.

Colts Fight Tears After Upset Rout By Underdog Jets

MIAMI (AP) — "They just flat walked out there and beat us," said defensive tackle Billy Ray Smith, the aging veteran of the National Football League's Baltimore Colts.

"They didn't beat us physically, they just beat us."

The 33-year-old Smith, a 10 year veteran of the NFL, fought back tears as he talked about the New York Jets' stunning 16-7 rout of the Colts in Sunday's Super Bowl.

It was another of "those" years for the Colts. A year ago the Colts blew the last regular season game, leaving Los Angeles Rams to represent the Coastal Division in the NFL playoffs.

It was different for the 1968 season—at least until the Super Bowl which saw Joe Namath, the brash Broadway playboy, humiliate and humble the Colts and the senior pro football circuit.

The Colts sipped through the season with victory after victory, even though the golden arm of Johnny Unitas was aching.

Earl Morrall became the NFL's Most Valuable Player of 1968 as he directed the Colts to victory after victory. Morrall is a 13-year veteran who has always been a second stringer—until Unitas' arm starting giving him trouble.

The generous of heart said Morrall did not have a bad day Sunday. Well, it may not have been bad—but it sure wasn't good.

Unitas, with hints of bitterness in his comment, said the Colts didn't have enough time. Morrall said they had enough. Unitas didn't replace Morrall until the third quarter had almost expired.

Unitas used the pronoun "we" in referring to the time angle. It was obviously apparent that "I" could have been substituted easily.

Unitas did move the Colts and Jets into the scoreboard.

He diplomatically sidestepped a direct answer to a query by saying it was coach Don Shula's decision—not his—about when Morrall should have been replaced.

And Unitas added: "I was ready to play from the start."

Could Unitas have saved the Colts? Apparently he thinks so. Shula, most naturally, won't comment.

As for the Colts, Billy Ray Smith said:

"When you're No. 1, you're the best. But when you're No. 2, you're nothing."

Baby Habs, Fighting Fans Take Starch Out of Flyers

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Montreal Junior Canadiens, who like to do things at home, moved into a second-place tie in the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A series Sunday night and the 13,951 fans at the Forum helped get them there.

The Canadiens, unbeaten at home since Nov. 17, walloped Niagara Falls 7-1 in a game that was delayed for almost 30 minutes when Paul Emms, coach of the Flyers, and several spectators became involved in a third-period brawl.

Andre Dupond of Montreal and Rick Thompson of the Flyers were given five-minute majors for fighting with the Canadiens leading 6-1 at 1:40 of the third period when Emms tangled with a spectator behind the Niagara Falls bench.

Forum police moved in when other fans and all the Flyers joined into the free-for-all. When referee Joey Gilmour got matters straightened out, both teams spent 10 minutes in their dressing rooms before play resumed.

It was all hockey and no fisticuffs in St. Catharines where the Black Hawks defeated Ottawa 4-1 on a 6-4 in increase their lead to nine points over Montreal and Peterborough Petes. The Black Hawks have 40 points while Montreal and Peterborough each have 40.

Toronto Marlboros scored three second-period goals on former team-mate Cam Newton to dump last-place Kitchener Rangers 5-3 and Oshawa Generals slammed Hamilton Red Wings 8-2 in the only other games Sunday.

Rejean Houle scored two goals for Montreal who have won 11 of their last 15 games, including four on the road.

Arthur Gucquochi, Richard Martin, Marc Tardif, Robert Guindon and Robert Lalonde added the other goals for the Canadiens, who have three games in hand over Peterborough.

Don Tannahill scored for the Flyers on a power play. Niagara Falls was outshot 50-30.

Defenceman Garry Cunningham scored the winning goal at 4:53 of the third period in St. Catharines on a shot that deflected off an Ottawa defenceman past goaltender Gary Doyle.

Allan Young added an insurance goal for St. Catharines at 19:53 into an empty net after coach Bill Long had pulled Doyle in favor of an extra forward.

Bob Sheehan, Brian McKenzie, Rick Dudley and defenceman Dave Burrows scored the other St. Catharines goals.

Pierre Lafrenniere counted twice for the 67s and Murray Wilson and Conley Forey added the other goals.

Doug Ascuth, with his 30th of the season, John French, Gord Davies, Rick Jordan and Frank Hamill also scored on Newton, who went to Kitchener in a three-for-one trade for goaltender Paul Hoganson.

Henry Lehrsen, Joe Norris and Al Calver replied for the Rangers, in last place in the 10-team league with 15 wins and three ties in 34 games.

Backup goaltender Bill Woodyatt stopped 34 shots, Hoganson was sidelined with the flu.

Oshawa moved into a sixth-place tie with Toronto with their third win in three meetings with the Red Wings this season. Toronto and Oshawa have 31 points, seven fewer than Niagara Falls and eight behind Hamilton.

Pete Vipond, Bob Kelly, Steve Cardwell, Fred O'Donnell and Gerry Walsh scored for the Generals who built up a 3-0 first-period lead. Ron Climie and Buster Harvey counted for Hamilton in the second period.

Boston on Top

Penguins, Habs Are Bruins' Prey

By SCOTT BUTTON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Picking the top player in the National Hockey League Sunday would be a monumental task.

Phil Esposito, Bobby Hull, Frank Mahovlich and Glenn Hall all had sensational games as their teams gained victories.

Mahovlich scored four goals to lead Detroit Red Wings in a 5-1 victory against Oakland Seals while Hull had two goals and an assist to pace Chicago Black Hawks to a 4-2 triumph against Los Angeles Kings.

Esposito, meanwhile, assisted on five goals to help Boston Bruins to an 8-4 win over Pittsburgh Penguins and Hall made 31 saves in goal as St. Louis Blues blanked Minnesota North Stars 2-0.

In games Saturday, Boston trounced Montreal Canadiens 3, Toronto Maple Leafs took Los Angeles 4-2, Detroit nipped New York Rangers 3-2, Philadelphia Flyers downed Minnesota 4-2, St. Louis walloped Chicago 6-1 and Oakland took Pittsburgh 4-2.

Mahovlich appears headed for his finest season since 1960-61 with Toronto when he scored 48 goals.

The four goals moved Mahovlich into 10th place in all-time NHL scoring with 328 goals—four more than the late Nels Stewart and just six less than Andy Bathgate, now in the Western Hockey League.

The 31-year-old left winger has 25 goals this season. Detroit coach Bill Gadsby said last September he would settle for 35 goals from Mahovlich during the 76-game schedule.

Gordie Howe scored the other Detroit goal and also added an assist. Gerry Ehman picked up the Oakland goal.

The victory was the fourth in a row for the last-place Red Wings and moved them to within one point of fifth-place

FRANK MAHOVLICH

New York in the Eastern Division.

Hull held on to his scoring leadership by picking up the three points against Los Angeles. The left winger has 30 goals and 30 assists for 60 points and a one-point edge over Esposito.

Defenceman Matt Ravlich and Bill Orban scored late for Chicago goals while Bryan Campbell and Eddie Joyal replied for Los Angeles.

With the win the Black Hawks moved into third place in the Eastern Division, one point ahead of Toronto.

Esposito's outstanding playmaking carried the Bruins into first place in the Eastern Division, one point ahead of idle Montreal. The Boston centre assisted on two goals each by Ken Hodge and Ron Murphy and one by Johnny Bucyk.

Other Boston scorers were Johnny Bucyk, Ted Green and Fred Stanfield. Connecting for Pittsburgh were Val Fonteyne, Billy Dea, Billy Harris and Wally Boyer.

Boston is undefeated in its last seven games and has suffered only one loss in its last 14 starts. The Bruins have two games in hand on the Canadiens.

Hall's shutout, the 9th of his NHL career, tied him with team-mate Jacques Plante for the NHL lead in that department.

Waterloo Student Runs Second To Pick of Meet

BOSTON (CP) — George sung was picked as the top athlete of the first big indoor track and field meet of the winter in the United States when he won the two-mile event here Saturday night in a thrilling duel with Bob Finlay of Toronto.

Sports writers voted overwhelmingly for young, a 21-year-old Arizona schoolteacher who captured the race at the Knights of Columbus meet in the Boston Garden in eight minutes, 32.6 seconds, a meet record.

Sung, 25-year-old student at the University of Waterloo, was second in 8:33.4.

The two experienced distance runners waged a classic battle, with Finlay moving in front after two laps and staying in the lead until the final lap, young dogged his heels all the way until the bell lap sounded. Then the American made his move and passed the Canadian on the back straightaway.

Young won the third - place bronze medal in the 1968 Olympics in the 3,000-metre steeplechase and Finlay was 11th in the 5,000 metres.

Finlay clipped off quarter-mile splits of 65.5 seconds, 63, 63.9, 64, 63.8 and 65—times that would have discouraged most competitors.

But with 880 yards left, Young still was on his heels. Finlay tapered his seventh, and next-to-last, 440 yards to 65.8. When the bell clanged to start the showdown lap, the crowd of more than 6,000 moved to its feet.

In the back of straightaway, Young left the curve for the first time, moved outside and challenged with his big kick to win his 10th straight indoor race over a two-season span.

Young's time bettered nearly six seconds off the Boston indoor mark and was just 1.9 seconds off the world record mark set by Jim Beatty in Los Angeles in 1963.

Willie Davenport of South University, Olympic gold medallist in the 110-metre hurdles, equalled the indoor world record of 5.4 seconds in the 45-yard hurdles.

Joan Fisher of Ottawa was second in the women's 440 yard race, won by Esther Story of the United States. The Canadian girl clocked 58.3 seconds, just two-tenths of a second behind the winner. Penny Werthner of Ottawa was third in 1:00.3.

In the Cushing 1,000-yard race, won by Herb Germaine of the New ork Athletic Club in 2:09.3, Toronto's Ergas Leps was fourth in 2:11.4.

Other winners included Sam Bair of Kent State University in the mile (4:08.8); Larry James of Villanova in the 600 (1:11.8); John Pennl, Southern California Striders, in the pole vault (16 ft. 6 in.); Capt. Mel Pender of the U.S. Army in the 50-yard dash (5.5 seconds); and John Rambo, Pacific Coast Club, in the high jump (6-7).

Collingwood High Hopes Undergo Weekend Smearing

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Collingwood Kings' image as hot contenders for the Ontario Hockey Association senior series title this season took a smearing on the weekend.

The Kings dropped two games to lower-division Barrie 4-3 in Kingston Aces Saturday and 8-1 to Belleville Mo-Hawks Sunday. The double defeat left Collingwood in a shaky fourth-place position in the eight-team league with 29 points, one ahead of Oakville Oaks.

Only a 2-1 Oakville defeat by Barrie Flyers Sunday kept the Kings in fourth spot. Orillia Terriers thumped Woodstock A's 4-0 in the only other game Sunday. In a Saturday game, Galt Hornets trounced the seventh-place Mo-Hawks 12-2.

At Kingston, the sixth-place Aces scored three goals in the third period to break a 3-3 tie. Rick Smith, with two, Ron Rawson, John Mercer, Syl Apps Jr. and Bob Clayton scored for the Aces. Collingwood scorers were Fern St. Onge, with two, and Ron Vermette.

Against Belleville, the Kings drove 31 shots on the Mo-Hawks net but could only manage a first-period goal by St. Onge.

Ron Riley paced the Mo-

Hawks with two goals. Others went to Al Ferguson, Davey Jones, Ralph Plane, Lionel Bottley, Wayne McConnell and George Godson.

Barrie consolidated its four-point, first-place lead by nipping the Oaks at Oakville, snapping Oakville's 10-game home-ice win streak.

Bob Delcourt, John McMillan and Bob Forhan scored for the Flyers. Terry Holmes fired the Oakville goal in the second period before 1,640 fans, largest Oakville crowd of the season.

Only 492 fans showed up in Orillia—their smallest crowd of the season—to see veteran Moe Gallard spark the Terriers with two goals 12 seconds apart in the third period.

Don Fuller and John Hall scored the other Orillia goals. Gerry McNamara stopped only 19 shots for his first shutout of the season.

At Galt, Fern Belanger and Howie Dietrick each scored twice in routing the Mo-Hawks before 1,471 fans.

Rio Caron, Billy Hway, Vance Millar, Bob Maxwell, Bob Ertel, Ron Hergott, John Beechey and Ron Smith scored the other Galt goals.

McConnell, Ed Marineau and Riley were the Belleville marksmen.

Bucks Hold Celtics Down

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Milwaukee Bucks saw an 11-point lead dwindle but they still had enough to dump Boston Celtics 114-110 Sunday night in one of three scheduled National Basketball Association games.

Flynn Robinson paced the winners with 26 points while Boston player-coach Bill Russell was outstanding defensively, hauling in 27 rebounds.

In other games Sunday, Eddie Miles' clutch free throws late in the game carried Detroit Pistons past Cincinnati Royals 113-111 and New York Knicks overcame injuries and San Diego Rockets 104-102.

Miles hit for eight of the last 12 Detroit points including four free throws in the waning seconds. Cincinnati's Oscar Robertson led the game scorers with 36 points.

The Knicks, playing without injured Phil Jackson and flu-ridden Walt Frazier as well as Cazzie Russell who missed the game of a reserve obligation, got 36 points from Willis Reed.

Saturday, the Celtics dropped Philadelphia 76ers 111-101, Detroit nipped Cincinnati 118-115, Atlanta Hawks defeated Los Angeles Lakers 104-100, Baltimore Bullets romped 118-107 over Phoenix Suns and New York handed San Francisco Warriors 85-77 in a defensive struggle.

Mo-Hawks Rebound from Rout To Paste Collingwood Visitors

STAFF — Rebounding from a horrendous 12-3 Saturday night thumping at the hands of the Galt Hornets, a playoff-hungry Belleville Mo-Hawk club routed Collingwood's fourth-place Kings 8-1 at home Sunday in their best all-round effort of the Senior "A" season.

Their weekend split left the Mo-Hawks five points back of Kingston Aces in the arch-rivals' battle for the senior loop's sixth and last playoff berth. Two of Belleville's remaining 10 games are with the Aces.

Yesterday's win for the locals marked their highest scoring output of the season, and was also the first time the Mo-Hawks had bested Collingwood in their meetings to date.

The occasion also drew what may be the lowest crowd of the season for the eight-team senior circuit, with only 260 paying admission to watch the Mo-Hawks hem in the frustrated Kings from start to finish.

A perfect deke at the Collingwood blueline at 8.06 by Trenton product Al Ferguson enabled him to work in and fire a 20-footer over goalie Garry Waugh's right shoulder to draw first blood for the Mo-Hawks.

Larry Holmes preserved the lead less than a minute later when the Mo-Hawk goalie robbed high-scoring Joe Hamley from point-blank range.

Some fancy behind-the-net manoeuvring paid off for playing-coach Davey Jones at 12.32, when he poked the puck in a corner vacated by Waugh. Three minutes later, Ron Riley made it 3-0 when his passout from behind the Collingwood net hit a defenceman's skate and deflected in past Waugh.

Ralph Pierce's tip-in of Greg Marchen's point shot at 15.30 made it 4-0 before Collingwood's Fern St. Onge bounced one in off Holmes' pad at 17.36, four seconds after the Mo-Hawks' Bob Taylor was sent off for slashing.

Team captain Lionel Bolty pulled the trigger for a 5-1 Belleville margin at 18.20, when his second goal of the season from the point eluded Waugh.

Bolty and Marchen provided the Mo-Hawks with what may have been their best defensive pairing in any single game this season, clearing loose pucks and keeping opposing forwards honest in front of their net.

The Mo-Hawks continued to spread out the scoring, with Wayne McConnell cashing in on George Godson's passout at 1.32 of the second period, and Riley collecting his second tally of the game midway through the frame to boost the locals into a commanding 7-1 lead. George Godson's forechecking efforts paid off with the Mo-Hawks' eighth goal at 14.17 of the final stanza, poking one in the corner past the Kings' Don Rich, who replaced Waugh at the start of the third period.

Although the Mo-Hawks enjoyed a 37-31 shooting margin, they enjoyed a much greater share of the play, keeping the puck in the Collingwood end for at least 40 minutes of the game.

It was in marked contrast to Saturday night's disaster in Galt, when goals by McConnell, veteran Eddie Marineau and Riley were the only bright moments during the Hornets' 12-goal onslaught. Sub-goalie Claude Carr saw his second action of the season Saturday, replacing an injured Larry Holmes with Belleville trailing 4-0 after the opening period.

Galt poured 50 shots on the Mo-Hawk net in Saturday's rout.

Not Again!

Those must have been Collingwood Kings' goalie Don Rich's sentiments as he saw the Belleville Mo-Hawks' Al Ferguson (19) and Ron Riley making yet another rush in Sunday's Senior A action at the Belleville arena. Rich replaced starting King's goalie Garry Waugh in the third period of a one-sided 8-1 win by the Belleville seniors.

Hopkins, Mitchell Star

City Minors Win Seven of Ten

A successful weekend for Belleville minor hockey teams was marred by three defeats in five games at Peterborough's annual Young Canada Day Tournament Saturday in the Littlack City.

Grant Hopkins and Don Mitchell of the victorious Western Tire juveniles were named first and second stars respectively, and each received a hockey stick for his outstanding play at Peterborough Saturday.

Hopkins with a goal and two assists, and Mitchell with two goals and an assist sparked Belleville to a 5-2 win over Peterborough's Rooney Electric all-stars. Rivers and Beecher tallied the other Belleville goals.

Belleville Kinsmen bantams continued on the winning trail dumping Peterborough 5-1 as Brian Cousins scored two goals and Jim Richardson, Grant Goegan and Andy Ricketts added single goals.

Blake Kerr's Imperial midgets dropped a 2-1 decision to the Peterborough squad with Ricky Meagher scoring Belleville's lone goal.

In other action at Peterborough Saturday, Steve Kirby, Scott James and Peter Crawford scored single goals as Smith Pools peewees suffered a 5-3 defeat; and Andy Lapenette tallied Belleville's only goal as the Food City Novices went down to defeat by a score of 6-1.

Belleville fared better in other weekend action, sweeping five games with the novices scoring two wins, and the peewees, bantams and midgets one each.

Food City novices started the weekend off Friday night with a 5-2 victory over Kingston in the Limestone City. Debby Crawford fired a pair of goals for the winners while single goals went to Randy Hutchinson, Andy Lapenette and Mark Coates.

The novices recovered from Saturday's loss to Peterborough and swamped Port Hope 9-1 Sunday as Randy Hutchinson picked up a hat trick, Andy Lapenette and Tony Meagher scored a pair of goals each and Robby Crawford and John Janopoulos added a goal apiece.

Steve Kirby led a Smith Pools peewee scoring binge Sunday with five goals as the locals trounced Picton to the tune of 11-2. Eric Powell added two goals and singletons went to Tim Whalen, Peter Crawford, Ricky Culkin and Barry Morris.

Danny Lapenette and Robbie Foster netted two goals each and Russ Harrington added a single goal Sunday to lend the Kinsmen bantams to a 5-2 win over the Kingston Lakeshore Kinsmen.

Goaltender Paul Muldoon played a standout game Sunday as Blake Kerr's Imperial midgets defeated Wellington 5-0 and scored their first shutout in 22 games. The Belleville scoring was spread around as Rickey and Terry Meagher, Greg Scarlett, Gary Thompson and Mike Rollins each counted a goal for the Imperial midgets.

Defeat NCC, Quinte

"Tigresses" Win Hoop Title

STAFF—The female Tigers, or rather tigresses of Trenton High School captured the Bay of Quinte Girls' bantam basketball tournament championship Saturday at Moira Secondary School by defeating Nicholson Catholic College 16-9 in the championship final.

Nancy Jennett popped six points to lead the way for the winners, while Katherine Acheson netted five, Debbie McPherson three and Linda Carter two.

Scoring for Nicholson were Debbie Donohoe with four points, Mary Buckley with three and Janice Lucas with two.

Trenton drew a bye in the first round of the seven team tournament while Nicholson defeated Napanee 16-10, BCI took Moira 12-5 and Quinte trounced Centennial 20-5.

The three winners moved with Trenton into the championship round while the three losers entered the consolation round. Trenton earned a berth in the championship final by defeating Quinte 18-8, and opposed Nicholson who eliminated BCI by a score of 6-4.

Centennial drew a bye into the consolation final and were pitted against Moira who eliminated Napanee by the score of 20-4.

Moira coach Miss Egan, who was also the convener of the tournament, guided her squad to a 13-8 win over Centennial and the consolation championship.

BCI's cheerleaders captured their third consecutive Bay of Quinte championship in the annual cheerleading contest held prior to the basketball finals.

WANTED MALE

TRY SALES WITH A SALARY

Do you feel that the effort you put into your work has little effect on your income? Have you considered a sales career with income directly related to effort? Have you hesitated because you felt that there was no security in selling, that you had to be a "born salesman" to succeed?

If so, we would invite you to inquire about our "Sales With a Salary". We provide you with a basic salary plus usual staff benefits the first year and salary plus commission incentive the second year. You need not be a "born salesman" — we provide basic sales training and field supervision to ensure your success.

To qualify for this plan, you must have grade 12 education or equivalent; have a successful sales experience, application as an honest, reliable and conscientious person, willing to work hard and study to improve your income and vocational status. Work Location — Belleville.

Please write in confidence giving details to —

NERO PLAYED THE BAGPIPES?

Although we think of the bagpipes as being a Scottish instrument, it was very popular in India and the Roman Empire . . . Nero played one. Made of a leather bag and reed pipes, they were first used by martial folk and military instruments in Scotland and Ireland.

Whether you wish to sell a good set of bagpipes or any other no longer needed instruments at your house, rely on the Intelligencer Ad to do it for you! Call 962-9171 and place yours today.

To Your Good Health

Possible to Drink Too Much

By Dr. George C. Thosteson

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Is it possible to drink liquids in such volume that a person could literally inwardly drown?

Also what should be the daily average liquid intake of a normal person? — G. W.

Yes, it is possible to drink too much water — but your fate of the world drowns isn't quite correct. Drowning implies that water has filled the lungs or has shut off the passage of oxygen to the lungs.

When one drinks too much water, the water does not get into the lungs and does not shut off air.

Rather, excessive intake of water (into the stomach) can distort the sodium level in the body and lead to swelling and mental confusion.

The chance of this happening in ordinary life is remote. When it happens, it is usually when water is forced — that is, when a patient obviously needs fluids — in the presence of faulty kidney function. The kidneys cannot dispose of the fluid as rapidly as they should. In a normal individual, this does not happen because surplus water will be met by an increased release through the kidneys, in the form of urine.

As a general thing, there is more chance of a person getting too little fluid than too much.

Ordinarily, however, thirst is a thoroughly reliable guide, and you don't have to worry about the exact amount you need. If you are thirsty, you will drink enough for your needs.

The amount you need isn't always the same. In hot weather you perspire. Exercise causes loss of water, both as perspiration and water vapor which you exhale. In cooler weather and when you are not exercising strenuously, you don't need as much.

It averages out to a need of about 2½ quarts of water a day for an adult, but this does not mean that you have to drink that much. Fruits, vegetables and meats contain a great deal of moisture. For that one example, consider potato which doesn't look dried powdered form. Note how much water has to be added to bring it to the consistency of mashed potatoes.

Thus a large portion of your daily water ration comes from what you eat instead of what you drink. You get still more in soups, juices, coffee, tea and so on. Two or three glasses of water a day, actually drunk as plain water, is generally plenty; and folks who drink a good deal of coffee, tea, soft drinks (or hard ones) may not need even that much in the form of plain water. They get the fluid with the various flavorings they fancy.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I have to take one-quarter grain of phenobarbital for my heart, as I have many premature ventricular contractions and palpitations. I am supposed to take one tablet in the morning and another before retiring. Is it safe to take it indefinitely? — N.Y.

That small dose is not harmful and can be taken as long as it is needful to you.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Can an operation be done on a person who has cirrhosis of the liver? — H. R.

If you mean an operation to cure the cirrhosis, the answer is no. The liver has degenerated, and removing part of it would not improve anything.

If there is bleeding from varicose veins in the lower esophagus, which can result from cirrhosis — there is an operation to shunt the blood flow away from that area. That is done to correct the bleeding but has no effect on the cirrhosis.

Dr. Thosteson welcomes all mail from his readers, but because of the great volume received daily, he is unable to answer individual letters. Dr. Thosteson chooses letters in his column whenever possible.

Rylstone and District Personals

RYLSTONE — Stevie Thomson returned home with his cousin, Nathan Sheaff for a few days.

Beth, Scott, and Jeffrey Anderson, of Seymour West, spent a few days of their Christmas holidays with their grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Aaron Anderson and visited their cousins, The Thomson family.

Mr. and Mrs. Murray Meikle, John, their son, Cameron and his wife, Dora and Danny, were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Jack Chenowyth and family, at Peterborough.

Mrs. Elmer Anderson spent a few days last week, with her son, Wayne Anderson, and his wife, at Sudbury.

The family of the late Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Ray held their New Year's celebration in the Institute Hall at Rylstone, at noon, on New Year's Day. Present were: Mr. and Mrs. Lindsay Anderson (Jennie) and Linda; Mr. and Mrs. Roy Fry, and families; Mr. and Mrs. Fred Fry, Patricia, and Jim. Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Barnett of Belleville were also guests.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Spencer and family, her brother, Mrs. Clora Lisle, of Stanwood and other members of the Lisle family, around forty all celebrated New Year's at the Institute Hall at Rylstone, on Wednesday evening.

Mr. and Mrs. William Morton Jr. and sons Rickey and Rodney of Oakville, were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Wilfred Morton, Sr. and Bob, and Mr. and Mrs. Ed Stephens and family on New Year's Day.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Reid entertained his mother, Mrs. Essie Reid, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Reid, of Rylstone; Mrs. Don Petley, of Churchill Falls, Labrador; and Mr. and Mrs. Walter Watson of Petherick's Corners.

Kathy Thomson spent a few days last week at Sharbot Lake, with her friend, Lori Apps, and her parents, Rev. and Mrs. Gordon Apps.

Mrs. Donald Petley, of Churchill Falls, Labrador, visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Percy Reid here over the Christmas holidays, was rushed to Campbellford Memorial Hospital, on Saturday, where she underwent surgery for acute appendicitis.

Wilfred Spencer and Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Barnett called on their aunt and uncle, Mr. and Mrs. Percy Mumby at Springbrook, last week. Mrs. Mumby has recently returned home from Belleville General Hospital.

Dressage—an Olympic Event That Doesn't Race the Clock

VANCOUVER (CP) — Most Olympic events are decided by the hundredth or tenth of stop-watches, but for an equestrian competitor you could measure time with an hourglass.

Time is a gentle companion for Ijsee Fischer-Credo, not an adversary.

Only experience makes a world-class dressage rider, she says. There are no shortcuts.

"There is no luck attached to dressage like there is in jumping," says Mrs. Fischer-Credo. "You have to have good rides and bad but the best performers are always the best. It takes years to get to the top."

And last fall in Mexico City she proved she had arrived.

Miss Fischer-Credo, aboard Marius, a nine-year-old, placed 15th among 36 competitors at the Olympics. She earned 723 points, an improvement of 135 points over her Tokyo performance in 1964.

But the two also showed they were the best dressage performers in North and South America. Had it been the Pan-American Games, a gold medal would have been awarded.

Dressage is the ballet of horsemanship. Horse and rider must master an intricate series of steps and manoeuvres like a figure-skater.

It takes roughly four years to develop a grand prix dressage horse and another two years to groom him for competition, says Miss Fischer-Credo.

"The majority of riders who competed at the Olympics were over 30 and the oldest was 66," said Miss Fischer-Credo, a blonde and relative youngster in the sport at 36 years of age.

Miss Fischer-Credo began riding when she was a 10-year-old growing up in war-troubled Germany, but Tokyo was her first crack at international competition. There she finished 18th in a field of 22.

She finished fifth in a field of 11 on a borrowed mount at the Pan-American games in Winnipeg in 1967, but at the time a trip to Mexico seemed out of the question.

For Olympic competition you need a fully trained grand prix dressage horse—and they are about as hard to come by as a rare stamp.

But horse-lovers are incurable romantics, and one of them came to the rescue. Mrs. L. R. Scott, a Vancouver resident in her 80s, gave Miss Fischer-Credo what amounted to a blank cheque to buy the horse she wanted.

So Ijsee went to Germany, the cradle of dressage, and contacted Willi Schulthies, the great dressage master who coached Canada's 1967 Pan-Am team, and returned with Marius—a bargain at $20,000.

Marius arrived last December and Miss Fischer-Credo began what she called "getting together with him"—mastering the subtle communications between horse and rider.

Since different trainers use different training "aids" the "buttons" on Marius were in different places than those on her previous mounts.

By the Olympics she was communicating beautifully with Marius, but the pairing suffered a lack of competition.

"It's a big jump to the Olympics," she says. "Next year I hope we might go to Europe to compete. We need that kind of competition."

Time Runs Out For City Juniors

Time is running out on the cellar-dwelling Belleville Mohawks and with it the chances making the playoffs in the six team Junior "B" league.

The Morrisons travel to Cobourg tonight in quest of two points in a vital encounter with the Cougars, who are tied with Kingston for the fourth and last playoff spot. Belleville trails Cobourg and Kingston by seven points, and will have to overhaul both clubs to catch a playoff berth.

Belleville is coming off a 8-1 loss to the league leading Oshawa Crushmen Friday night in Belleville and have only nine games left in which to overtake the Cougars and Frontenacs.

Tonight's mission will be made more difficult by the fact that the Morrisons will be without the services of several players who are currently writing high school exams.

To compensate for this loss coach Floyd Crawford will likely dress several players from the Belleville Minor Hockey system in an attempt to strengthen his squad.

Game time is eight o'clock and the Belleville youngsters could use the vocal support of local fans in their uphill battle to bring playoff hockey to the shores of the Moira River.

Scots' Fierce Soccer Pride Steals Some English Limelight

LONDON (CP) — The potent forces of nationalism stirring in Scotland are reflected in a new restlessness in soccer north of the border.

England tends to steal the limelight in the game, and that rankles with those fired with the spirit of Bonnie Prince Charlie.

Scottish soccer traditionally has retained its independence from the Sassenachs.

Scotland has its own Football Association, two pro divisions separate from the four English ones, and a national squad which competes against the rest of Britain and foreign clubs.

The Scots also fight for their own national honor in the World Cup and other international competitions.

In proportion to its population, Scotland has eight times as many soccer clubs as England. There are 37 league clubs to 5,200,000 people compared with 92 clubs to 48,000,000 in England.

A consequence of this is that variations of quality and ability in the Scottish divisions are wider than in the more equally-matched English groupings. A team at the bottom of the Scottish Second Division has to play clubs at the top of that division which might be two divisions above it by English standards.

With fewer major clubs, a concentration of talent makes it easy for raiding parties from south of the River Tweed to come hunting for new recruits to English soccer.

The handful of internationally renowned clubs such as Glasgow's Celtic and Rangers have to compete with two or three times as many English clubs of equal stature.

Those on the next dozen rungs of the ladder have to match pay and conditions with perhaps 30 or 40 English clubs.

However, the Scots, true to their thrifty tradition, are mostly in better financial shape than their English rivals.

For example, Dundee United has sold three players to English clubs for a total of £269,000 in the last five years. Dundee also nurtured as youngsters two standouts currently with English clubs: Charlie Cooke of London Chelsea and Ron Yeats of Liverpool.

Other clubs also rely on Scottish talent to strengthen their attack and defensive lines as well.

Now the experts are saying that Scotland has been exporting a commodity that it needs itself. They urge a shakeup in administration which will encourage Scots clubs to be more adventurous, persuading more players to stay on in Scotland and even attracting some back from self-imposed exile.

A new league arrangement with three divisions, one with 16 clubs and two with 12 each, is the most favored idea to enable teams of varying ability to find their level.

A stronger Scottish FA with powers to slice through time-wasting red tape is also proposed.

Such changes could improve the chances of Scottish fans fulfilling their dream about keeping the World Cup in Britain in 1970. Only this time it would go to Edinburgh, not London.

Picton Kept Adding

Artillmetic progression solved the problem for Picton Merchants last night in Picton as they defeated Napanee Mortangs 9-3 in an Eastern Ontario Intermediate Hockey League game.

The Merchants scored two goals in the first period, three in the second and four in the third, while limiting the visitors to a goal in each period.

Picton outshot Napanee 42-33 and got two goals each from "Moe" Hunter and Roland Berry, plus singletons from Gary Baker, Fred James, Jim Guernsey, George Jacklin and Joe Scott.

Earl Smith was a pair and Ron Vanalstine with a single goal replied for the Mustangs.

Truth Beats Fiction

Namath, Jets Provide Exciting Television Show

NEW YORK (AP) — Truth beats fiction every time, so maybe New York Jets should be nominated for the best drama of the television year, and Joe Namath put up as an Emmy candidate for best performance in a single drama.

The 16-7 victory of the football team in Miami Sunday afternoon was, for millions of viewers, a show that made the latest exploit of Mission: Impossible seem anticlimactic.

NBC, handling the camera work in the game between the Baltimore Colts and the Jets, turned in a solid, if minimalist job as did commentators Curt Gowdy, Kyle Rote and Al DeSogatis. But the stars were the players. From the first touchdown by the underdog Jets through the final push by the Colts, the Super Bowl was exciting television.

The weekend in TV terms, was almost routine except for the football game.

The Smothers Brothers Comedy Hour, on CBS, started out on a low note—dismal Nixon jokes—but picked up steam when a number of the brothers' writing staff appeared to perform their own material.

There was a fresh quality about the young talent, if not all the material.

Mission: Impossible, the real one, had one of its patent neat, complicated plots. It combined the wildly improbable with electronic gimmicks and near disaster to provide a mildly amusing hour.

Ed Sullivan presented a clutch of acts from Las Vegas, entertaining enough, but the thing that occasioned more living room commitment than even Don Rickles' insult monologue was the sight of our host with sideburns longer than those on some of his singing acts.

Two Canadian MPs Make Pleas For World Action in Biafra

WASHINGTON (CP) — A Canadian member of Parliament said Saturday that the world has to "get away from dogmatic abstracts" in Biafra and "face the fact" that it is wrong to try to maintain the Nigerian federation by military strength.

Andrew Brewin, NDP member of Parliament for Toronto Greenwood, said that in many cases federation was a good thing—"Canada couldn't exist without federation." He added, however, that any solution based on deprivation of a group, whose viability has been shown, "seems to us to be a mistake."

Brewin spoke at a day-long, informal conference on Biafra which also was addressed by David MacDonald, Conservative member of Parliament for the Prince Edward Island constituency of Egmont.

The two flew here from London to report on their recent trip to Nigeria at the conference sponsored by Operation Outrage, the North American coalition for Biafran relief. They flew back to Ottawa during the weekend.

MacDonald said the use of starvation as a weapon of warfare is well known in history but in the case of Biafra, the breakaway Nigerian territory, the technology of the 20th century has made the modern blockade complete.

There was a moral question as to whether the international community through the United Nations or some other method, should intervene in the situation.

Many people, he said, were concerned that intervention would establish a dangerous precedent but "if we allow this to continue we will be establishing a much more serious precedent of concern to all of us."

Death Penalty Was Discussed For Three-time Drug Peddlers

VANCOUVER (CP) — Health Minister Ralph Loffmark of British Columbia said Saturday the idea of the death penalty for three-time drug traffickers was definitely discussed at a meeting of provincial health ministers.

Matthew Dymond, Ontario health minister, and Dr. George Johnson, his Manitoba counterpart, said Saturday that either they were not present or could not recall any such discussion by the ministers.

But Mr. Loffmark said in an interview the discussion did indeed take place, although he could not recall whether it had been at a meeting in Quebec City or one in Ottawa.

He suggested that social gatherings surrounding the talks may have caused "amnesiac" since delegates were in and out of the meetings and possibly one or more missed the discussions.

Mr. Lorrmark said the ministers were thinking only of big-time organized traffickers when the suggestion was made for the death penalty. The penalty now applies only to killers of policemen and prison guards.

WINNIPEG (CP) — Federal Health Minister John Munro says he is not prepared to discuss what penalties should be applied to illicit drug traffickers.

He was commenting in an interview Saturday on statements by Ralph Loffmark, British Columbia's health minister, who said the death penalty was discussed at a November federal-provincial health conference.

Mr. Munro, here for the Manitoba Liberal party annual meeting that ended Saturday, would not confirm or deny the matter had been discussed.

He said he believes no mercy should be shown traffickers who are not users but sell drugs for a profit.

Riot Damage Put at $26,000 At Ulster Town Near Border

NEWRY (CP) — Police reported Sunday that £10,000 (about $26,000) worth of damage was done in this Northern Ireland border town Saturday when brick-throwing demonstrators broke into government offices and battled riot police.

The civil rights disorders in this town near the border between Northern Ireland and the Republic of Ireland were a renewal of Roman Catholic-Protestant disorders that have brought crisis to the North in the last three months.

Charges of disorderly behavior were filed against 18 persons after the rioting.

Five police trucks were destroyed by fire, one tipped into a canal and a seventh crashed into a wall. Ten policemen and 18 civilians were injured.

The trouble flared when police attempted to turn the civil rights marchers, mainly Roman Catholic students, away from a Protestant part of the town. Northern Ireland's Catholic minority contends it has been the target of job and housing discrimination at will.

Home Minister William Long accused the People's Democracy group, which organized the march, of aiming to create civil strife and disrupt community relations.

Patrick O'Hanlon, 24-year-old schoolmaster and an official of the organization's Newry branch, said the police show of strength was incitement to people determined to be peaceful.

Mexican Indian Creosote Tea May Help Cancer Sufferers

SALT LAKE CITY, Utah (Reuters) — A Mexican Indian tea brew has pointed researchers here toward a possible treatment of some kinds of cancer, it was reported Sunday.

Dr. Hugh Hogle of the Utah University College of Medicine said the potential treatment came to light when an 83-year-old man suffering from cancer of the face and neck showed signs of recovery after drinking a tea brew he learned of on a visit to Mexico.

The tea was made from the chaparral plant which is made from creosote bush and dwarf evergreen oak. Dr. Hogle told the Utah chapter of the American College of Surgeons.

Researchers isolated a drug from the brew called nordihydro-guiaretic acid, or NDGA, which has found effective against cancer cells in test tube cultures, Dr. Hogle said.

He emphasized he is cautious about the prospects of using the drug to treat cancers.

Many of 32 patients given NDGA to treat pain died, he said "so we know NGDA is limited in spectrum."

Three of 26 patients with malignant cancers experienced a reduction in size of their tumors after treatment with NDGA, he said.

Dr. Hogle said NDGA apparently has no toxic effects, unlike some other cancer treating drugs, which cause nausea and loss of hair.

Another UBC Head Quits Post

VANCOUVER (CP) — Shock and dismay were the initial reactions of British Columbia education authorities and politicians Saturday when told of the resignation of Dr. Kenneth Hare as University of British Columbia president.

Dr. Patrick McTaggart-Cowan, former president of Simon Fraser University, said: "Dr. Hare was a good man and a great scholar, but he was put in an impossible position."

Dr. Hare, who flew to England Jan. 4, said in his letter of resignation that he had found the job as president "impossible for a man of my temperament."

He is the fourth university president in reign in B.C. in the last two years. Dr. John Macdonald resigned as U.B.C. president June 30, 1967, Dr. McTaggart-Cowan left Simon Fraser last May and Dr. Malcolm Taylor quit as head of the University of Victoria last June.

Dr. Hare, 49, is a geographer and meteorologist of international stature. He plans to return to teaching and research, possibly in Britain.

Jean Dixon's Horoscope

For January 14

Your birthday today: You face a year in which conflicting urges must be reconciled. The way you want would be to pursue a narrow path, only to find yourself psychically dulled. Today's natives generally prefer a certain approach to life, strong opinions.

ARIES (Mar. 21 — Apr. 19): Self-improvement programs and experimentation pay off in your regular work. Let well enough alone concerning the affairs of your friends and neighbors.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 — May 20): Group financial efforts make progress. New methods, conservatively applied to your own affairs, will produce profits. Put something aside for savings.

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): The more the merrier today. Get everybody in on the project and keep them talking while they work. Original ideas (before you call them that, be sure they are) pay off readily. Romance flourishes.

CANCER (June 21 — July 22): Exploit your advantages (within the limitations of good taste). You are well received today. You are due a fair result. Quit early and change the subject altogether for the evening.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22): Today is one of those charming adventures into the whimsical, where the world is your oyster if you will see it thus. Get the most out of it, as there is a core of truth behind even the wildest fantasy.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 — Sept. 22): Invest time and a bit of money in making home life more comfortable. Begin studies which will improve your competence at your work or bring you the skills for a higher reward.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 — Oct. 22): Last night's conversations pop up in your mind this morning as workable ideas. Try for co-operation from old friends. Put in some time with exercise.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23—Nov. 21): Rely on your past performance to support you today. Settle group arrangements in conference, and get it signed. Shopping or odd items can be fortunate later in the day.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): What time you move is more important than some of the details. Time your move to fit the moods of your partners. Expect garrulous conversation all day.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 — Jan. 19): Confidential operations are indicated for today. Negotiations for institutional business go better than expected. Work for older relatives also flows smoothly.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb. 18): If you are fully informed on what is happening in distant areas of your field, you are at a favorable vantage point now. Present your suggestions briefly and with conviction.

PISCES (Feb. 19 — Mar. 20): Personal attentions are on their way into your awareness. This is the day to send letters. You are advised to prepare for guests in the near future, perhaps relatives.

Warm Battery Aids Starting

A reader writes: "I drive a '66 Chevrolet six which has been thoroughly tuned for the winter, but in my area the temperature sometimes drops to 20 below. The nature of my work is such that failure to arrive on time could cost me my job. Could you give me a list of cold weather starting tips?"

Two of the most helpful accessories for sub-zero starting are a block warmer and a small domestic battery charger. The block warmer aids starting by raising the engine coolant temperature during the night and engine wear is minimized during the warm-up period. The accessory battery charger, as well as keeping the battery fully charged, tends to raise the temperature of the battery. This is an advantage, as a battery at zero is about half its normal capacity. If hydro is not available to operate these accessories and it is known that the mercury is going to drop, removing the battery and placing it by the furnace about doubles the chances of starting. A pair of battery booster cables stored in the trunk at all times can help you or a fellow motorist out of a tight spot. Either buy a spare booster battery or ask a neighbor who did get started to give you a boost from his car's battery. The use of light SW30 engine oil is a terrific starting aid in sub - zero weather.

Starting procedure is important. While most manuals tell us to depress the gas pedal and use the order to place the automatic choke in the rich position, I have found that pumping the pedal three or four times when extremely cold sometimes helps. How much depends on the make of car and how cold the engine is. When a well tuned engine fails to catch after a few attempts, it may well be flooded and to continue to crank may only make things worse. A fast way to cure a flooded engine is to remove the air cleaner and lock the automatic choke open with a screwdriver to allow fresh air to enter the combustion chamber. Then push the gas pedal to the floor and try again. Have your mechanic demonstrate how simple it is to remove the air cleaner and open the choke. Should the engine fail to start after following this procedure, either let it sit for an hour or so before trying again, or call a service truck. However, if you follow the suggestions outlined here and the engine is well tuned, the chances of starting failure are extremely remote.

NOTE: Letters from readers with hard-to-pin-point car problems are most welcome, but please include year and model, number of cylinders, mileage, standard or automatic transmission, power equipment, brief outline of previous repairs and a self-addressed stamped envelope.

LaMarsh Repeats Charge Separatists Control Radio-Canada

OTTAWA (CP) — Former state secretary Judy LaMarsh says charges reported in her memoirs that separatists control Radio-Canada have been confirmed by fresh information.

In a television interview Sunday night on the CTV program WA, Miss LaMarsh was questioned about statements in her book on kickbacks from companies to CBC employees.

She said the kickback charges were allegedly contained in a report to former CBC president J. Alphonse Ouimet. She did not know whether the same situation still continued.

"But I know that some of the charges, such as the capture of Radio-Canada by separatists, was even confirmed as long ago as yesterday. . . ."

She said she had a call from a CBC employee in Toronto who confirmed that this same situation still exists.

Asked who the separatists are, Miss LaMarsh said they include people on news desks and those writing programs for Radio-Canada, the French-language division of the publicly-owned CBC.

She was not suggesting that this was being done with the support of the Quebec government.

"But I think that those who do push for a separated Quebec are working in the same way as people in occupied countries during the war-the same way as underground workers in every where do-they use whatever influence they have in their small sphere to earn their own end."

Miss LaMarsh was asked whether there was anything in her memoirs, called Judy LaMarsh: Memoirs of a Bird in a Gilded Cage, which she would like to take back.

She suggested in reply that she is not happy with the picture she left of former prime minister Lester B. Pearson.

"I think what I'd like to take back is that people sort of think I hate Mink-that he was a likeable character. I don't. I loved the man and I love him still. But I wish he hadn't been prime minister."

Stewardess Defies Man with Shotgun, Foils Hijacking

MIAMI (AP) — An attempted hijacking of a Delta Airlines jet en route to Miami from Detroit was foiled early today when a stewardess disregarded a passenger's shotgun and slammed the cabin door in his face, police said.

The attempt came hours after the victims of two weekend hijackings had returned from Cuba.

The Dade County sheriff's department said local and federal officers arrested Kenneth Earl McPeek, 31, of Orchard Lake, Mich., when the plane landed at Miami International Airport. His three-year-old son was taken into protective custody.

Officers said they went to the Stewardess Lynne Sargeant of Miami Springs, Fla., told authorities she was accosted by a passenger who placed a shotgun in the pit of her stomach. The passenger told her to tell the captain he was going to Havana.

Instead, police said, Miss Sargeant slammed the door of the cockpit and locked it. The would-be hijacker apparently gave up the idea of a forced flight to Havana at that point, officers said.

A Convair jet of the Peruvian national airline APSA was 10 minutes out of Miami when a gun-brandishing man took over. Capt. George Wagner, 46, of Pompano Beach, Fla., turned the jet toward Havana. But a public address system failure kept him from informing his passengers. The plane carried 110 persons, including about 80 Argentine students en route to the United States in an exchange program.

University of Havana students were bused to the airport to mingle with the Argentines.

The Cuban and Argentine students travelled about Havana in buses then were driven to Varadero, a coastal city, to spend the night in a luxury hotel and await return to Miami aboard a chartered plane sent by the U.S. state department.

A dozen hours after the Peruvian plane landed in Cuba a man with close-cropped red hair boarded a United Air Lines jet at Jacksonville, Fla. Shortly after it roared off toward Miami, he suggested he would like to go to Havana, A stewardess shrugged off the idea.

The man drew a revolver from a briefcast to enforce his request.

Millions Reported Stolen

NEW YORK (AP) — The new York Times says thievery and administrative confusion in New York city's $122,000,000-a-year anti-poverty program have cheated the poor of millions of dollars.

The newspaper says one major plot involved the theft of $1,750,000 and possibly more by a group of young men within the city's Human Resources Administration who rigged computers to print phoney cheques. The four were charged with grand larceny, the paper says.

Another case concerned a plan to transfer four cheques totalling more than $1,000,000 from HRA accounts to a secret bank account in Zurich, Switzerland.

"It's so bad it will take 10 years to find out what's really been going on inside the Human Resources Administration," The Times quotes an assistant district attorney as saying.

The HRA was formed 27 months ago to run the city's anti-poverty and welfare programs.

Nixon Sure to Stay As Liberals' Leader

TORONTO (CP) — The Ontario Liberal leadership convention in Hamilton March 28-29 appears likely to be little more than a formality to acclaim Robert Nixon.

Mr. Nixon said in an interview Sunday night he will seek re-election to the leadership he won unopposed in 1967 and added that "I don't anticipate any opposition."

Earlier, Deputy Leader Vernon Singer said he does not plan to contest the leadership.

"I'm supporting Bob Nixon 100 per cent," Mr. Singer said in an interview. "We're all satisfied with him and think he'll be the next premier of the province."

Clem Nelman, who announced the leadership convention as a news conference Sunday, said he did not think anyone would challenge Mr. Nixon, but added that his office forces him to remain uncommitted on the leadership issue.

Mr. Nelman said the leadership convention, which will be held in conjunction with the party's annual meeting, is expected to attract 1,000 delegates.

He said he hopes the meeting will approve the hiring of three full-time organizers to concentrate on preparing for the next provincial election in south-western, eastern and Northern Ontario.

The Liberals suffered a drop in their popular vote in the October, 1967 election, but increased their representation at Queen's Park to 23 members from 20 and maintained their position as the official opposition.

Mr. Nixon said Sunday night that the Liberal ranks were obscured by those of the New Democratic Party, which increased its seats to 20 from eight.

Co-ed Schools Opposed

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

I believe in grammar school segregation. But by sex, not by race. This would solve two sticky problems at once.

Much of the latent opposition to school integration by race is the fear (justified or not) on the part of white parents about their girls. At the unconscious rot of all racism lies the distase for miscegenation. This feeling is irrational, or sub-rational, and therefore it is not amenable to logic, reason, or persuasion.

At the same time, there are good educational reasons for separating the boys and the girls in the lower grades. Girls mature faster and learn better than boys do, at least until high school. Every test in every school has shown this to be true.

Girls also mature faster biologically and socially. Most conventional schooling is geared to feminine standards, and this is why far more boys than girls become dropouts, spiritually if not physically.

Young boys require a different kind of schooling than girls do. Our present system stresses conformity, neatness, quietness, patience, docility, and gross motor skills — all of which appear sooner in girls, and some of which are distinctly feminine traits.

Boys should be taught in different ways from girls. Their education should be more kinetic; allowing them to move around, to touch, to make models, to work in smaller groups, to argue more, to exhibit more independence and self-determination.

Teaching should be adjusted to the realities of gender, and of the maturational development — instead, we try to adjust the children to the teaching process, and crush those who won't easily fit into it. Since the process was originally designed on a feminine bias, it is not surprising that young boys tend to do so much more poorly than girls.

Separation by sex into different classes, and even different schools when feasible, would ease both the racial conflict and the educational strain. It would bring true peers together, and boys of both races could work out a decent and wholesome relationship without the stress of sexual anxieties on the racial level, or sexual competition on the academic level.

But this would be both too simple and too revolutionary for the public school system, which prefers cumbersome solutions that solve nothing, but merely antagonize all parents and estrange all youths. The demand for "separate" but equal" education can be met with justice only when the boys are separated from the girls, and all get equal (which does not mean identical) opportunity to maximize their abilities.

Newfie Skipper Crosses Atlantic

ST. THOMAS (AP) — A Newfoundland skipper who sailed a battered, 32-foot ketch into the harbor of St. Thomas in the Virgin Islands on New Year's Day —after a solo Atlantic crossing —is trying to decide what to do next.

Meanwhile, 50-year-old captain Tom Dower of St. John's is busy fixing the rigging of his ketch Newfoundlander. When the boat reached this scenic Virgin Island port it had two broken mast tips—the result of a mishap on the high seas with a well-meaning Japanese freighter.

Dower told a reporter for the St. Thomas Daily News the Japanese freighter had pulled alongside to give him some supplies—including badly needed fresh water.

But a high wave slapped the two vessels together smashing the mast tips of the Newfoundlander.

The newspaper says Dower reached the Virgin Islands a full 2½ months after leaving Newfoundland for St. Thomas—via the Canary Islands on the other side of the Atlantic.

The veteran boatsman had made the same trip once before, and on that occasion the voyage took just 49 days.

Dower was in the Royal Navy during the Second World War and has logged years of seagoing experience in the merchant marine.

These cruises seem to have given him a confidence that even a storm cannot shake.

Dower says that during one of the numerous gales that buffeted his ketch while en route to St. Thomas, he felt so relaxed that he stretched out on the deck and composed a poem.

The 14-verse poem ends with a line that echoes the quiet philosophy of many a man who braves the sea alone.

"Where a man will reach out in the darkness alone, and feel there the hand of God."

LBJ Commences Concluding Week

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Johnson starts his final week in office today with some prospect that he might leave to his successor a budget of around $195,000,000,000 to operate the government in the fiscal year beginning July 1.

In a televised and broadcast appearance before a joint session of Congress Tuesday at 9 p.m. EST, Johnson will report on the State of the Union as he views it after more than six years in office.

Although he can point to a record run of prosperity during his tenure, Johnson may feel impelled to warn against the rising wave of inflation that has pushed bank loan interest rates to a record high and is reflected in the soaring cost of living.

At home, Johnson can point to his administration's programs to grapple with the problems of the breakdown of law and order, racial rioting, decaying cities, water and air pollution, and poverty.

In the international area, the president can cite the prospect that the beleaguered Paris talks eventually may lead to an end to the fighting in Vetnam. He can caution that the explosive situation in the Middle East is a potential spark for a general war, but he must defer to the incoming president, Richard M. Nixon, any definitive answer to the Dec. 30 Soviet note proposing UN Security Council action to bring about peace talks.

Johnson is expected to review U.S. achievements in space exploration and to recommend full-scale continuance of that program.

But it is the budget message, which will follow his farewell report, that has been giving the president the most trouble during his final days in the White House.

Taxes Fight Vital

LONDON (CP) — Premier John Robarts of Ontario said today the tax fight between the provinces and the Canadian government has reached the stage of "one of the most serious confrontations" in Confederation history.

Predicting that Ontario and other provinces will win their battle, Robarts repeated his demand that the federal administration turn over a bigger slice of the Canadian "growth" tax field—personal and corporation incomes taxes.

Prime Minister Trudeau already has indicated, in a speech to students last weekend, that he will refuse to do so, unless the provinces take on extra constitutional responsibilities carried out by the federal administration.

Marijuana Hijacking Attempted

TORONTO (CP) — Police seized about $15,000 worth of marijuana and LSD Monday night when an attempted hijacking of drugs ended in a shooting at a Toronto apartment.

Ten persons were charged on drug counts or wounding after five men forced their way into the apartment of a Toronto man in what police think was an attempt to rob him of drugs.

When the two men living in the apartment tried to shove the intruders out the door, police said one of the hijackers fired a gun wounding a member of his group and one of the men in the apartment.

Hellyer Aims At Red Tape

TORONTO (CP) — Main aim of the recommendations by the federal housing inquiry later this month will be to free the housing industry from administrative red tape, Transport Minister Paul Hellyer said Monday night.

Mr. Hellyer told the national conference of the Canadian Home Manufacturers' Association that his inquiry has identified a surfeit of regulations enforced by three levels of government as the prime cause of Canada's housing problem.

The seven-member inquiry's report will recommend ways of eliminating the red tape through seeking countrywide acceptance of federal building standards and agreement among federal, provincial and municipal governments to cut out overlapping and conflicting rules.

The federal inquiry, which has studied the problem for four months, found "frightening" examples of "the elaborate obstacle course put in the way of anyone who wants to originate something out of the ordinary in the way people should live."

At all levels of government, "the attitude has been one of control, prohibition and protection."

British Citizenship Devalued Is Claim

LONDON (CP-Reuters) — President Milton Obote of Uganda today accused Britain of devaluing its citizenship as a dispute blazed up over Commonwealth immigration.

The president, attending the 28-nation Commonwealth prime ministers conference, told reporters there now are two types of British citizen — white and colored.

The angry president announced that Uganda was boycotting all meetings of a special 17-nation group of conference officials dealing with immigration and citizenship problems. Delegates said Zambia, Tanzania and Kenya also were absent when the group held its second meeting this morning.

At the heart of the dispute lies the fate of thousands of East African Asians who hold British passports. As non-citizens they are being squeezed out of their businesses by new restrictive trade laws and Britain fears they may seek to come here en masse.

Obote said: "A white Briton who may be anywhere in the world can come here at any time—a colored Briton cannot."

Obote was asked what would happen if Britain refused to renew British passports held by 40,000 Asians in Uganda.

"If they fail to renew them I will have 40,000 ex-British citizens on my hands in Uganda," he said.

He said that although Uganda was boycotting the immigration working group, he would take part if the matter was discussed in the full conference.

Commonwealth officials planned to make fresh efforts to bring the East African states back into the immigration group but Kenya's economics minister, Tom Mboya, said Kenya wouldn't attend.

"We will stay out until Britain makes a firm statement fulfilling her pledge to the British passport holders in Kenya," Mboya said in an interview.

U.S. Tries To Trap Viet Cong

BATANGAN PENINSULA (AP) — Two battalions of U.S. marines stormed ashore here in the biggest seaborne assault since the Korean War. They were the first units of an 8,200-man southern allied force ordered to smash a longtime guerrilla sanctuary in South Vietnam, a spokesman announced today.

The marines landed Monday 340 miles northeast of Saigon and a U.S. spokesman said the two battalions were pushing inland today toward a U.S. Army battalion and a South Vietnamese battalion. The three groups hope to surround an area of about eight square miles believed to hold up to 800 North Vietnamese regulars and an unknown number of guerrillas.

Robbers Throw Away Millions in Cheques

BOSTON (AP) — Robbers stole $7,000,000 worth of cheques from the National Shawmut Bank Monday, then apparently dumped them beside a highway in suburban Revere.

The Revere police department quoted FBI agents as saying millions of dollars worth of the cheques were negotiable, but a bank spokesman denied this.

Detective Mike Casoli of the Revere police said that although the robbery apparently occurred about 4:30 a.m. Monday, local police were not informed of it until hours later.

Casoli said that the first word his department got of it was just after midnight Monday night after two Revere detectives, on an anonymous phone call, found the three crates full of cheques.

Soviet Spaceman Aloft Waiting for Colleague

MOSCOW (CP) — Russia today launched a 41-year-old cosmonaut into earth orbit and unofficial reports suggested another manned spaceship would be sent up to join him.

Moscow radio broke its scheduled programs to announce that Lt.-Col. Vladimir Shatalov, the second Russian in space in three months, went into orbit in his Soyuz 4 spaceship at 10:29 a.m. (2:29 a.m. EST).

The official Soviet news agency Tass quoted Shatalov, a father of two, as "feeling fine."

The unofficial reports, emanating from Soviet sources, indicated that Soyuz 5 craft with another cosmonaut aboard would be sent up to perform joint manoeuvres and possible to attempt a joint docking with Shatalov.

The last Soviet spaceman, Maj.-Gen. Georgy Beregovoy, and his Soyuz 3 craft performed joint manoeuvres with an unmanned craft named Soyuz 2 during a four-day flight in October, 1968, but he did not attempt a docking, already carried out twice earlier in the year by unmanned Soviet craft.

Within 90 minutes of the launching, Moscow television showed videotaped film of the launching of Soyuz 4 and of the interior of the cabin with Shatalov, strapped tightly to his seat, waving at the camera.

This was the first time film of a Soviet space shot has been shown the same day as the launching.

The spacecraft was put into orbit by a powerful carrier rocket, Tass said, and reliable two-way radio contact had been established with the spaceship.

The initial announcement said the craft was orbiting the earth at every 88.5 minutes at a maximum distance from the earth of about 141 miles and a minimum distance of about 109 miles.

Rumors in Moscow during the last several days have indicated the Soyuz mission would be earth-orbital only, and would not attempt to match America's Apollo 8 trip around the moon.

Today's launching was the third major Soviet space effort this year. Two unmanned craft, Venus V and Venus VI, were launched on a 4½-month trip to Venus last week.

Ontario Cancer Treatment Being Tested in U.S. Clinics

WATERLOO, Ont. (CP) — A new cancer treatment method developed by three Ontario scientists is being tested at cancer clinics across the United States.

Dr. Jack Kruuv, physics professor at the University of Waterloo, said Monday the new technique is expected to increase the effectiveness of the traditional radiation treatment.

In radiation treatment, x-rays either can destroy the cancer cells or stop them from reproducing.

The new technique, developed by Dr. Kruuv, Dr. W. R. Inch, a radio-biologist at the University of Western Ontario, and Dr. J. A. McCredie, a professor of surgery at the University of Western Ontario, provides a new way for oxygen to get to the cancer cells.

A problem in radiation treatment has been that the large cancer tumors do not have much oxygen. If oxygen is present in the tumor, the radiation treatment is three times more effective.

In the new system, developed by the Ontario scientists, the patient breathes a mixture of oxygen and carbon dioxide under normal pressure.

Dr. Kruuv said this method increases the blood flow, allowing more oxygen to get to the cancer cells.

Pelletier Says Investors Hold Key to Defeat of Separatism

NEW YORK (CP) — Withdrawal of capital from Quebec would give separatist leaders a strong argument for independence, State Secretary Gerard Pelletier said today.

He said the separatist movement has no power and lacks popular support. However, it remained a potential force that had to be taken into consideration "if, for example, the economic situation were to deteriorate seriously."

Pelletier was speaking in members of the Compressed Gas Association here.

"If, in a moment of panic, Canadian and American investors were to begin to withdraw their capital from Quebec, they would be providing separatist leaders with one of their best arguments in favor of independence."

The influx of capital into Quebec had created new jobs.

"A policy of restriction would lead inevitably to an increase in the rate of unemployment."

If Quebec's economic situation was to improve—"and we must not be afraid to say that such improvement requires substantial foreign investment"—

Manufacturers Fearful Of Language Bill's Effect

QUEBEC (CP)—A brief to the Quebec government's education committee by the Quebec branch of the Canadian Manufacturers' Association says the proposed language-rights bill may "adversely affect this province in attracting" the required human and financial resources.

The CMA brief says the problem of attracting resources into the province could be affected by "the implication in the bill that children of persons settling in this province may be arbitrarily channeled into the French-language school system.

The interests of all Quebec residents can only be served by guaranteeing:

—That in those areas where there is a sufficient sizable population to justify French and English language school systems, the right of all to choose, for themselves or for their children, between the two.

—The establishment of standards of instruction which will ensure that all graduating students have a working knowledge of both languages.

Quebecers would never attempt to separate.

Pelletier said the problem of maintaining Canada's political sovereignty "at a time when her economic sovereignty is gravely threatened" is of much greater importance than separatism.

He urged Americans to do business in Canada with care and tact, respecting Canadian customs and interests and realizing that Canada isn't the "51st American state."

"When you have learned to know Canada, to look upon her as a different country, the problem of her survival will disappear."

He said current American ignorance of Canada "denotes a lack of respect bordering on contempt." This ignorance was "the principle obstacle to the best possible relations between the two countries."

Ontario People Hunters Help Local Employers

Immigrant At Work

Desmond Taylor, an employee of Morch Manufacturing Ltd., works at his job as a skilled cabinet maker on one of the boats being built by the company. Mr. Taylor was located in England by the people hunters and he has been working in Canada since September.

Canada's people hunters are on safari.

And some of the "trophies" are evident here in Belleville.

People hunters — actually the 32-member staff of the immigration branch of the department of trade and development — are offering a recruitment service for Ontario employers in need of skilled workers who cannot be found in Canada.

In great demand throughout Ontario are glass blowers, animal keepers, upholsterers, sailmakers, teachers, nurses and stenographers. The latter three occupations are the most drastically needed.

Belleville General Hospital has made use of the people hunters and his staff now has immigrants from India, the United Kingdom and the Philippines.

The reason for the international recruitment is obvious. There aren't enough qualified individuals in Ontario.

Britain is the favorite area for safari, but, when necessary, United States, Europe and Asia also become hunting grounds.

Pre-employment registers in the immigration branch's Toronto, London and Glasgow offices contain the names of 500 skilled persons willing to establish in Ontario.

Teachers are continually being sought in the United Kingdom.

In Belleville, D. C. Stirling, superintendent of secondary schools in the Quinte area, says "we haven't made any extensive use of this."

He added, however, that the Bay of Quinte School Board has obtained "some very good teachers from Scotland and Ireland."

The reason for the arrival of these non-Canadian teachers is the same as for other workers recruited in Ontario.

"There's not enough coming out of our colleges of education," says Mr. Stirling.

The largest single category signed up overseas is school teachers. This year alone the 75 school boards throughout the province recruited overseas, bringing an estimated 600 new teachers to Ontario.

Morch Manufacturing Ltd. here in Belleville is on a search for skilled cabinet makers and already the people hunters have helped to fill the bill.

A spokesman at Morch said this morning that there just weren't enough of them here in Ontario.

Last year the branch handled personnel requests from 127 Ontario Companies and organizations. These employers spent a total of $96,000 on advertising in Britain.

Advertising charges and travel costs for employers wishing to conduct final interviews overseas are the only fees involved in using the people hunter service.

Obituaries

JOHN STANLEY HARRIS

In failing health for some years, John Stanley Harris, 8 South Park Street, died in Kingston on Monday.

Mr. Harris was born in Belleville, 75 years ago, a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Harris and with the exception of his time spent overseas in the First World War had been a continuous resident of the community.

He enlisted in 1916 with the 155th Battalion and served overseas with the 2nd Battalion being discharged in April, 1919.

Mr. Harris was an electrician by trade and served with CFB, Trenton for some years before being retired.

He was a member of St. Michael's Church. Fraternally he was a member of Council No. 1008 Knights of Columbus and Albambra Caravan No. 109. He was also an active and life member of the Royal Canadian Legion, Branch No. 56 when health permitted.

Surviving are his wife, the former Helen Lynch, and one daughter, Mrs. Thomas (Helen Theresa) McAvella of Belleville.

Mr. Harris is resting at the O'Brien Funeral Residence. Requiem Mass will be celebrated in St. Michael's Church on Thursday, Jan. 16 at 9 a.m.

Interment will be in St. James' Cemetery.

ARTHUR JAMES W. SKINNER

Arthur James W. Skinner, 57 Dunbar Street, who ran a Fuller Brush Barber shop in Belleville for over 50 years, died in Hospital on Monday evening.

Mr. Skinner was born in Belleville, 77 years ago, a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. James Skinner and has been a continuous resident of this city for his entire life.

He started with his father in the barber business as a young man and specialized in the trade until his retirement a couple of years ago.

Surviving are his wife, the former Marvaret Young and two sisters, Mrs. Flavius (Eva Mae) Way, Mrs. Harold (Lola) Shoebridge, both of Belleville and two brothers, Allan Skinner, who is continuing the business and Charles Skinner of Cleveland, Ohio.

Mr. Skinner is resting at the Pinkston and Luscombe Funeral Home. Service will be conducted in the chapel on Wed. Jan. 15 at two o'clock.

Interment will be in Belleville cemetery with Mr. William E. Belch officiating.

MRS. WILLIAM MORRIS

STIRLING — Following a short illness, Mrs. Lily Morris, RR 7 Stirling, (Carmel), died in hospital on Monday, Jan. 13th, 1969.

Mrs. Morris was born at Carmel near Stirling, 88 years ago, a daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Henry Hammond and she lived her entire life in the community.

She was a member of Mount Pleasant United church, which formerly was the Carmel church. She was a life member of the Women's Missionary Society.

Surviving are one daughter, Mrs. John (Lillian) Reid of Allan (Arthur) Reid, Brasebridge and 10 grandchildren.

His wife, the former Clara Alice Masters, died some years ago.

Mr. Whitmore is resting at the John R. Bush Funeral Home. Service will be conducted in the chapel on Thursday, Jan. 16 at 2:45 p.m.

Entombment will be in Belleville cemetery vault with interment in Fox cemetery, Eldorado in the spring with Rev. Arnold Dunlop officiating.

WESLEY JOHN CONLEY

In failing health for nine months, Wesley John Conley, 144 Yeomans Street, died at his residence late Monday afternoon.

Mr. Conley was born at Madoc, 62 years ago, a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. William Conley and had been a resident of Belleville for 20 years. He formerly resided at Bayside and Madoc.

He was a caretaker at the Canada Cement Company plant at Point Anne for 28 years and retired in 1965.

Mr. Conley was a member of the Belleville Missionary Alliance Tabernacle.

Surviving are his wife, the former Rose Marie Mossman, and two sons, Arnold and David Conley of Belleville.

Also surviving are two brothers, William of Shannonville, Elmer of Belleville, and two grandchildren, Rodney and Randall Conley, both of Belleville. A sister, Mrs. Archie (Nina) Winters is predeceased.

Mr. Conley is resting at the John R. Bush Funeral Home. Service will be conducted in the chapel on Thursday, Jan. 16 at 1.30 p.m.

Interment will be in Belleville Cemetery with Rev. Stephen Tilley officiating.

JAMES EDWARD DOWDLE

The funeral for James Edward Dowdle under the direction of the John R. Bush Funeral Home, was held from the Wartman Funeral Home, Napanee, on Monday afternoon.

Canon W. L. Simmons conducted the service in the chapel and prayers were said at the graveside prayers at Riverview cemetery.

The bearers were Carl Walker, William and George Dowdle, Claude Graham, George Colling and Fred Curran.

WILLIAM LORNE WHITMORE

Following a short illness, William Lorne Whitmore, 17 Plaza Square, died in Hospital on Monday evening.

Mr. Whitmore was born at Coe Hill, 82 years ago, the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Whitmore and has been a resident of Belleville for 51 years. He formerly resided in Stirling.

He was a stationary engineer by trade and worked in the saw mills in the northern part of Hastings County for many years until his retirement in 1951.

In the First World War he enlisted with the 21st Battalion at Coe Hill in 1916 and served overseas until discharge in 1919. In the Second World War he joined the Veterans' Guard in 1941 and served until 1945.

Mr. Whitmore was an adherent of St. Margaret's-on-the-Hill Anglican Church.

Surviving are two sons, Francis Whitmore of Newmarket, Wayne "Bud" Whitmore of King and two daughters, Mrs. Farley (June) Parnell, Belleville and Mrs. Wayne (Gayle) Hamilton, Toronto.

Also surviving are one brother, John Dill Whitmore, Bancroft, one sister, Mrs. Alton (Martha) Reid, Brasebridge and 10 grandchildren. His wife, the former Clara Alice Masters, died some years ago.

Mr. Whitmore is resting at the John R. Bush Funeral Home. Service will be conducted in the chapel on Thursday, Jan. 16 at 2:45 p.m.

Entombment will be in Belleville cemetery vault with interment in Fox cemetery, Eldorado in the spring with Rev. Arnold Dunlop officiating.

POPE — In memory of Ernest Pope who passed away Jan. 14, 1967.
Sadly missed by daughter, Ethel, sons-in-law, grandchildren.
As long as life shall last
The Daddie I'll remember.

SINE — In loving memory of Mother Sine, who passed away Jan. 14th, 1965.
Sweet angel hours brighten our days
Each year we miss you more
For in the hearts that loved you
You always will be there.
Sadly missed by daughter, wife, children and grandchildren.

WATERHOUSE — In loving memory of Mary Ann Waterhouse who passed away 8 years ago Jan. 14, 1961.
Memories are golden, time cannot dim,
I love an empty chair.
Sadly missed by husband,
Imagine he is there.
Imagine he's with me many years,
her 72nd year would be here.
And yet in some mysterious way,
I know she's near.
Dear Mother remembered and ever loved by her daughter Ethel.

CARDS OF THANKS

Words cannot express our appreciation for the many acts of kindness and sympathy shown us during the illness and after death of our dear husband, father and brother. Mrs. D. Rollins, Mrs. J. Tamworth Safecrackers Blow the Whole Deal

NAPANEE — Safecrackers not only detonated a safe north of here today. They may also have blown the robbery.

Provincial police said thieves deposited too large a charge of nitroglycerine in the safe door of Tamworth Creameries — 25 miles north of here — during a breakin last night.

The result not only blew the door open — but shredded money inside the safe.

Police believed only a small amount of money was in the safe at the time.

50 Units in Trenton

Apartment Complex Proposed

By ROBERT AVERY
Staff Reporter

TRENTON — If the citizens here have no objections Trenton could have a new apartment complex representing a total cost in excess of $500,000 and comprising over 50 units.

Trenton town council last night heard a proposal concerning such a complex put forth by Thomas Fleming. Mr. Fleming was acting as an agent for J. Scalleta Real Estate who owned the land where it was proposed that the new building be built.

The main hitch, however, is that the land would have to be rezoned if the complex were to be constructed at the top of Dundas Street in the immediate area of the Westmount subdivision.

And so Mr. Fleming put forth his reasons just why the land should be re-zoned to allow the project to begin.

"There is an urgent need for such a complex," he began. "After all we have lost many persons to other areas due to the lack of such accommodation."

"With new industries coming to Trenton we need new accommodation and more of it."

Mr. Fleming believes that the "prestige building" would add much to Trenton and because of the demand the rent would always be near full occupancy.

"The complex would have 50 to 60 units," he explained, "and 40 percent of these would be two bedroom units and 60 percent would be three bedroom apartments."

The area would be completely serviced and laundry and sauna bath facilities are planned.

"Along with these benefits we also believe the town would collect some $15,000 in tax revenue." said Mr. Fleming.

For Councillor E. M. Parker the idea was one that should be encouraged.

"We need this sort of thing" agreed Councillor Parker "and we should do all we can to encourage it."

Councillor Stanley Ketchenson was concerned if schools in the area could handle the influx of school children brought by such a development. Council agreed this was one area of the project that would warrant looking into.

The Planning Board has previously heard Mr. Fleming's proposals and recommended a rezoning to allow the project to begin.

As a result council will have a by-law ready by next council meeting which will inform the public of the proposed re-zoning.

And then for a 21-day period the intention of the council to meet with the Ontario Municipal Board concerning the rezoning will be advertised.

It is during this time that complaints may be filed. Four years ago the residents of Westmount in the area objected to a similar move for re-zoning to allow the construction of row houses.

Just how they will react this time will be known in two weeks. Enter for the newly proposed unit is estimated at $160 a month for the two bedroom unit and $190 monthly for the three-bedroom apartments.

House Gutted By Blaze

A Center Street house was gutted by fire yesterday just hours before it was to be occupied by a new tenant.

Members of the Belleville Fire Department were called to the scene of the blaze at 2.34 p.m. The entire contents of the house were destroyed.

According to fire chief Ted Poste, the home was owned by Richard Sloan of Trenton. It was to be occupied by Mrs. Bernice Cross who was due to be released from Belleville General Hospital.

Next door neighbors, Mr. and Mrs. Clayton Boomhower, were in the house earlier straightening up the furniture which had been moved to the home in Oct.

It was Mrs. Boomhower who reported the fire.

There was no insurance on the contents of the house and firemen do not know if the home itself was insured. No one was injured in the blaze.

Crash Program

UIC Trains 40 Investigators in Belleville

By HARRY MULHALL
Staff Reporter

There's a crash program under way in Belleville — but it's scarcely raising a sound.

Quietude is a critical key to the project's success. For one thing, it calls for relentless, studious concentration by its participants.

Also, they're being trained in the most sensitive of pursuits — the ability to hear the surreptitious rustle of defrauded dollars.

Success in their studies means millions to federal taxpayers.

These students are officials of the Unemployment Insurance Commission, selected for training as claims investigators.

With the UIC stepping up a vigorous campaign against fraudulent claims, the Belleville project is geared to almost doubling the number of investigators in Ontario within two weeks.

One woman and 39 men form the task force now readying in Belleville to reinforce those already in the field as the UIC mounts its attack on a problem as old as unemployment benefits.

The study scene is set in the Hotel Quinte where the UIC have pre-empted two conference rooms and lodged its trainee reinforcements for two weeks.

The need for benefit controls is obvious. While the number of frauds is only a small percentage of all Canadians participating in the unemployment benefits scheme, big money is involved, emphasizes a UIC spokesman.

"It runs into the millions," he says.

Hence the urgency of the program centred on the Hotel Quinte where the trainees participate in lectures and classrooms from morning to evening. Nights are given over to studying, with only Sunday off.

The crash course which opened yesterday runs through until Jan. 24 when the trainees will return to the 14 local UIC offices servicing Ontario and begin putting theory into practice.

All of the upcoming investigators are UIC auditors — including Mrs. Anne McPhee of the Hamilton office.

Being the only woman on the course among so many men doesn't bother her, she says.

In fact, her graduation at the end of the course will be personally significant.

The mother of two children, she'll be the only woman UIC investigator in all Ontario.

The program also has a significance for Belleville. It's hinted to be bigger UIC plans — relocation of its Ontario regional headquarters now in Toronto. It's a proposal being watched expectantly by Belleville since it involves more than 300 new families for the city — the biggest single population boost in years.

The move is now in the critical stage — tenders to be opened Jan. 30 will decide if the price is right for the move to new quarters in the Quinte district.

The current crash course helps orient departmental thinking to the move. It also gives some indication of the attendant activities the city may house if the UIC plan becomes reality.

Such training schemes are part of the picture for an administrative unit like the UIC regional complex.

The move to Belleville, like the investigation course, is part of an ongoing process by which the UIC aims at cost-paring.

In the claims field alone savings can be hefty — well worth the cost of investigation and prevention programs, says the UIC spokesman.

"According to outside consultants who have investigated this operation it will cost the UIC $5,000,000 to get back $3,000,000."

Stepped - up investigations are financially justified and necessary.

"It's like an insurance company. And like any insurance company we have to do this (fraud investigation)," he says.

Already, claims the official, since the anti - fraud campaign was launched last month, even courts in "several areas" are meting out stiffer penalties.

Some people, however, need little urging to mend their ways. Conscience works wonders — as evidenced by a recent incident in Belleville.

The UIC official said not so long ago a man turned up at the Canada Manpower Centre and left an envelope for forwarding to the UIC. It contained repayment of money he earlier had fraudulently claimed elsewhere in Ontario.

Centennial teacher Richard MacLean with students Nancy Thornton and Jewel Bailey look through a file of copies of historical documents for information on a project.

Unique History Program

By LENNY WILLIAMSON
Staff Reporter

They're fighting the Battle of the Boyne next Friday at Centennial Secondary School.

It follows, naturally, the Battle of Hastings and the Spanish Armada, both were threshed out earlier at the same school.

The battle scenes are part of a new adventure in history teaching introduced at Centennial by Richard MacLean. He is taking the new approach to teaching with three of his grade nine classes.

"Under the new system, the teacher functions as a resource person." Mr. MacLean explained. "Instead of merely having to prepare a lesson outline the night before, he now needs a sound basis of scholarship in his subject."

The students in their turn, function as researchers, seeking for themselves the answers to the questions of history. Their tools are books, films, and copies of original documents of the period under study.

Centrepiece of the materials available is a sand box, similar to those used in the militia to teach military strategy. Mr. MacLean admits he borrowed the sand box idea from the military and finds it a "very effective method of instruction."

The sand box is used to reconstruct the terrain of famous historical sites for reenactment of carefully researched battle scenes. Each class is divided into four or five groups for each presentation. The detail prescribed would do credit to any tactician and in case the group overlooks some minor point all the students in the audience are invited to act as critics.

During recent classes the students have been occupied with the siege of a medieval castle. The plans of attack varied from direct assault on the gate house combined with tunnelling under the walls to such devious schemes as sending a party of attackers into the castle disguised as minstrels.

Questions from the classroom, critics are as penetrating as the staged attacks.

"Are bribed guards paid before they open the gates or after?" one group was asked by a fellow student.

The answer, based on extensive reading of the literature of the day, was "neither time — they get a chance to loot the castle with the victorious assault troops."

A few cunning attack schemes were thwarted by the evidence of history. One student built two miniature cannons to use in his battle plan, then found they hadn't been invented in the medieval period.

Another plan of attack, using explosives to blow up the castle walls, had to be scrapped when research proved gunpowder hadn't reached Europe yet either.

"The students work harder under their own initiative," Mr. MacLean notes. "It is also possible to cover more history under the new system than under the conventional lesson method."

The teaching of history in grade nine has two objectives, Mr. MacLean explained.

"The students must enjoy the subject," he said. "Then they must learn the methods of history — how to research, make a bibliography, and communicate their findings clearly and logically."

That tall order calls for a versatile teacher — one capable of adding a fair amount of English teaching, some concepts of logical reasoning processes, the psychology of human relations, and complete instruction in the use of overhead projects, film projectors, and hopefully in the future, a microfilm reader for scanning copies of original historical documents.

By grade 11 it's time to introduce a critical attitude towards history books and authors as a practical answer to the charge that history teaching is clouded by the use of biased texts.

At that level Mr. MacLean also begins spurring his students into drawing parallels between events that took place in the past and those occurring today.

Edith Cavell Expansion Plan Halted

The Quinte area's Edith Cavell School of Nursing received a setback in its expansion plans today, when the provincial government vetoed building plans for 10 medical centres across the province.

The decision by the treasury board — one of the first obvious moves in Premier John Robarts' announced austerity program — shook hospital authorities locally.

"We were going to call tenders last week on new facilities for the school," said board chairman John Deacon. "But were told by the province to halt.

"We have had to withdraw all our invitations."

The Edith Cavell school took in its first class this year and had planned to expand its class next year to 70 from the present enrolment of 40.

"We are an area school and as such service hospitals in Trenton, Picton, Campbellford and Belleville. Our purpose is to provide clinical experience for the girls, plus a pool of trained nurses, something which we do not have today", said Mr. Deacon.

He said the decision "will not have any immediate effect but could have a serious effect in two or three years from now."

Mr. Deacon said the board is considering proposing a lease-back arrangement to the provincial government, in the hope it can gain approval for its expansion plans.

"After all, this seems to be the trend. The government did it with the department of transport building here in Belleville and plans the same with the Unemployment Insurance Commission offices.

"In any effect, it means a delay of at least a year. It takes about eight months for authority to give approval and to have the building and facilities constructed. So we would have to make some immediate decisions to the present facilities available a year from now.

Stanley Martin, chairman of the Ontario Hospital Services Commission, said Monday night that the expansion proposals had not been cancelled. "just delayed for the time being.

"We had to pull the string on them because we haven't the funds to build them and we don't know when we will have," he said in an interview.

Centres whose building programs have been ordered stopped are: New Mount Sinai, Toronto General, Western and St. Michael's, all in Toronto; the Belleville school of nursing; Victoria Hospital and the University of Western Ontario campus hospital, both in London, Ont.; medical centres in Kingston and Ottawa and a Toronto technological institute.

The problem arose in November when the federal government told the provinces it can no longer match provincial money being spent on hospital construction, as agreed under a cost-sharing program set up in 1966.

Ontario's share from Ottawa would be $12,000,000 this year.

Since then, the provincial government has decided to spend $38,000,000 on hospital construction for a total $50,000,000, but that is still $20,000,000 less than needed for the 13 projects, Mr. Martin said.

The $50,000,000 is to be spent primarily on a new medical centre at McMaster University in Hamilton, expansion of the Hospital for Sick Children in Toronto and renovations of Sunnybrook Hospital, owned by the University of Toronto, which is being converted to a general treatment hospital from a veterans' hospital.

Some of the hospitals told to cancel construction plans had already carried out public campaigns to raise their share in the building costs.

Mr. Martin said plans for the 10 centres now are in limbo, at least until the 1970-71 provincial budget is drawn up.

"The projects will still be viable when finances are available," he said.

"But in 1969-70 there are no funds and we don't know when there will be."

2,600 Enter Rotary Festival

Entries for the Rotary Club's music festival next month total about 2,600, festival co - chairman Bob Ord told members at their meeting yesterday.

The number of actual entrants, including those in choirs and other groups, total some 2,600.

The festival is a new venture for the Rotary Club and it is being organized in co - operation with Quinte-area citizens engaged in the spheres of the arts.

Entertainer Donald MacKinnon showed slides of Switzerland, Austria and Italy taken on a visit to those countries last summer.

Mr. MacKinnon and his wife flew by charter aircraft from Malton to Zurich, a flight that cost only $233 per passenger. Reaching a car, the Belleville couple toured extensively and included a visit to the Principality of Liechtenstein.

In Venice they came upon some vintage Hollywood in the person of Fred Astaire. The veteran actor - dancer was making a film called The Midas Run.

Of the economics of the trip, Mr. MacKinnon noted that the Canadian dollar "goes a long way" in the countries he visited.

SEED TALK

WEEDS
(Shotgun Mixtures)
IN YOUR FORAGE FIELDS?

Weed Species in Forage Mixtures: Soils and crop specialists are telling us that much of our hay and pasture acreage is needed to unproductive species and is therefore falling far short of its potential production. The remark has been passed in public meetings that much of our forage in "weeds" in the sense that a weed is any plant growing out of place. Better farmers are universally agreed that simple mixtures with Alfalfa and Timothy predominating are best, and that the era of the complex 'shotgun' mixture is past.

Don't water down your forage stands with low productivity grasses. Clean, quick growing grasses such as Rye-grass, most Fescues, Timothy etc. deserve only to displace slower establishing but high-yielding and palatable producers such as the alfalfas, Birdsfoot Trefoil etc.

Simple Mixtures With Certified Seeds: Certainly the road to improved forage production lies in the proper utilization of such outstanding purpose-designed new varieties as SARANAC HYBRID, QUOIS Alfalfa, SARATOGA Timothy and Birdsfoot Trefoil etc. . . . not in hit or miss planting including a dozen or more species each competing against the other.

A U.S. Viewpoint

Prime Minister Trudeau has been branded a "Canadian Castro" by John R. Rarick, a right-wing Louisiana Democrat.

The United States congressman is upset because of the talk of Canada recognizing Communist China, and because we sell wheat to both China and Cuba.

The amazing thing about Mr. Rarick's outburst is its timing. Canada has been conducting trade with China and Cuba for years. It has also been considering for some time the possibility of recognizing the Peking regime. But then, that also is a matter of long-standing and neither Ottawa nor Peking seem to be in any hurry. Least of all Peking.

In London Mr. Trudeau was quoted as saying Canada wants to recognize Red China. However, he did not say it will.

Meanwhile it is a compliment of sorts to get even some attention from the United States, particularly from one whose domicile is the deep south.

Mr. Rarick errs however in adopting an attitude close to blackmail, as when he suggests Americans can "help the Canadian people decide who they need the most — their American neighbors, tourists and markets or Trudeau, Mao Castro and the communist grain market." The inference is that the U.S. could curtail trade with Canada and discourage Americans from visiting this country.

It seems Mr. Rarick has wakened up to the fact that in trade Canada goes its own way, and is under no obligation to Washington where trade with the communist world is concerned.

Cuban Enigma

The communist regime of Fidel Castro is still strongly entrenched in Cuba a decade after the overthrow of the Batista administration.

Castro has achieved many things. A new generation in Cuba is growing up that has more sense of nationhood than any that went before. Materially, there seems to be enough for everyone, but without any luxuries. There are new schools and hospitals and aid keeps coming in from Russia and other countries of the Soviet bloc. There is trade too with this country.

Yet, for all its political stability, the Castro regime, like other communist countries, is authoritarian. The jails are full of political prisoners. Others, intellectuals opposed to the regime, Castro has got rid of by the simple ruse of letting them join the flow of "approved" refugees who take the daily flights to Florida and freedom.

Still others try to flee the country via the United States naval base at Guantanamo. But reports suggest that getting into Guantanamo is as difficult as escaping across the Berlin wall. More than four score vied make it recently in what was believed to be the largest mass escape from the Castro regime. However, about thirty others in the same party — men, women and children — failed to get across the base's barbed wire fence. They were shot down by Cuban guards patrolling around the base. All told, about 1,000 persons are believed to have been killed trying to escape in the last year.

One wonders if the men who hijack U.S. commercial aircraft in order to get to Cuba have any idea what life is really like under the Castro regime. It would be interesting to learn what becomes of these men. Do they get any sort of permanent settlement? Are jobs found for them and so on? Or are they just cranks whom the United States is well rid of anyway?

Hippie Scene

Are the hippies fading from the scene. Or are they still a lingering problem? It could be they are on the way out. For instance one hears little these days about Toronto's Yorkville district. In the Height-Asbury area of San Francisco even the hippies themselves are said to be becoming disenchanted with life there and are drifting away.

However, international drifters that they are, some are still causing offence around the world. France is the latest country to take official action to discourage their presence. A government order has gone out to ports, airfields and frontier posts to bar entry of persons in "incorrect clothing" and without sufficient funds for a normal visit.

Will there be trouble over interpretation of what is "incorrect clothing?" What if the person in every other respect is well-groomed and acceptable? Well that is France's problem — and good luck to them.

Aroused Stanfield Man to Watch in Commons' Second Act

By RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA — The curtain's going up on Act Two of that $12 billion national extravaganza, the Twenty-Eighth Parliament of Canada.

Act One, running from early September to late December, was pretty unexciting, even "boring," the star of the show, Pierre Elliott Trudeau, would have you believe.

Act Two, now going on stage until Easter, will be less of a "bore," promises the supporting star, Robert Lorne Stanfield.

He has been playing the role of the political gentleman.

It was a part, he slowly has been discovering, that had little future since it cast him in the character of a naively well-meaning patsy. An innocent in Bytown.

There he was playing the nice guy to star Trudeau's slick sharpie.

He might never have realized that he was being had if the star hadn't had the questionable judgment to poke political fun at him right there on the public stage for all to see and hear.

Pride in a proud man is easily bruised.

And nothing can blue-and-blacken an ego as instantly as ridicule.

It wasn't in the prepared script at all.

Just a smart-cracking throw-away line, delivered with a smirking shrug.

And it could result in a re-writing of the whole Second Act of the parliamentary play.

There was Passionate Pierre, basking in the warm glow of his charisma, good-naturedly allowing that sure, Reasonable Robert might be an agreeably cooperative enough sort, but honestly, wasn't he a bit of a boob, too?

The Halifax guy just didn't dig that he had been trapped.

He'd been so busy making a big deal of just one little old parliamentary rule that he hadn't noticed that the whole book had been revised.

When he was made aware of his pat-down by the prime minister — he was at lunch in when word of it reached him — the parliamentary cafeteria the Conservative leader leaped from his table, left his sandwich and let fly with an uncharacteristic rumble of rage.

"He said that, did he? . . . well, we'll see who turns out to be the trapper and the trapped."

Out of his office only a few minutes later he fired a statement that the prime minister just fast-talked himself into a self-sprung trap of his own setting from which there might be no escape.

The trap could very well be a suddenly and stubbornly uncooperative Opposition, prepared at last to dig in and not merely oppose, but overthrow the government.

It was obvious that Gentle Bob regarded Truculent Trudy as something of a cad and a refusal no longer deserving of decent diplomatic deference.

If he hangs tough on this it will be a new and different House of Commons — for the man who has been using him to practise and polish the political art of the pat-down.

Up to now it has been so apparent that the prime minister considers the Opposition leader his parliamentary P.U. intellectual inferior, that even the long-suffering, patiently courteous Mr. Stanfield must have had some awareness of it.

But he has best over backward to be reasonable and as he sees it "responsible," quietly ignoring the often insulting way the prime minister has been at pains to address him in the tone and manner a teacher might employ with a backward pupil.

In other moods the prime minister has ignored the Conservative leader's shrugging off his earnest enquiries about the nation's business with a casual flip of the wrist.

It has been the Conservative leader's position that it is only the requirement of national responsibility for the opposition to assist the government in the complicated business of running the country.

Now, slowly to anger, Mr. Stanfield at last is burning with resentment that his responsible co-operation with government should be so misunderstood as to be regarded by Mr. Trudeau as rather dull-witted naivety.

On that basis, his pat-down by the prime minister becomes a pat-down at Passionate, and a point at which an opposition, to remain responsible, must dig in for a fight that just possibly could end in an election.

London in the Off-Season

Leavitt F. Morris, travel editor of the Christian Science Monitor

London certainly is one of the better off-season tourist buys.

Even though the weather might be on the chilly side — most days getting temperatures of around 45 degrees — it is so pleasant to move around London without the crowds of visitors that come here in the spring-time.

All you need to bring along to be comfortable is a good woolen sweater to put on under your topcoat. As we walked along some of the main shopping streets we saw displays of sweaters at prices below those which we could have bought them for in the United States. So, if you forget to pack that sweater, one can be quickly picked up here.

Most Americans, including myself, at first are hesitant to try and drive in left - handed traffic. But if it be any assurance I found after one or two hours at the wheel one does become adjusted. In fact, so adjusted did I become that when I returned to the States I started down the left side of the road, much to the horror of my wife.

There is so much to do and see here at this season that we made the mistake of not allowing several additional days prior to our sailing for Africa and Australia.

The result couldn't have been more predictable. After all, if men are indisputably the best women's hairdressers in the world, why shouldn't women be the best men's hairdressers?

Come to think of it, most men would rather have their hair done by a Miss Susan than by a Mr. John. The fact is more of them might have their hair styled if women, not men, were the stylists.

When It Comes To Hairstyling!

There was a bit of a whirr in London last month when a young woman won a prize as London's top men's hairdresser in competition with six men finalists.

The result couldn't have been more predictable. After all, if men are indisputably the best women's hairdressers in the world, why shouldn't women be the best men's hairdressers?

Come to think of it, most men would rather have their hair done by a Miss Susan than by a Mr. John. The fact is more of them might have their hair styled if women, not men, were the stylists.

Critical View of Tire Studs

Cornwall Standard - Freeholder

Suppose you are driving along at 20 miles an hour and find yourself on ice. You put on the brakes. How far will your vehicle slide?

Here are the answers, according to Bus and Truck Transport Magazine:

About 170 feet, if you have typical tires all around. And just about the same distance if you have regular snow tires on the driving wheels.

About 140 feet if you have studded snow tires on two wheels; and about 115 if you have studded snow tires on all four wheels — a skid reduction of 33 per cent or about three car lengths.

But there's a "but." These figures apply only to skids on ice close to 32 degrees Fahrenheit.

Research shows that of the half-dozen or so factors which bear on the relative effectiveness of studded tires, the temperature of the ice is at the top of the list.

Studs exert their greatest stopping power on ice near the melting point (where, incidentally, the skid hazard is greatest). As the ice temperature falls, the studs lose their effectiveness. At 10 degrees below zero, they are no better than snow tires.

Adding more lines of studs around the tire increases breaking power, up to 200 studs. But simply adding studs in the same number of lines doesn't do any good to speak of.

Effectiveness of studded tires could be increased if new tire treads were designed, particularly by adding more lines for studs.

Braking on bare pavement, wet or dry, is hardly improved one per cent by up to 100 studs; up to four per cent, at most, with 144 studs.

Judiciary and the Ballot

Winnipeg Free Press

Canadians generally are happy that their system of justice is based on the British precedent that keeps the judiciary free from, and above, politics. Unlike the United States, Canada does not elect judges, it appoints them; and, while there is the suspicion that some of these appointments are not without political overtones the independence of the judiciary is a cherished part of our legal heritage.

There is one phase of this procedure, however, that might well be changed without prejudice to a judge's impartiality: his right to retire. Judges in Canada have never had this right. In the interests of the Bench's independence, judges have been denied all political rights, have, in effect, become non-citizens.

Surely this is carrying the independence of the judiciary too far. There are good reasons why a judge should not be a member of a political party, why he should not be allowed to speak for a political party or help finance it. But there is a difference between being politically neutral and politically neuter. The independence of the judiciary is not going to be called in question if a judge's right to cast a ballot as a private citizen at election time.

More Than 1000 Companies Dissolved

The Financial Post

In less than two years, 1,250 federally incorporated companies have been declared kaput by the corporations branch of Ottawa's department of consumer and corporate affairs. This very probably is the most intensive mass execution conducted in Canadian corporate history. The most recent purge involved 225 federal companies which were done in by simple notice in last week's Canada Gazette.

Few of these firms will be mourned. They represented, in the main, a huge file of inactive corporations whose only breath of life was a registered name in federal files. Some had failed to file annual returns for more than a decade and legally owed many thousands of dollars in late filing penalties. They were an administrative nightmare.

Changes in the Corporations Act in 1967 allowed the department to prepare for the slaughter. In effect, companies were given three years to file late returns or disappear. The law also applied to more fairly firms which were chronic late filers with little respect for Corporation Act requirements. Officials have worked through much of the dead-end company file and now expect the pace to slow down to some 300 dissolutions a year.

One positive byproduct is a significant reduction in the listing of annual returns by ongoing companies. A few have been badly burned. They read about their dissolution because they or their lawyers did not really believe the department meant business. A new late filing fee has helped firms and associations heed the message.

In short: file, pay up or die.

Industrial Bonuses in Trenton Come Back to Haunt Council

TRENTON — Trenton's system of attracting industry by bonuses, which was labelled illegal by the Hardy Report, has come back to haunt council.

The situation was brought to light by Councillor Gerald Weaver, who in a statement to council said he was surprised to learn that the owner of a local industry asked the town to cancel a portion of his firm's taxes due for 1968 as set out in his tax bill.

"At least three councillors agreed at that time that we should continue to do this because we had a moral obligation to do so," said Councillor Weaver. The issue was discussed at an earlier caucus meeting.

"In my opinion a higher moral commitment exists to operate within our powers granted under the municipal act."

Councillor Weaver said he realized that the mayor, in defence of the bonusing system, had stated that most municipalities seeking industry must offer attraction to industry in this manner.

"Your Worship, Mayor," said Councillor Weaver, "I say that there is not another town or city in Ontario where the taxes paid in full do not balance with the assessment and the tax notices sent out to the property owner."

Council Discusses Closed Meetings

By ROBERT AVERY
Staff Reporter

TRENTON — With the exception of one councillor, Trenton council is firm in its stand it doesn't want the press in attendance when a caucus meeting is held.

Councillor Gerald Weaver last night asked that the press be allowed to remain present during a closed committee meeting called by councillor Paul Tripp.

Councillor Tripp believed the presence of the news media had no effect on such meetings. But he did prefer that the press be omitted from closed meetings.

"The press are informed after the meeting and that is the proper way to do business," said Councillor Tripp.

The mayor said he believed the public should be informed "to a point."

"However," explained Mayor James MacDonald, "personality issues and industrial relations are another matter and such closed meetings are necessary."

"I just want it known how I feel," said Councillor Weaver. "I see no harm in the press remaining if they agree not to report on the closed meeting."

For Councillor E. M. Parker it was not a matter of not being able to trust the press for he believed "that there is no member of the news media we cannot trust."

"They are newsmen and news is what they are after," said Councillor Parker, "and although it might not be in the paper, information might slip out somewhere."

Councillor Weaver asked the mayor if there was a block in the news media had not co-operated with him.

"No, I have always had good co-operation," said the mayor.

"In past years the press has had access to privileged information but they kept quiet about it."

Closed meetings have come under fire recently when councillors have publicly labelled them as the cause of verbal battles in council chambers. There was also an appearance of a reversal on the post office question which took place at a closed meeting.

Tripp: 'No Comment'

TRENTON — Councillor Paul Tripp today had a "no comment" answer concerning business discussed at last night's closed meeting of town council.

"I have to finalize my progress before the deal is settled," he told the press this morning.

He said there was a bit of work left over from the closed meeting that would have to be done before a statement could be released.

"I will be seeing the clerk-comptroller and the mayor this afternoon and will possibly have something tomorrow," he concluded.

After telling the Save the Post Office committee it would go to the people for a vote to decide the destiny of the old structure, council held a closed meeting and decided to demolish the old building.

It was only after voiced public disapproval that the decision was again reversed and the vote went to the people as originally planned.

"In bringing this matter up I just wanted to air the subject," said Councillor Weaver, "and I also do not want to see council misuse the committee system."

The closed meeting was held after council finished its regular agenda.

"The councillor asked to abstain from voting "if you decide to formulate these proceedings by council resolution.

"This is contrary to my concept of municipal government."

once again reiterated his stand Mayor James MacDonald that the policy was justified at the time. Trenton was in a competitive market and had to use competitive means if it was to survive.

"We realize the means of bonusing was illegal but at that time all municipalities were doing it," said the mayor.

He added that the provincial government now does its legally with its loan assistance program.

"We both have the same goals, but the provincial government can do it legally, we cannot."

The mayor concluded that although the firm in question had asked for a tax rebate, it had not yet received it and currently "that's where it stands."

There was no word of taking any future action.

Residents Discuss Sewers for Wellington

WELLINGTON (Staff) — To be or not to be — that is the question in the village of Wellington regarding a possible decision to install sewers.

A general information meeting was held yesterday morning attended by approximately 50 interested citizens and town officials to discuss plans for sewer installation.

However, no price figure was available and although the Ontario Water Resources Commission has been looking over plans for the village nothing specific was available at the meeting.

Now, after the meeting, the plans will again go to the OWRC and a price figure will be arrived at to be mortgaged over the next 40 years.

It is not known whether or not the installation of sewers will come to a public vote in the immediate future or not.

Some dissension was expressed at the meeting Monday morning and a few people seemed to think that sewers for the community would cost too much money.

However, Robert Quick chairman of the Public Utilities Commission said he did not think that opposition was of a pargantuan stature.

"After all," he indicated, "if the plan goes through the village won't even own the sewers for 40 years and the monthly fee will be between $4 and $5 per ratepayer."

"Plans will coma back from the OWRC in the near future along with prices. They have indicated they will start working on the project immediately."

The last controversy to do with public utilities went to the polls 10 years ago when the question of water for the community of 1,500 was decided.

Water was installed although at that time there was a substantial amount of opposition to the project.

Native of Peterborough

Picton Gets A New Crown Attorney

PICTON (Staff) — Picton will once again have its own crown attorney in the person of Peterborough native Richard D. Sheehy.

Since the death last August of Lancelot Netherry, the former crown attorney, the position in Picton has been left vacant and G. G. Wynn from Lennox and Addington County has been filling in.

On occasion someone from the crown attorney's office in Belleville filled in at Picton, but even so there have been times when there has been no crown attorney present at court causing trials and hearings to be advanced.

Within 10 days the problem should be solved as Mr. Sheehy's appointment is to take effect within that period.

Mr. Sheehy was the assistant crown attorney for the district of Algoma in Sault Ste. Marie from 1963 until 1964 when he was appointed to the position of full crown. He recently left his Sault Ste. Marie post in December of 1968.

The new crown has had a very full and varied background in law having been called to the bar in 1953 after graduating from Osgoode Hall in Toronto.

For a time he worked in a Willowdale office and then before going into his own private practice Mr. Sheehy became a partner in a Toronto law firm with Frank O'Donnell and R. A. Cormack.

He said he began a private practice before taking the Sault Ste. Marie position.

Mr. Sheehy has already been given in Picton once but due for the day and it is expected that all announcement from the Attorney General's office in Toronto will shortly confirm his new appointment.

Policy on Dogs May Be Changed

TRENTON — Trentonians could soon be paying less to pick up their stray canine friends than their counterparts in Belleville who go to the Quinte Animal Shelter to pick up man's best friend.

The Quinte Humane Society took over responsibility for stray animals last Sept.

The subject was brought up last night by Councillor E. M. Parker who believes "it is too much to ask the citizens of Trenton to drive to Belleville to pick up their dogs."

Councillor Parker said in light of a recent personal experience in picking up his dog he discovered that the inconvenience caused by a citizen here was far out of proportion to that of a Belleville citizen in the same predicament.

"Our citizens are not getting a fair break and this is not good service to the people of our community."

It costs $10 to get your pet out of the pound.

Councillor Gerald Weaver suggested that the fine be lowered for Trenton citizens to make up the inconvenience of the distance they must travel.

Councillor Parker saw this as a possible solution while he was quick to point out that it was the inconvenience, and not the money, that bothered him.

The matter will be looked into by Councillor Weaver and a report made to council.

Said councillor Parker, "For $10 they should deliver the animal."

Insurance Coverage Is Updated

By ROBERT DUNNETT
Staff Reporter

PICTON — Prince Edward County's regional school board cut through ribbons of red tape last night as it updated its insurance coverage.

However one recommendation made by the Cowan firm that the school board provide individual accident coverage for all students was turned down.

Some students in the county school system are covered. Others are not, depending on the discretion of parents and old policies. The yearly premium will run at $10,944, about $500 more than the combined cost of the previous policies, but providing extended coverage.

School board members felt that additional $6,000 premium would be too much to pay, arguing there would be overlaps in student coverage with Ontario government programs and the board's new insurance charge.

The new policy decided on last night provides for a $1,000,000 coverage on accident for which the school board would be held responsible.

Making the motion for the adoption of the new insurance policy was finance committee chairman George Fleener; it was seconded by committee member Douglas Cealey.

The cost of new policy will be $10,944.97, giving the board and properties blanket protection.

All unused premiums on existing policies will be refunded to the board.

In other business the personnel committee reported it had received 14 applications for the job of director of education.

Members of the board felt they could narrow this number down to ten by going over the applications.

The finance committee reminded the board the Ontario department of education demands the budget be drawn up by March.

It was unanimously passed that the board become a member of Ontario Public School Trustees' Association.

Through a grant, 70 percent of the $2,000 membership fee will be paid by the government. The board felt that it might need their assistance in the case of a dispute with the Teachers' Federation.

Two members of the board will go to Toronto on Jan. 17 to attend a trustees' association meeting dealing with the adjustment of teachers' salaries.

TORONTO STOCKS

TORONTO (CP) — Industrials posted small gains in active mid-morning trading on the Toronto Stock Exchange today. The rest of the market was mixed.

Gains in all sections outnumbered losses by 184 to 147.

The market has been recovering steadily since Thursday after a severe drop early last week. Brokers are beginning to take a more optimistic view, although they are still cautious about immediate prospects.

In industrials, Neon Products gained 1¼ to 35¼, Seaway ¾ to 33, Leigh Instruments ¾ to 46, Koffler Stores ¾ to 38¾ and Canada Bread ¼ to 19¾.

Among the heaviest traders, Alcan rose ¼ to 30¼ and Brinco 12 cents to $5.86.

On the downside, Cominco lost ¼ to 36¼, CPR ½ to 77¼ and Burns Foods ½ to 20½.

Imperial Oil advanced ¼ to 70¼. The shares are trading for the first time on a subdivided basis following a 4-for-1 stock split.

Walker-Gooderham edged up ¼ to 41¼. The company reported a quarterly profit of 80 cents a share compared with 75 cents in the same period last year.

Quebec Matagami Mines gained 18 cents to $2.00 after trading was delayed briefly at opening to match orders. The stock rose 12 cents Monday.

On index, industrials gained .23 to 187.12 and golds .26 to 151.28. Base metals fell .05 to 115.58 and western oils .55 to 235.76.

Volume by 11 a.m. was 1,441,000 shares compared with 1,159,000 at the same time Monday.

The Toronto market closed Monday with moderate gains, continuing its recovery from the sharp slump early last week.

Eva Rittinghauser Said Indiscreet After Date With PM

OTTAWA (CP)—Until he took Eva Rittinghausen to lunch in London, Prime Minister Trudeau had been remarkably fortunate in selecting female companions who felt discretion was the better part of friendship.

Miss Rittinghausen joyously abandoned discretion after her date with Mr. Trudeau, and virtually turned her apartment into a television studio to tell the world of her achievements.

It led the embarrassed prime minister to publicly reduce her to a "passing acquaintance," the diplomatic equivalent of severing relations.

"What's really surprising is that this didn't happen before," said one local female philosopher.

"It must be tempting to tell the world about dating the most eligible bachelor in the country."

Apart from the London case there has been no outbreak of this, despite what some sources describe as relatively heavy dating.

With diligent digging it's possible to pick up all sorts of once-sentence quotes from girls who have been out with the prime minister, but until Eva, few went beyond that.

An example: "He said he'd like to take me swimming at Harrington Lake, but he didn't ask for my phone number."

Another, from a girl who went hiking with the prime minister and told of a conversation beside a shimmering lake. "He said I'd never fully understand myself unless I read Plato."

And then there was the girl, a beauty too, who told the prime minister that, yes indeed, she would be delighted to go out with him.

"How about breakfast tomorrow?" he asked.

In talking with several girls who have dated Mr. Trudeau—and, incidentally, none of them has ever been publicly identified with him—a consensus emerged that the prime minister is delightful company for females.

He was variously referred to as considerate, modest, shy, intellectually stimulating, thought-provoking, exciting, witty and earnest.

"When he invited me out in the afternoon," said one, "you could never be sure whether you would end up in an elegant restaurant for dinner, or paddling a canoe over some awful rocks."

What type of thing annoys him?

"Well, he would get immensely annoyed if he was in the middle of some long explanation of something and you obviously stopped listening — immensely annoyed," said one girl.

"What really annoys him is when you pretend to know a lot more than you really do," said another. "He spots it quickly."

There was a girl who discovered that Mr. Trudeau tended to become annoyed when she tried to push him a bit.

This was prior to his leadership campaign, and as he danced with this attractive girl in Ottawa he suggested it would be nice if they could go out together in Montreal.

The girl understood Mr. Trudeau was shortly going to Tahiti, and told him she would be happy to accompany him there.

Without missing a step, he is said: "Half the girls in Tahiti are as attractive as you are."

"It was all very pleasant," she recalled. "Just a simple statement of fact."

Canadian Student Marks Birthday in Soviet Union

LENINGRAD (CP) — There was a distinctly bohemian style to Pierre St. Jean's 25th birthday party.

Three of the Canadian's fellow students at Leningrad University joined him around a makeshift festive table in his hostel room, drinking toasts and arguing about the world situation while a bleak drizzle attacked the winter snow in the courtyard outside.

Tatiana Silieff, who came to the Soviet Union with St. Jean as the first students under a new exchange program between Carleton University of Ottawa and Leningrad University, donated a rich chocolate birthday cake for the occasion.

A long-haired girl named Tanya—whose passport is American but whose family's background and upbringing has been international—contributed some spumanish expertise with a plateful of smoked sprats. She turned her head away each time she decapitated one of the little fish "because they open their mouths when you press the knife in."

And St. Jean's roommate, an amiable Moscow Russian named Gennadi, returned proudly from the communal kitchen with a tall dish of steaming concoction of eggs and cheese which he'd learned to make during an earlier stay in Bulgaria.

The tall, boyish-looking St. Jean is a post-graduate student of psychology, working this year at the same institute where famed scientist Ivan Pavlov used dogs and dinner bells to develop his theories on conditioned reflexi.

Miss Silieff, petite and quiet-spoken, is a student of 18th century Russian literature.

They are among a small body of Canadians studying in the Soviet Union this year under university-sponsored exchanges. Mr. and Mrs. Richard Pope are also in Leningrad under an exchange with the University of Toronto, the same institution which sponsors two other students at Moscow University.

They represent one of the smallest groups of Canadians to study in this country in years. Normally there are about 10 Canadians at Soviet universities, with an equal number of Soviet students in Canada, but even the addition this year of Carleton's exchange program failed to boost the number.

The reasons for the shortfall are varied, but the Warsaw Pact invasion of Czechoslovakia is believed to have played its part.

St. Jean, who speaks fluent English and French, carries on conversations with Gennadi and other Russians in beginner's fashion—using gestures to augment a limited vocabulary. Gennadi is learning a little English and there is usually someone else around —like Tanya, the American girl—who is fluent in both languages and can help when translation gets sticky.

Miss Silieff, whose room is even smaller than St. Jean's, had been on her own so far. Her Russian roommate was away somewhere pursuing her studies but was expected back before long.

Both Canadians expressed genuine satisfaction with the tutors and study facilities arranged for them.

And with a spending allowance of 150 roubles a month—about $175 at the official exchange rate, and well above the average Russian worker's monthly salary—they expect to get full value from Leningrad's thriving cultural scene.

WEDDING

PROBERT — WARD

Rt. Rev. J. A. Carley officiated at the wedding ceremony in St. Joseph's Catholic Church, Belleville, on Sat. Jan. 4 at 11 a.m., when Mary Lois Ward, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Kitchener Ward of Belleville became the bride of Robert Lorne Probert, son of Mr. and Mrs. Lorne Probert of Belleville. Sister Mary Avila played traditional organ music and accompanied the soloist William Mann in appropriate nuptial selections.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore a floor-length white satin A-line gown featuring a lace jacket with Peter Pan collar and long sleeves. The back of the dress was highlighted with a full panel of lace which fell from the waist extending in to a train. Her headdress consisted of white flowers enhanced with pearl and crystal leaves and was caught to a chapel veil edged with French lace. She carried a cascade bouquet of white carnations centred with a solitaire mauve orchid.

The maid of honor Miss Marilyn Mitchell of Belleville wore an empire styled floor-length gown of crepe in orchid shade featuring a round neckline and short sleeves. A full panel fell from a bow at the back of neckline, and extended to the floor. Miss Elizabeth Young and Miss Roelie Wever, both of Belleville were dressed identically to the maid of honor, but in pale blue shade. All attendants carried bouquets of white and yellow mums.

Garry Brown of Belleville was groomsman, while Carl Ward, brother of the bride, and Bill Probert, brother of the bridegroom ushered the guests.

For the reception at Sun Luck Gardens, the bride's mother wore a two-piece pink dress with black and white accessories with a corsage of white carnations. The bridegroom's mother assisted wearing an aqua shade coat and dress ensemble with black accessories and a corsage of white carnations.

Leaving on the wedding trip to points in Western Ontario, the bride chose a two-piece Portrel dress in ivory shade with gray coat and black accessories. A corsage of bronze Sweetheart roses completed her ensemble.

On return the couple will reside in Waterloo.

Marmora Couple Celebrate 40th Anniversary

MARMORA — Mr. and Mrs. James Sproul of 33 Hastings St. N., Marmora, celebrated their 40th wedding anniversary last Sunday with their family, Mr. and Mrs. Michael Maloney and grandchildren, John, Janet and Margaret.

Mr. and Mrs. Sproul came to Canada shortly after their wedding in Glasgow, Scotland on Jan. 4, 1929. Mr. Sproul has been employed with Deloro Smelting and Refining Co. Ltd. at Deloro, and Deloro Stellite, Belleville, for 40 years, and expects to retire this year.

Both active members of St. Andrew's United Church, Mr. Sproul was Sunday School superintendent for several years and is a member of the senior choir.

MR. AND MRS. EDWARD W. HERRINGTON

Herrington — Knight

Mount Pleasant United Church was the scene of the recent wedding when Rev. W. Cox united in marriage Donna Marie Knight, daughter of Mrs. Dorothy Knight, Stirling and the late Mr. D. Knight, to Edward W. Herrington, son of Mr. and Mrs. H. Herrington of Belleville. Miss Jean Jeffs as organist rendered appropriate nuptial selections.

The bride, given in marriage by her brother, Claire Knight wore a dress of sculptured brocade featuring wrist length sleeves trimmed with fur. She wore a tiered illusion veil and carried a bouquet of jewelled pink carnations.

Miss Linda Johnston of Kemptville was the bride's only attendant who was attired in a pale blue silk bouclé dress and carried a nosegay of blue and white shastas.

Richard Herrington of Belleville attended his brother, while John Cole also of Belleville ushered the guests.

For the reception which followed at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Claire Knight, the bride's mother wore a deep pink wool dress with matching feather-ed hat and a corsage of pink and white 'mums. The bridegroom's mother assisted wearing a metallic blue brocade dress with brown accessories and a corsage of pink and white 'mums.

On leaving for points west, the bride chose for travelling a brown tweed suit with matching accessories and a corsage of bronze 'mums.

On return the couple will reside in Belleville.

SOCIAL and PERSONAL

Previous to the marriage of Mrs. Robert Probert (nee Lois Ward) a miscellaneous shower was held at the home of Mrs. Ed Young of Belleville when Miss Elizabeth Young assisted by her mother entertained in honor of the bride-to-be. A miscellaneous shower was also held when Miss Marilyn Mitchell assisted by Miss Roelie Wever entertained a large number of friends at the former's home. Fellow employees of Foley's Machine and Supply Co. also honored the bride at a presentation.

A BLEND FOR ALL SEASONS — The two garments here illustrate the new linen and wool blend fabrics now available in Linron, the linen fibre produced by Kirkpatrick of Ballyclare, Northern Ireland. The single-breasted man's jacket is in striking sage green with bold cream window-pane check. Twin vents and flapped ticket pocket, cut with a long, well-waisted line. Made by Essage of Gothenburg in Linron/wool cloth by Adam Paterson of Haddington, Scotland. At right a delicately colored suit available in shades of pink with hint of blue with white, with matching dupion blouse and revers. The short cropped jacket is edged with quadruple lines of stitching over a slightly A-lined skirt.

Study Reveals More Married Women Stay in Labor Force

OTTAWA (CP) — The general improvement in the average level of education in Canada is likely to induce more and more women to remain in the labor force after marriage, a new study indicates.

The study—by John D. Allingham, of the Australian National University and the University of Western Ontario at London, Byron G. Spencer of McMaster University, Hamilton—was initiated by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics.

It is an evaluation of the influence of age, education of both wife and husband, children and place of residence on the participation of married women in Canada's work force.

Improved education alone, they say, would suggest a continuing increase in the participation rate of married women in most age groups.

"Even for women in the most fertile age group—25 to 34, an increased availability of day nurseries and other substitutes for mothers' constant attention would permit increased participation rates," the authors say.

Secondly, any changes in fertility patterns brought about, for example, by the wider use of highly effective means of birth control, could be expected to have a pronounced impact on the number of married women working.

"If couples decide to wait a few years after marriage before having children, the wife is very likely to be in the labor force during that period. And there is evidence that such family planning has become a wide-spread phenomenon."

The general continuing rise in the husband's income, however, would continue to act as a deterrent to a wife's working. It might mean that women with little formal education who could not command high incomes would increasingly tend not to work.

One's Own Preference In Putting Up Lights

ANN LANDERS

DEAR ANN LANDERS: We moved into this home seven months ago. The neighbors were very nice, until the second week in December, when they all began to put up lights, tree decorations, Santas and sleighs, angels and what have you. This block looked like Macy's windows. My wife and I have always placed our Christmas tree in the front window and that was all. We never felt it was necessary to go in for a big display.

On December 18 a neighbor telephoned and asked if we needed help to "put up our Christian lights." I told her we were not putting up any lights. She then said, "Oh, then it's true — you folks aren't Christians." I replied, "I didn't say whether we were Christians or not. All I said was we are not putting up any lights."

The conversation didn't get any better and I finally hung up. Now my wife says I should not have left a doubt in the neighbor's mind as to whether or not we are Christians (we go to the Presbyterian Church.) I say it's none of her business, Who is right, Ann, my wife or me? — GROSSE POINTE.

* * *

DEAR G.P.: You are. And a holly wreath to you, Bub, for not allowing your neighbor to put you on the defensive.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I'm a bachelor who was keeping company with a middle-aged widow. Mary had this cat that I never cared for. Whenever I went to call, Jasper seemed to be watching every move I made. I was always uncomfortable around him.

Last week Jasper was sitting in the middle of the driveway when I came to call. I sounded the horn but he just sat there. I got mad because he was being stubborn so I ran over him.

Mary came out of the house at that moment. When she saw Jasper she became hysterical. It was plain that the cat was dead, but she insisted we take him to the vet's anyway. When I refused she told me to leave and never to come back.

I was very fond of Mary but if she would trade our relationship for a cat maybe she was too nutty to make a good wife. What do you say? — ANCHORAGE.

* * *

DEAR ANC: I say you sound like a sadistic kook and she is lucky to be rid of you.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I'm a 13-year-old girl with a 38-year-old problem. My mother. Whenever I am invited to spend the night at a girl's house, she has to know the name, address and phone number of the girl. I don't mind this, but I do mind when she calls the mother of the girl and gives her the third degree. This makes me look like a baby and I hate it. It also makes like my mother doesn't trust me.

Say something so my mother will cut it out. — NO INFANT.

* * *

DEAR N: What you consider the third degree is really a healthy interest in you. When a 13-year-old girl plans to spend the night away from home, her mother should speak to the friend's mother and make certain that at least one parent will be at home. I applaud her good judgment. And you should too.

Stew with Dumplings

By MARY MOORE

"In January I feel like eating a really hearty beef stew with dumplings," said Peady.

"I'll make you one," said I.

HEARTY BEEF STEW WITH DUMPLINGS

(Serves 4)

STEW:

1 lb. stewing beef (preferably shank or shin) cut into 1" pieces
1-3 cup flour
½ tsp. salt
¼ tsp. pepper
1 Oxo or onion Oxo cube
2½ tbsps. bacon fat (or butter or margarine)
2 cups hot water
4 small onions, peeled
4 long slender carrots scrubbed and cut into 1" pieces
4 stalks celery trimmed and cut in.o 1" pieces
2 tomatoes, quartered (or 2-3 cup canned tomatoes) —optional

Dumpling Batter:

1 cup sifted pastry or cake flour
2½ tsps. baking powder
½ tsp. salt
½ cup milk

Into a paper bag measure the flour (first amount), salt, (first amount) and pepper. Shake beef pieces in item to dredge. Melt bacon fat in heavy kettle with good tight-fitting lid and add floured meat and sear it over high heat until deep gold, stirring often. It takes about 8-10 min. Add Oxo cube and hot water, cover and simmer three hours. Three - quarters of an hour before mealtime add the whole peeled onions. One hour before mealtime add the cut carrots and celery. Fifteen minutes before mealtime add the tomatoes. Twelve minutes before mealtime add the —

Dumplings:

Sift together the flour (second amount), baking powder and salt (second amount) and stir in milk to just mix. Drop from dessertspoon (first dipped in stew to make batter slip off easily) in eight dumplings over top of stew. Cover at once and simmer 12 min. Serve at once.

NOTE: I like our vegetables to be recognizable and not mushy. Made according to my timing they retain their color, shape and a little of their crispness. The dumplings are super and Peady pronounced it "exactly right".

Women's Institutes

SIDNEY SOUTH WI

Mrs. G. Sills was hostess for the January meeting of the Sidney South Women's Institute.

The president, Mrs. Roy Nobes, welcomed 22 members and one visitor. She also conducted the business part of the program and reminded members of the summary day for the short course "Vegetables with a Flair" to be held Feb. 12 in Stirling. She also stated that the 4-H Girls project would be "Needlecraft", with the Leaders Training School to be held Jan. 13 at Stirling.

Following the business part of the program the members enjoyed a lively "Auction Sale" with many varied items for sale, ranging from shoes, clothing, jewellery and bedding to home preserves, baked goods, vegetables and books. Profit from this sale amounted to $28.25.

Lunch was enjoyed by the hostess and her assistants Mrs. K. Kerr and Mrs S. Spafford and a social time was enjoyed by all.

Funds From Sleighride Provide New Workshop

CAMPBELLFORD — The annual sleigh ride sponsored by the Campbellford and District Association for the Mentally Retarded will be held at the Campbellford Fair Grounds on Saturday, Jan. 18.

This event has become an annual affair and since the past few years, has grown in popularity.

Farmers with horses and sleigh have given of their time and equipment as have the owners of snowmobiles. Food refreshments will be available at the arena. The event starts at 10 in the morning, finishing at 10 in the evening.

Funds raised will be used to build a workshop for the Mentally Retarded who have reached the age of 18, and can no longer attend the day school.

In 1965, an appointed Authority, by government legislation took over the operation of the day school, leaving the original Association the responsibility of providing a building.

A year later, the Association purchased the property from the Rotary Club, which they had previously rented for a period of four years.

It is now the plan that the Association build a workshop on the site where the school stands on land purchased with the building.

As of Jan. 1, the school will be under the Northumberland-Durham Regional School Board jurisdiction.

Announce New Healing Substance... Shrinks Piles, Checks Itch

Exclusive healing substance proven to shrink hemorrhoids... and repair damaged tissue.

A renowned research institute has found a unique healing substance with the ability to shrink hemorrhoids painlessly. It relieves itching and discomfort in minutes and speeds up healing of the injured, inflamed tissues.

One hemorrhoidal case history after another reported "very striking improvement." Pain was promptly and gently relieved ... actual reduction or retraction (shrinking) took place.

Among these case histories were a variety of hemorrhoidal conditions. Relief even occurred in cases of long standing, and most important of all, results were so thorough that this improvement was maintained over a period of many months.

This was accomplished with a new healing substance (Bio-Dyne) which quickly helps heal injured cells and stimulates growth of new tissue. Bio-Dyne is offered in ointment and suppository form called Preparation H.

In addition to actually shrinking hemorrhoids, Preparation H lubricates and makes elimination less painful. It helps prevent infection which is a principal cause of hemorrhoids.

Just ask your druggist for Preparation H Suppositories or Preparation H Ointment (with a special applicator).

Satisfaction or your money refunded.

New Immigrant Inquires About Finance Charges

By DORIS CLARK

Dear Doris: In September I bought a car with $1,500 from a finance company. The salesman told me if I paid off my debt earlier the interest would be proportionately less (i.e. as 15.8 percent).

I thought this rate was high, and asked my friends at work about it, since I am a new immigrant. I found out that the Credit Union gives loans of 10 percent, and they agreed to pay my debt to the finance company in November. In the meanwhile I had paid $55 as my first instalment. I was expecting that the amount of interest for two months would be approximately one-sixth of 15.8 percent on $1,500, or less than $40. And the Credit Union would have to pay off less than $1,300 plus $40, minus $55 i.e., about $1,485. Instead, the finance company has asked for $1,518, which is $33. or more in excess.

This I think, is unjst, since It was never mentioned earlier neither in contract nor in speech. Moreover they came up with a much lower rate of interest to induce me to stay with them. But this new rate is still two percent higher than the Credit Union's rate.

Question: I just wonder if the finance company has the right to make this extra charge? Or do I have any right to approach some authorities in this connection? — Is This Right?

Dear Is This Right?: It's right, all right, the company you mention is an international firm with a fine reputation. The way they figure out rebates is the regular way.

A finance company does a lot of paper work in the process of arranging a loan, and is entitled to a purchase and handling charge. And I am told there is nothing against the law about offering you a lower rate of interest in the hope of keeping your business.

Don't forget that interest on early payments is about as high as it can get. As the amount of the loan goes down, so does the interest.

Dear Doris: What would you do about getting headaches from chewing gum? I can't leave gum alone because I love it so much. — Gum Addict.

Dear Addict: Do your jaws ache too? And your teeth? How does your stomach stand up to it? I often wonder how the hockey players feel after a couple of hours of steady chewing and playing.

Perhaps your headaches come from some flavoring in the gum to which you are allergic. This could be tested.

If findings are negative, you will just have to decide whether the headaches are worth it.

Confidential to Quarterback's Mother: Your Qb. may think you are being too fussy, but mouth guards are the coming thing. The dentists who work at making dentures (and putting teeth back into holes) report that such guards have virtually eliminated mouth injuries among high school and junior college players.

These specialists urge that the wearing of mouth guards be made mandatory for college football players.

(Is it a point of etiquette that is troubling you? Doris can tell you how it'd done in Canada.)

Trudeau's Spell Broken, British Papers Suspect Indecision

LONDON (CP) — British commentators have become increasingly critical of Prime Minister Trudeau who arrived here billed by enthusiasts as the potentially key man of the Commonwealth conference.

"Has the spellbinder lost his spell?" asks Daily Mail writer John Dickie in an article published today.

Expressing an opinion shared by Pakistani reporters at the conference, Dickie says Trudeau "has lost a lot of his glitter around the conference corridors" after first taking "most people by storm" in the British capital.

But The Mail's writer wonders whether it is fair to expect an impact from "this unusual man in such a short time."

Although ascribing a significance to policy reviews launched by Trudeau in Canada, Dickie goes on to predict that "allies and friends . . . in scores of capitals will soon begin to wonder whether lack of decisions from Trudeau are a less-than-subtle camouflage for indecision."

Similar apprehension already has been expressed by this week's Economist magazine.

And The Daily Telegraph jibingly confers the name "Trendeau" on the prime minister today in a satiric account of him as "swinger."

But Trudeau himself, seems far from disenchanted with the Commonwealth as his initial conference enters its final stages.

During a plenary session debate on economic problems, which continues this morning, the Canadian leader said Monday the Commonwealth has an important function in the ordering of human affairs. On Dec. 23 in Ottawa, he termed the association an anachronism.

He played no publicly-announced part, however, in Monday's main conference fuss, which involved the racially-complicated migration issue.

The controversy was sparked by the refusal of four East African countries to join in a meeting of delegation officials trying to thrash out the basis for agreement on such matters as entry of Asians into Britain from Africa.

The East African countries insisted that before they would participate in the consultations Britain must agree to admit thousands of Asians with British passports whose livelihood is threatened by plans for giving greater economic power to Africans in such countries as Kenya and Uganda.

British representatives spent the overnight hours trying to assure the Africans that London would not repudiate its responsibilities towards the Asians.

But the British, concerned over the touchy problem of race in their crowded country, also were likely to argue that more Asians could be admitted only in numbers which would not cause difficulties for them here.

A communique on migration, the delicate issue of Rhodesia and other matters is expected from the conference Wednesday, its last day in session.

Trudeau plans to fly to Rome the next day for visits with the Pope and Italian leaders.

In the Monday conference discussions, he heard criticism as well as praise for Canadian economic aid programs but promised no increase in such help.

Canada was not reported among the countries which urged a new world conference on monetary matters—a suggestion rejected by Britain's chancellor of the exchequer, Roy Jenkins, as liable only to stir more nervousness.

Monday night, conference delegates attended a reception by Canadian Arnold Smith, secretary-general of the Commonwealth.

Then they went to a banquet in their honor given in London's financial district.

There Tunku Abdul Tahman, prime minister of Malaysia, asserted in a speech that Britain had caused "a feeling of emptiness" among member states in Southeast Asia by withdrawing from its protective commitments in the area.

"The Commonwealth must be given a meaning," the Malaysian leader said.

Canada Accepts Grouping

LONDON (CP) — Canadians accept the Commonwealth relationship "almost instinctively," Prime Minister Trudeau told the association's conference Monday.

On Dec. 23, he said in Ottawa he suspects the Commonwealth is an anachronism.

Trudeau told his fellow heads-of-government here Monday that the Commonwealth has an important function in helping to put man's affairs in order.

THE BETTER HALF by BOB BARNES

India Fights British Bid to Obtain Commonwealth Backing for A-Arms Ban

LONDON (AP) — India acted today to thwart a British call for Commonwealth backing of the pact aimed at stopping the spread of nuclear weapons.

The issue arose behind the scenes in exchanges on a communique being prepared for the 28-nation summit conference of leaders representing more than 700,000,000 people on five continents. It is due for discussion again today.

As a nuclear power and prime initiator of the nuclear non-proliferation treaty, Prime Minister Wilson's government wanted the communique to include a declaration that would have expressed unanimous Commonwealth backing for the controversial pact.

The British, like their American and Russian fellow signatories, maintain the dangers of nuclear war would be lessened if states with a nuclear potential would voluntarily forego the right to build such weapons.

But India, on the threshold of nuclear power itself, has been resisting the move. Senior Indian officials argued in committee that the treaty discriminates in favor of existing nuclear powers.

They maintained its aims at perpetuating a monopoly of nuclear military capacity for the great powers without imposing on them any obligation to scale down their nuclear arsenals.

Thus, the Indians argued, non-nuclear nations which accept the limitations would assume a condition of eternal military inferiority without receiving in return any guarantees of greater security.

Britain and India rallied supporters for their positions. Canada and Australia were among the most important of Britain's backers, among other reasons because their security is insured by the nuclear power of their American allies.

Tanzania and Zambia lined up behind India, among other reasons because they suspect the white supremacy state of South Africa has the capacity to make and deliver nuclear weapons.

The conference seems certain to end in disagreement with the final communique likely to include only the British and Indian points of view. The conference winds up Wednesday.

Reynolds Pleads Guilty To Great Train Robbery

AYLESBURY, England (AP)—Bruce Reynolds, one of the ringleaders in Britain's $7,500,000 Great Train Robbery, today pleaded guilty to staging one of the biggest holdups in British history.

Police dogs and detectives guarded the little brick courthouse as Reynolds, a 37-year-old antique dealer pursued by Scotland Yard for five years, admitted two charges.

Dapperly dressed in a grey business suit, Reynolds confessed that he plotted with other rob the train in 1963, and took gang members—now in jail—to part in stealing the 120 mail-bags.

Reynolds had been portrayed in newspapers as the "mastermind" behind the robbery.

Watching impassively from the crowded courtroom was Detective Chief Supt. Tommy Butler, retired head of Scotland Yard's famed Flying Squad who tracked Reynolds relentlessly after the robbery. He arrested him Nov. 8 in a rented house at the seaside resort of Torquay.

Only about $1,000,000 of the loot from the robbery has been found, despite the capture of Reynolds, the last of 15 men arrested for the masked raid. But one gang member, who was convicted, escaped prison and is still at large.

One report said Scotland Yard detectives recently found more of the money hidden in British banks, but no figure has been disclosed and one police official said: "The hunt for the money will never stop."

For Butler, a Sherlock Holmes of modern times, Reynold's plea of guilty was a triumph. But one more step in smashing the gang remains for Butler, now retired from Scotland Yard but still working privately on the case. It is to recapture the gang member still at large—Ronald Biggs, who escaped from London's Wandsworth Prison in 1965.

"I am glad it is all over," Reynolds told detectives when he was arrested, the court heard today. "It is no life for anyone, always shifting about. I had been thinking for some time of giving myself up."

But Reynolds added: "This mastermind that the papers made such a fuss about is just not true."

Lorne Greene Says He Gave LaMarsh Tip on Kickbacks

TORONTO (CP) — Television actor Lorne Greene said Monday that he told Judy LaMarsh, former secretary of state, about kickbacks in the CBC, although he had no direct knowledge of them himself.

In a telephone interview with the Telegram from California, Mr. Greene, star of the TV series Bonanza, said the practice is widespread in all networks.

"Anybody in a position of buying film for a TV station often receives favors in return for buying the films from a particular company," he said. "I'm not going to say who told me this was common in the CBC, but several people have."

Mr. Greene said he once mentioned the situation to Miss LaMarsh at a cocktail party.

In a television interview Friday, Miss LaMarsh said she once commissioned a management report on the CBC that contained the information there were "kickback situations" in the corporation, and that the CBC was getting more money for dumped American film than the private network.

Commenting on the statements, Ron Fraser, vice-president of corporate affairs for the CBC, said of Judy LaMarsh or anyone else has facts and names, let us have them and we promise we will look into it."

Cabinet Colleagues Unhappy With Judy

OTTAWA (CP) — Ripples of reaction to former state secretary Judy LaMarsh's published memoirs continued to spread Monday from ministers past and present.

Reached in interviews here and elsewhere they came up with these comments on the book which is entitled Judy LaMarsh: Memoirs of a Bird in a Gilded Cage:

Robert Winters, former trade minister: "What divine right does she have to her judgment on her colleagues: That's up to the people of Canada to decide."

"I have my own views of people who comment on their colleagues and it's not very high."

Jack Pickersgill, former transport minister said he is reluctant to "get into with a buzzsaw." He expected to obtain a copy of the book shortly.

"No doubt I'll read all the parts to me very quickly. I would prefer to reserve my comments until I have read the book as she herself has suggested her former colleagues should. . . .

"I'd like her to know I'm still in sufficient terror of her to do what I'm told."

Justice Minister John Turner offered a "no comment" and added "why sell her book?"

Stanbury Supports Trudeau

TORONTO (CP) — Senator Richard Stanbury, national chairman of the Liberal party, said Monday any Christian would prefer to have agree with Prime Minister Trudeau's remark that he supports true communism as an ideal.

Mr. Stanbury was commenting in a telephone interview on statements by Rev. Ian Fraser, Anglican chaplain at the University of Toronto who Sunday told a teach-in of Canadian university students in London, England, that he would agree with ideal communism, a society in which each would give the best he could and take only what he needed.

The prime minister said the ideal would work "if we were all saints . . . but we ain't."

Mr. Stanbury said that if it were possible for people to act in a truly humanitarian way "we would have communists, but they don't act that way."

A free sample from your automobile insurance company?

The Automobile Insurance Industry in Canada recently announced that additional accident benefits are available from January 1st, 1969. They provide weekly disability compensation, or lump sum payments in the event of death or dismemberment, all this without the necessity of waiting to determine who was at fault in the accident.

The member companies of the Canadian Underwriters Association listed below feel you can't afford to be without this valuable protection. So, from January 1st, we have automatically added it to our private passenger car and station-wagon policies in this Province. The additional coverage pays up to $5,000 for death or dismemberment of the insured person, his family living at home, his passengers, or pedestrians he may injure, and up to $35 a week for up to four years in the event of total disability. The value of this coverage is $7.00 per annum per car.

Until you renew your policy no charge will be made. It's a sample of a valuable coverage from the insurance companies listed below. See your Independent Insurance Agent or Broker for details.

In Session for Two Year Term

Sidney township council members got right down to work yesterday following inauguration ceremonies. Considering plans for a proposed new sub-division north of Frankford are councillors Reginal McCurdy and Arthur Carleton, Reeve Jack R. Bush, assistant clerk Hugh Lyons, Deputy Reeve Gordon Wilman and Councillor Glen Myers.

Tyendinaga Councillors Are Sworn In.

William J. Walsh, Tyendinaga clerk for the past 13 years, swears in the 1969 township council members. From the left are Mr. Walsh, Deputy Reeve Leonard Walsh, Reeve Carman Gibson, and councillors William Cooney and Charles Long. A fifth council member, George Blatherwick, was unable to be present.

Rural Townships Agree to Look Ahead to Regional Government

That local rural municipalities are looking ahead to the time when some form of regional government will be a reality was indicated at inaugural council meetings in two county municipalities on Monday.

The reeves of both Sidney and Tyendinaga townships, in their inaugural addresses, referred to regional government.

Reeve Carman Gibson of Tyendinaga agreed that under the proposed regional government set - up his township "will certainly have to be included with some other municipality."

But he didn't expect that this new form of government would come about immediately in all areas.

He said it had to be accepted that the rural population was not as great as it was formerly and it was only proper that "we have to look after the numbers as well as the few."

He said the next two years would be a transition period in which council would be faced with many problems.

In Sidney Reeve Jack Bush saw the township faced with growth problems with the provision of water and sewer services for built up areas and better roads being of foremost importance.

Referring to regional government, Mr. Bush expected that under the provincial yardstick calling for a minimum of about 10,000 population for local administrations, he expected his township would be able to maintain its local government by teaming up with, say, Frankford.

But, he expected, there would have to be a larger area of government to look after sewer and water requirements.

Reeve Bush set the present township population as 7,500 with an assessment of $6,800,000.

For the immediate future Mr. Bush said his township required more planning with certain areas being placed under subdivision control.

Consideration would have to be given railway crossing protection either through signals or overhead intersection, while a needs study for township roads was required.

Indicative of the growth in the township was the proposal for the large Hastings Park housing sub-division west of Belleville.

Also under consideration, was a new housing sub-division planned for the Glen Ross area north of Frankford where up to 200 summer residences are proposed.

But the reeve foresaw even greater growth for his township.

"We have the best recreation area in the district and our full resources are just being tapped," he said.

Township Committees Named

Committees for 1968-1969 were set up by councils in Tyendinaga and Sidney townships yesterday at their inaugural meetings.

In Tyendinaga there are four standing committees — one more than last year. Committees, with the first named man to act as chairman, are as follows:

Roads — Leonard Walsh, William Cooney and Carman Gibson.

Finance — George Blatherwick, Charles Long and C. Gibson.

Property — Charles Long, William Cooney and C. Gibson.

Planning — William Cooney, L. Walsh and C. Gibson.

In Sidney no standing committees are set up but the following appointments were made.

Township and Library Board — Mrs. Kotek and Mrs. Muskiluk, Ivan Lockhart and Deputy Reeve Gordon P. Wilman.

Community Centre Board — Gordon P. Wilman, Reginald McCurdy, Robert Lough, Wintfield Harder and Ralph Uman.

Reeve Jack M. Bush was named township representative on the Lower Trent Conservation Authority.

Impressive Record

Sidney township clerk Byron Harder has established some kind of a record for attendance at municipal council meetings.

Mr. Harder served 10 years on the township council and for the past nine years has been the township clerk and until yesterday's meeting had never missed a council session.

At yesterday's inaugural, Reeve Jack M. Bush commented on Mr. Harder's devotion to duty.

In the clerk's absence, the swearing in ceremony for council members was carried out by assistant clerk Hugh Lyons.

Weekends Draw 500 Skiers to Batawa

Family Fun At Ski Hills

TRENTON — A mecca for winter sport enthusiasts — that's what the Batawa Ski Club offers those who take to the outdoors during the winter.

An expansive set up by the club in Batawa sees persons flock to its slopes to ski, sno-boo or skate. And there's a chalet for the lounge skier.

Two slopes, one for beginners, are continually dotted with the figures of old pros and young aspirants alike. And a vast network of ski trails greet those who tire of the tow lines.

And for anyone with a sno-boo who is searching for a place to romp with his machine — look no further.

Members of the Batawa Snowmobile Club take advantage of this resort like area as the sounds of the popular snowcraft is heard throughout wooded trails.

And for those who want to take things at a more relaxed pace there is a skating rink complete with music.

The winter retreat is within a couple of hundred yards of the Bata Shoe plant in Batawa and claims an average of 500 visitors on weekends.

"We are pretty pleased with the operation," said Paul Duncan, a member of the ski executive.

During Wednesday and Saturday evenings the slopes are dotted with fire as skiers race down the crests with torches as night skiing takes over.

But the main attraction here has to be the fact that the area never seems to be crowded. Even with 500 persons milling about there still seems to be room for more.

For the family man who has children with varying winter interests this is the place to come '— even dad can sneak off to the lodge for a little warmth.

Letter Going to OMB

Labor Council Supports Plaza Project

The Belleville and District Labor Council is backing the north end plaza project before the Ontario Municipal Board.

The council last night decided to put their views on paper and write the OMB before its Feb. 4 hearing on a city rezoning plea.

Rezoning of a North Front Street land bloc would defuse the current controversy caused by commercial rivalry and open the way for the plaza project.

The labor group voted its support after council president Ray Bradshaw indicated the plaza would animate a booming economic development in the area.

"This one project would open up many others and be of great assistance to our people," he said.

"Outside influence" was blamed by one council member for delaying the project.

(Oshawa Wholesale, parent of Towers Discount Department Stores just went of Belleville, has twice successfully sought postponement of the OMB rezoning hearing.)

"Who are they to come into this town and tell us what to do?" demanded William Peoples, without mentioning names.

"Everybody has a right to spend a dollar wherever they want to spend it," concurred Frank McKay, who recommended a letter be sent to the OMB.

Picton Strikers Supported

The Belleville and District Labor Council is gearing itself to sustained aid of the Procter-Silex strike.

The BDIC last night formed a committee to seek ways and means of putting support strikers on a continuing basis.

The strike is probably the longest-lasting labor protest in Quinte history — dating from last July.

Henry Noakes, Canadian Labor Congress regional representative, told the council the dispute involved more than the strikers.

"- - - It's almost a community there and it's a situation that overflows into affecting almost every union in this area."

The labor council should generate financial aid and moral support for Procter-Silex strikers on the picket lines, he said.

"It is a serious matter in a small community that's not notoriously union-minded," he added.

The committee should cooperate with the Trenton Labor Council, suggested Ray Bradshaw BDIC president.

"Between our two bodies we represent a lot of people," he said.

Spokesmen from the striking United Electrical Workers local 583 were scheduled to address last night's meeting at Club Canara, but failed to show.

Weather, Job Staff Changes Also Reasons for BGH Delay

More than an electricians' strike delayed completion of Belleville General Hospital's new wing, labor spokesmen were told last night.

Weather conditions, construction and staff changes all contributed to slowing progress on the project, the Belleville and District Labor Council was told by Gerald Cunningham, its appointee to the BGH board of governors.

Opening ceremonies now are scheduled for Feb. 22.

Blaming delays on an electrician's strike last summer was "a play up by the paper," said Mr. Cunningham.

Mr. Cunningham also indicated final cost figures will vary little from the now estimated $7,000,000-budget.

"The actual budget I can't mention right now," he said. "But I think that everybody will be pleasantly surprised.

"It's a little more — but so insignificant compared to $7,000,000."

He also praised the quality of administration given by the present governors.

"I think the people of . . . Belleville are not aware of how lucky they've been . . . . to have the membership on that hospital board that there has been . . .

In completing the new wing — the biggest BGH project ever — the board has managed economically "to cut corners but maintained quality."

Board Not Concerned

No School Committee Report For PE

The Interim School Organizational Committee report for Prince Edward county has still not been delivered in full to the county school board.

School board member Douglas Cealey raised the question of what had happened to the report at last night's board meeting at the Kente school in Ameliasburgh.

"I've never been able to find out what happened to it," complained Mr. Cealey at last night's meeting.

"We were told at the inaugural meeting in December that we'd have the report in two weeks but I haven't seen it yet."

The ISOC committees were formed under Bill 44 (organizing the new county education systems) of the Ontario government to compile technical information about schools in county systems and to make specific recommendations to the new school boards when they took over Jan. 1, 1969 to help in the new organization.

However, members of the new school board in Prince Edward are not too worried about the report or its recommendations.

Ernest Shortt, business administrator for the county education system indicated to the board that he had received some statistical information that the ISOC committee was to compile but also said that it would be of "no help or interest to the school board."

"Is there nothing there to guide us," he was asked by Mr. Cealey.

"I don't think so," was Mr. Shortt's answer.

Namath Absent From All-Star Practices

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Joe Namath, the toast of pro football, is the most wanted man on coach Wally Lemm's list.

Lemm had to run his American Football League East All-Stars through their first practice without a quarterback Monday.

Namath was apparently still celebrating his New York Jets' 16-7 victory over Baltimore Colts in the Super Bowl.

Lemm, who coaches Houston Oilers, is happy to have Namath on his side.

"Wasn't he fantastic?" Lemm said of Namath's performance against the Colts.

Coach Hank Stram of Kansas City, who had his AFL West All Stars together for their opening practice, also talked of Namath and the Jets' upset which took the AFL out of second class status.

"What makes Namath different from most pro quarterbacks is his speed of retreat into the pocket before passing," Stram said. "Most pro passers go back nine yards. Namath goes 12. That's a heck of a difference."

Stram faces the problem of rushing Namath, a job that proved too much for AFL West All-Stars last year—the first time the All-Star game was played in the Gator Bowl here.

Namath engineered a 25-24 East victory, throwing two touchdown passes and plunging one yard for the winning score in the last minute.

Namath feels the need for a fourth operation on his left knee to mend an inflamed tendon in the joint. Jets physician Dr. James A. Nichols feels an operation could be hazardous. He believes rest will take care of the knee, and he will take another look at it before making final decision on the requested surgery.

by Maurice Switzer
Sports Editor

What's one man's opinion? Well, it's a whale of a lot when the man is Joe Namath, as any buffaloed Baltimore bookie will tell you.

"We are the greatest," expostulated the closest thing to perpetual speech since Lew Durocher, and, until Sunday's Super Bumble by the Colts, there weren't too many other of the earth's three billion-odd residents that would have believed him.

We said the Colts would win, but certainly not by the 18-and-more points margin the oddsmakers were piling up for them.

We booed the Jets would perform the required miracle, for the same reason we hope that somebody lifts the Stanley Cup from the confines of Montreal's Forum — before the league decides to award it to the greedy Habs as a "keeper" trophy.

The New York feat was good for football, not to mention for the interior of each and every Jet's pocketbook. A cool fifteen grand for a balmy Miami afternoon's work ain't hay, although we know a few Colts who could put up with such fodder.

But Sunday's 16-7 result means much more than the financial spoils of a one-shot encounter.

It means that, after nine years, the American Football League can no longer, like a naughty boy, be told to be seen and not heard.

Particularly, as an AFL official pointed out after Sunday's game, because the Jets were just one of several teams in contention for the "junior" circuit's title, and they beat a team that was considered leaps and bounds ahead of the National Football League rank and file.

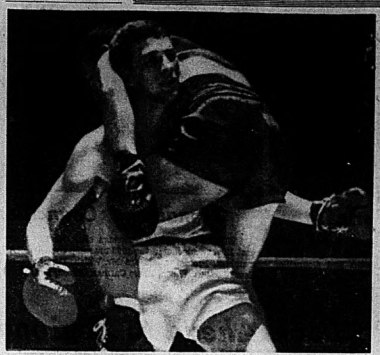
And I have a feeling you won't be reading quite as many articles along the "Playboy Joe Namath" theme any more — he's proven he can do as much with the football as he has with a hank of hair and the occasional controversy.

Sunday, Namath took a bitter swipe at the NFL-oriented sports press gallery when, paper cup in mitt, he said he hoped there were a lot of people "eating their pads and pencils."

But there would be no follow-up journalistic vendettas this trip — Namath had just picked all the holes, and created a few himself, in, what was thought to be football's most unpenetrable defence.

Above all, one result to come out of Sunday's upset of upsets should be that people will start to take the Super Bowl seriously.

The first two editions turned out to be colossal farces, with Green Bay yawning their way past Kansas City and Oakland.



So considering the first two as write-offs, and last Sunday's as a sleeper, what does that make Super Bowl 1970?

We predict a combination near-riot-earth-tremor-slugfest of a game.

But alas, just when the Super Bowl starts to live up to the "super," it will fade away into the yellowed bases of history.

In the fall of 1970, the AFL and NFL will play their first amalgamated season.

Trio Of 100's?

NHL Marksmen Threaten Records

MONREAL (CP) — National Hockey League records are in jeopardy as Bobby Hull, Phil Esposito and Gordie Howe continue to set a scorching pace in the individual scoring race.

If the top three continue the pace they have maintained so far this season, all three could reach or go over the 100 mark for the first time in NHL history.

Hull, Chicago Black Hawks' golden jet who has held the scoring lead since Nov. 6, shares the record for most points in one season—97—with team-mate Stan Mikita.

Statistics released by the NHL today show Hull has 60 points, including a league-leading 30 goals. Esposito's 59 points—18 of them gained in Boston Bruins' last seven games—are four better than the total for Howe of Detroit Red Wings.

Hull and Esposito have played in 39 games this year while Howe has appeared in 741. Each NHL team will play a total of 78 games in the current schedule.

Bobby Orr of Boston currently 17th in the scoring race with 38 points on 12 goals and 26 assists, could produce records for most goals, assists and points by a defenceman in one season.

Meanwhile, the netminding duo of Jacques Plante and Glenn Hall of St. Louis Blues of the Western Division is moving at a pace which could produce the most shutouts and the lowest goals-against average by a team in more than 10 years.

The two veterans now share the lead in shutouts with five each, their total of 10 equalling the high by Montreal Canadiens last season.

Award winners at the mid-way point of the season were Plante and Hall in the goaltending race and they shared $250. Hull picked up $500 as the mid-way scoring leader and Esposito earned $250 as runner-up to Hull.

Campbell Thinks Russians Could Be Better-Conditioned

TORONTO (CP) — President Clarence Campbell of the National Hockey League said Monday that if a NHL team ever plays the Russians, it won't be in a sudden-death game.

"We'll never play the Russians in a sudden-death game," said Campbell in an interview. "It will probably be a four out of seven or something like that."

Campbell, however, did not suggest that a series of games against the Russians is imminent.

The NHL president said most demands for a game have come from Russia's coaches as a propaganda device. The sports commissar, who would have to approve of any game, has been silent.

He said it would be to the advantage of the Russians to play an NHL team. The Russians have progressed as far as they can with their regimented brand of hockey and need to play an NHL team to acquire other skills, he said.

Campbell said he wouldn't be surprised if the Russians are in superior physical condition.

"We could adopt some of their training methods, like playing soccer in the sand for instance. I can't think of a better way to get players in shape."

The NHL president was here to attend the funeral of Bobby Hewitson, former curator of the Sports Hall of Fame.

Services Held for Pro

KINGSTON (CP) — Funeral services were held Monday for Ken Linton, 44, a golf professional for 16 years. He died Friday of a heart attack.

Mr. Linton had just completing a two-year term as a director with the Canadian Professional Golfers Association, recently retired as pro at Kingston's Glen Lawrence Golf and Country Club after 11 years. He was rated a top teaching pro by the CPGA.

At the time of his death, he was considering similar positions at golf clubs in Brantford, Fort Erie and Forest, Ont.

Before coming to Kingston, Linton was a golf pro at clubs in Napanee, Ont., for three years, and New Glasgow, N.S., for two years.

He is survived by his wife, Ruth, a son, Ken, and a daughter, Mrs. Ann Hall, all of Kingston.

Olympic Investment Boosts Mexican Economy

MEXICO CITY (AP) — Mexico's 1968 Olympic Games, criticized by some Mexicans as too costly for a developing country, actually are bringing a large return on a relatively small investment, a major bank reported Monday.

Banco National de Mexico (National Bank of Mexico) says the economy of Mexico has received an almost $20,000,000 boost as a direct result of the world sports extravaganza last October. Mexico's unrecoverable net investment, the bank reports, was less than $10,000,000.

"Final figures will be in the red but not as much as some observers have guessed," the bank said in its review of the economic situation in Mexico.

The review estimated that 85,000 foreigners visited Mexico between Oct. 1 and Oct. 15, with 80 per cent of them arriving in Mexico City by air. It was estimated they spent at least $24,000,000 during their stay. The games were held Oct. 12-27.

The bank estimates total Olympic expenditures to have been $153,200,000. It was said $92,480,000 of this will be recovered through the sale of real estate—such as sale of apartments used in the Olympic Village—and $51,700,000 can be written off as investment in new sports facilities for Mexico City's population of more than 7,000,000.

That leaves $9,008,000 not recoverable.

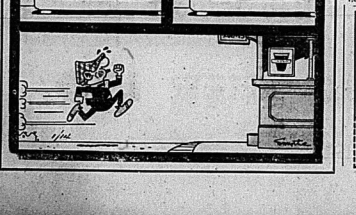
MOSCOW (AP) — The Soviet national hockey team has cancelled an exhibition tour of Canada that was scheduled to start in Montreal this month, the Soviet Hockey Federation said today.

The Soviet team, which was to have left for the eight-city tour Monday, decided that terms offered by the Canadians were unsatisfactory.



The sources added that the Soviets also considered the fact that the Canadian national team, which the Soviets wanted to play, was out of the country, participating in a tournament in Colorado.

Soviet national coach Anatoly Tarasov, renewing his appeal for a match between Soviet amateurs and Canadian professionals, said Saturday his players were tired of playing second-rate Canadian teams.

Maritime Junior Circuit Won't Endure 'Weak Sister' Role

HALIFAX (CP) — For a fledgling league that had a prognosis a little less than robust last fall, the Maritime Junior A hockey circuit has managed to stay alive and even quicken a few pulses among the rink set.

Fredericton Red Wings pulled out before play started in October and almost scuttled the first attempt to start a league of junior A calibre in the Maritimes. Of the three remaining Canadian bridges—Halifax, Moncton and Charlottetown—the Canadiens from the Nova Scotia capital are considered a class by themselves.

Not a propitious beginning, but there were a few surprises that by the half-way mark of the first season had left the three clubs closely bunched as the three Maritime provinces on a pocket map of the world.

Halifax Canadiens, the pilot light for Junior A hockey in the Maritimes, and the P.E. Islanders—that's the official name, says coach Jack Hynes place early in 1969 and Moncton Beavers weren't far behind. Attendances was adequate and hopes were bright for next season.

Bill Callaghan, a forthright Charlottetown newspaper man with an Islander's inbred devotion to hockey, is a tough league president who looks forward to the day when Maritime juniors will be every bit as good as the A loop of the Ontario Hockey Association.

"You have to put the OHA junior A in a class by itself," he says, but I'd say we're good as the Montreal Metro and the Maritime winners should give a good account of themselves against Ottawa valley." The Ottawa Valley winner goes against the Maritime champion in the Eastern quarter-finals 'of the Memorial Cup playoffs.

"We're working toward the point where we won't be a weak sister very much longer," Callaghan says.

He says the loss of Fredericton at the beginning of the season was a serious setback and the league had misgivings about its future. "But here in Charlottetown it's worked out better than the fondest hopes of the promoters. I think we're over the bump now.

"At first it was thought it would be a two-division league with Halifax in one division and Moncton and Charlottetown in the other. But it hasn't proved out that way."

And close competition in the three-team race has meant healthy business at the turnstiles in Charlottetown and Halifax. In the Prince Edward Island city, average attendance has been about 1,400 at the 1,900-seat arena; in Halifax the figure has been up to 2,000 with hopes for crowds of 4,000 or more in the last half of the schedule. Attendance at Moncton junior games has been off expectations slightly because of hot senior competition in the area, but the fortunes of the Beavers are still big news in the New Brunswick rail centre.

In fact, Beavers' coach Turk Broda, the former Toronto Maple Leafs National Hockey League goaltender who skippered London Nationals of the OHA junior A last season, has been pleasantly surprised by the performance of his new charges.

The team didn't look promising when he took over, he says, but the infusion of seven or eight new players has perked up over-all ability and he intends to conduct a hockey school in the Moncton area this summer to track down fresh talent.

As for the league, Broda says the calibre of play is better than he thought it would be and in a couple of years the Maritime loop will be on a par with the OHA juniors.

"Ontario is running out of players up there," he says, and "if they don't get players from the East and we can keep them down here, things will even out in a year or two."

It's a similar story with Fred MacGillivray, owner of Halifax Canadiens. A team in its fourth season and still going strong. "As far as I'm concerned the league has been successful," says MacGillivray, "but we've had a lot of difficulties.

"If Fredericton hadn't pulled out it would have been that much more successful."

Looking ahead, he says the only way junior hockey in the East can be successful on an A level is on a Maritimes-wide basis. He anticipates expension of the league next season, although he won't elaborate on what centres could be involved.

Until then the three-club circuit has been a success. "From our standpoint anyway," says Hynes. "When the teams are at full strength there's not much to choose between them."

That makes for entertaining hockey in any league—big or small.

Quinte Kiwanis Project

Ten-Member Club Serving 600 Swimmers

STAFF — The Quinte Kiwanis club only consists of ten members, but in providing the Belleville public with a water safety program, they make quite a splash.

The 25-week program runs every Friday night and Saturday morning from October until March at a cost of only four dollars per child, five dollars per adult or seven dollars per family for the entire twenty-five week duration.

Nearly 600 children and adults are presently enrolled in the program and receive one hour's instruction and swimming each week in courses ranging from the beginner's to instructor's level.

The program, currently in its fourth year, started off on a small scale, but in the last two years has mushroomed to its present level.

Every elementary and secondary school in Belleville, plus the OSD, Tweed, Picton and 11 schools outside of the city, all have students who are taking the Kiwanis water safety courses at the Yops Motor Hotel.

Program director Murray Workman would like to see similar programs be the responsibility of the city. "The whole program is in need of expansion but our club can't afford it at present."

Four Quinte Kiwanis members devote their time each week on either a week night or Saturday morning to oversee the operation of the water safety courses. In addition, there are one dozen members of the lifesaving class who volunteer their time Saturday morning to teach the beginners' classes. These volunteers are all students, and among them they have contributed 350 man-hours of instruction since October.

Director Workman noted that the Quinte Kiwanis swimming program is the only winter one available to Belleville citizens, other than YMCA courses.

Mary Tugnett Gets Kick Out of Beginner

Gordie Howe's HOCKEY

Bobby Hull is getting in more fights than usual, or so it would appear.

This, naturally, has brought the suggestion that Bobby has thrown away his white hat (the one the Good Guys wear) and After 12 years in the National Hockey League is now ready to fight his agitators.

Maybe. But for my money Bobby has always played it pretty tough except for his first couple of seasons in the NHL.

I remember when he first came up with the Chicago Black Hawks. For two years at least he would go out of his way to avoid hitting a veteran. I suppose this was partly out of awe and partly from respect.

But a man can only do that sort of thing so long. Then you must defend yourself. Hull is a veteran now and a superstar of long standing, so to heck with the nice guy image.

Against the Detroit Red Wings, however, he's been playing it rough for a long while. He tangled with Bryan Watson when Watson was with the Red Wings. That was back when Bryan picked up the tag of Super Pest. He is that, too.

In another game I remember Hull had a pretty good dustup with Gary Bergman of our club. That was in a game in Chicago. The other night in our building Bobby had a battle with Ron Harris, who has just as many muscles as Hull.

In my case I suppose I was born mean. Anyway I know I was mean when I was 10 years old.

I have a favorite explanation for that. I tell everyone that I grew up in a tough section of Saskatoon and that as a youngster I used my fists so much that I was seven years old before I discovered I had fingers on my hands.

Jr. Saints Win Again

Napanee Upsets Senior Saints

STAFF — Napanee seniors scored a major upset last night, defeating league senior Saints 56-46 for their first win in three games this season in the Boys' Class "AA" basketball league.

The Golden Hawks trailed 26-20 at the half, but broke the game open in the third quarter, taking a 40-36 lead with the help of the 10 point-ing hand of junior forward Dave Cunningham.

Cunningham topped the game's scorers with 20 points, while Rick Took tossed in 16 and Jim Stewart contributed ten points for the winners.

The loss, their third in a row, dropped the senior Saints into fourth place in the seven team league with a record of two wins and three losses. Wayne Casselman, Leo Baker and Eric Emerson each netted 11 points for the Quinte seniors.

The junior Saints trounced winless Napanee 67-27 and moved into second place with their fourth win in five games this season. In bantam action Quinte won its second game in five outings, thrashing winless Napanee 70-20.

Quinte juniors were never headed, as they led 13-10 at the quarter, 27-18 at the half and 46-20 after three quarters.

Tom Churchill netted 22 points for the winners, Stan Brooks added ten points and Steve Nash nine.

Centre Rob Madden and guard Brian Babcock topped the Golden Hawks' scorers with six points each.

League play resumes Wednesday when Centennial travels to Trenton for three games with the Tigers.

There is a minimum of activity at present because some area schools are currently holding examinations. Friday Napanee travels to Trenton while Belleville Collegiate plays host to Picton in a series which will feature a battle between undefeated senior teams with first place riding on the outcome of the game.

Mathematics Catching Up With Morrisons

COBOURG (Staff) — A string of six consecutive goals, late in the first period and early in the second, carried Cobourg Cougars to an 11-8 home ice victory over the Belleville Montreal last night and left the cellar - dwelling locals with only a slim mathematical chance of winning a Junior "B" playoff berth.

The win moved Cobourg into sole possession of fourth place with 18 points in 22 league games. The loss left the Morrisons at the bottom of the six team Junior "B" league with 9 points in 22 games, seven less than the 16 points Kingston has accumulated in only 20 games.

Last night, Belleville played without the services of many regulars, who are writing exams at high school or Loyalist College this week. Bill Blakely, Bob Mulvihill, Steve Sharpe and Ron Hopkins came up from Belleville's minor hockey system to reinforce the Morrisons for last night's confrontation in Cobourg.

The Morrisons opened the scoring at 2.36 of the first period when John McConnell scored an unassisted goal, and made it 2-0 at 7.39 when Ted Waite took a pass from Dennis McCormack and beat Cougar goalie Allen Brown.

The Cougars shut out Belleville for the rest of the first period, and came to life themselves at 8.01 when Larry Thompson's tally cut the margin to one goal.

Cobourg added five more goals, the last coming at the 2.58 mark of the middle period, before the Morrisons could score again. This time it was Dennis McCormack combining with Ted Waite at 8.16 of the second period to make it 6-3. Larry Thompson's second of three goals put Cobourg ahead 7-3 at 14.18, but the Morrisons came back with goals by team captain Ray Summers and rookie Jack Blakely to narrow the score to 7-5.

Goaltender Paul Hopkins was a busy man as the Cougars outshot Belleville 36-9 in the second period and 46-26 on the game.

John McConnell scored two third period goals to complete his hat trick and Ray Summers notched his second of the night, but it was not enough to offset four third period goals by the Cougars.

Larry Thompson and Larry Gillis each notched a hat trick for the Cougars while Mike Kelly scored two goals and Mike Caine, Gus Bambridge and Bob Sandercock tallied single goals for the winners.

The Morrisons get a break until Sunday afternoon when they play host to the second - place Peterborough Don Byes in one of their eight remaining regular season games.

DESIGNED TO FILL THE EMPTY DAYS!

In 1890, James Naismith was trying to figure out a game to fill the physical education curriculum between the football and baseball seasons. Basketball was the answer and his invention, and it's the only competitive sport of purely American origin.

There's a wonderful invention used all over the world which no longer needed basketballers or almost anything else. Sure we call it an Intelligencer Ad and you get it by dialing 962-9171.

NERO PLAYED THE BAGPIPES?

Although we think of the bagpipes as being a Scottish instrument, it is very popular in ancient India and the Roman Emperor Nero had one too. Made of a leather bag and reed pipes, the bagpipes are a popular folk and military instrument in Scotland and Ireland.

Whether you wish to sell a good set of bagpipes or any other no longer used items, letting tenants at your house, rely on a fast-acting Intelligencer ad to do it for you! Call 962-9171 for information.

Less Than Successful

ABC Network Pours on Four TV Specials

NEW YORK (AP) — The usual use of the special program by the television networks is to scatter them through the schedule as a means of adding a touch of spice to the usual meat-and-potato weekly fare.

ABC, in a novel departure Monday night, literally poured on specials—four in a row. The result was something less than an unqualified success, but that had more to do with the quality than the quantity.

The evening started with another program in the series made by marine explorer Jacques Cousteau and his assistants. This time Cousteau and his crew permitted themselves to be upstaged by a pair of young fur seals, captured one month or less tamed by constant feeding with bits of fish.

It all ended happily, even though it was far from the best of the excellent Cousteau programs.

This was followed by a short, superficial and altogether stagy little documentary purporting to show the procedures—and emotions—of a childless young couple intent on adopting a baby. There was just not enough time in 30 minutes minus commercials to do more than sketch in the procedures.

Presumably most viewers stuck around after that to see Jean-Claude Killy, in Le Champion, with its promise of watching the Olympic ski champion in action. We did, but briefly.

What we got to see was a manufacture's documentary in which we were asked to believe that Killy was travelling the world looking for new worlds to conquer now that he has reached the skiing pinnacle. We saw the French athlete driving a racing car, participating in a harness race, parachuting from a plane and moving around Hollywood sets.

Best program of the quartet came last, Cosmopolis, one of the network's Man and His Universe series. The program devoted most of its hour, not to showing the seven sets of sick cities but inspecting some suggested cures.

There were Britain's green belt cities and planned communities like Reston, Va., and Columbia, Md., both near Washington, D.C.

Architects and city planners talked of new building techniques.

Narrator John Secondari stressed that to provide decent housing for slum dwellers it is necessary for government to enter into partnership with private industry.

It was a well prepared, thoughtful presentation of a pressing problem.

Behind the Glass

The Sportsman's bonspiel for another year has passed into history and the committee in charge deserve a special word of congratulation. They worked hard to arrange new gimmicks, special dishes in food and better entertainment and in all they succeeded. This is one committee of the club that does not have a chairman and it shows what can be done with co-operative effort.

There were two trophies to play for this year, the Steve Flintoft trophy in the main event and the Everett Black trophy for the first time. Both of these curlers had a lot to do with the success of this bonspiel through the years.

The committee obtained an electric organ through the courtesy of the Whalen Music store and Linton Read spent most of his time at the console and provided the curlers with excellent entertainment. The group singing was not in the excellent class but it did provide a lot of merriment.

Ev Gemmell conducted the draw and kept everybody happy while Bob Farquharson from Sydney added to the pleasure. There was a draw for three hams and Claude D. Thie, Bruce Parsons and Dan Cowley were the winners. At the price the committee charged for tickets it was no bargain to win.

Bill Riley, a former president of the club, with a rink of Ken Bradford, Les Reid and Jim Pettitt won the Flintoft trophy and accompanying prize while the Everett Black trophy was won by a rink of Bob Burkitt Dr. Bill Hipwell, Steve Bakey with Bert Corke as skip. The third three-quarter high rink of Murray Mowat, Lorne Rollins, Bill Pettitt won with Bill Spinelli as skip.

In the two-game high category, a rink of Howard Slugg, Dick Barrett, Ernie Palmer with Phil Dybie as skip was high followed by a rink of Ed Tomsett, Jim Dallas Harold Mott with Bill Henderson as skip and third was a rink of Bob Rowe, Verne Goodwin, Dan Cowley, and Goldie Livingston on the head end.

The one-game high score was registered by a rink of Gordon Hipkin, Bert Messervey, Jim Thicke with Ted Wamboldt as skip while the no-game high winner was a rink of Bob Ralston, Bob Byrne, Ivan Kilborn with Bill Gault as skip.

A rink of Paul Henderson, Doug Graham, Neville Burroughs and Trevor Pinder as skip will represent the Quinte Curling Club in the Ontario playoffs later this month. Pinder and his rink won the honors on Sunday morning with a three-point edge over a rink of Al Shaffer, Jim Pettierew, Murray Johnson with Dewey Brown throwing last rock. It was a close game with Pinder scoring two on the tenth end, although one point on the eleventh and picking up a single mark in the twelfth. The first stage of the playoff will take place at the local rink on Sunday with Bill Gault as convener.

Frankford

Work was started on Sunday in shaving the ice. A planer was secured from Trenton and all four sheets will be cut down. There are several runs in the ice that have to be taken out. The Quinte mixed curling spiel will open next week and the curlers will be given a practically new sheet to curl on. There is a full entry for this event.

FRANKFORD — Miss Darla Reynolds of Madoc spent the holidays with her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. A. Carson.

Mrs. Fred Wood is a patient in Trenton Memorial Hospital.

Mr. Ron Sagley returned to Trent University, Peterborough after spending the holidays with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Clayton Sagley.

Rev. and Mrs. David Stronse and daughter Cheryl returned to Hope, B.C. last week. This month's time they return to Ontario to take up pastoral duties at Deep River, Ont.

Mr. and Mrs. Lyle Mater and family were guests with Mr. and Mrs. Jack Ferguson and family in Port Hope.

Mrs. Cecil Cumberland with Mr. and Mrs. Bert Elliott of Willowdale spent last week with Mr. and Mrs. Ray Moran and attended the funeral of their brother, Howard Moran.

Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Forbes and family with Mr. and Mrs. Price Barron and family of Stirling attended the 45th wedding anniversary of Mr. and Mrs. Forbes' parents, Mr. and Mrs. Harry Burtch in Waverley on the weekend.

To Your Good Health

Users Find Pacemakers Wonderful

By Dr. George C. Thosteson

Letters from two readers, a man and a woman, who have heart "pacemakers" keeping their heart rhythm steady ought to be of interest to others who may need such aids.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: The man who has had a pacemaker since 1965, I would like to tell you how wonderful it is.

I was taken to the hospital for an emergency operation and after several days the cardiac and X-rays was informed that it would be impossible to operate until I had a pacemaker. A heart specialist installed it. That was in my 71st year.

Then I went back to work and had my operation (gall bladder) two months later, and was back at work again in two months.

The batteries of the pacemaker are guaranteed for three years. I have had mine replaced once. You may use my remarks if you wish.—Mrs. M. L.

Dear Doctor: I read the letter from G. R. B. about the pacemaker. I think it is wonderful. I have had one in operating on five years, and it is not a serious operation.

My pulse was down to 32 when I had the pacemaker put in me. I have had new batteries. It takes about a half hour to put new ones in. I hope G. R. B. gets some relief. I am 73 years old and have had no trouble at all.—B. L. D.

In appropriate cases — when the heart beats too slowly or too irregularly — the pacemaker does a wonderful job. One of today's letters was from California, the other from Ontario. Pacemakers are in very wide use.

In the original operation, an electrode is embedded in heart tissues. Then the pacemaker, a little electrical instrument which produces faint but regular pulses, is embedded just under the skin surface, so it is easily and quickly accessible when it is necessary to install new batteries.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Please send me your booklet, "How to Control Emphysema," for which I enclose 25 cents and a long, self-addressed stamped envelope.

Can emphysema be detected just by looking at an individual? I consulted a doctor for shortness of breath, and he said he could tell by looking at the size of my chest from front to back that I had emphysema. He did take other tests, however. —D. R. H.

You can't diagnose emphysema positively just by looking at a person, but you can often be reasonably sure. Reason: the lungs can't expel old air, hence there is less space to inhale fresh air. The chest expands to try to compensate for this, so many emphysema sufferers become barrel-chested.

• • •

Dear Dr. Thosteson: About 15 years ago a reputable physician told me niacin is a vitamin, not a drug. Was he incorrect? — L. C.

Above question is from one of several sharp-eyed readers who noted my remark that niacin is a casodilator, that is, a drug which causes small blood vessels to expand slightly.".

It is perfectly true that niacin is a vitamin — classed as one of the B group. We need traces of it in our food to maintain good health.

When it is given in larger amounts as a medication, it is still a vitamin but it is — by definition — a drug, also.

The dictionary defines a "drug" as "a medicinal substance," and as one example quotes the phrase, "tea and coffee drugs."

Thus a drug — a medicine — may also be something else too: a hormone, an extract from a plant, a synthetic chemical, or such commonplace items as caffeine, baking soda or other alkalis, some mild or dilute acids, etc.

Sultan Sued

LONDON (AP) — The Sultan of Muscat, whose word was law on his African island until he was overthrown by a revolution two years ago, is being sued for non-support by his wife.

A London High Court is hearing the lawsuit, which began when the sultan, 38, summoned his former, 29-year-old wife, Princess Anisa, and declared three times in Moslem fashion: "I divorce thee."

Not only did the attempted divorce fail to work, but Princess Anisa took him to court for non-support.

Officers Elected

On Thursday, Jan. 9 Emlocast Knight W. J. Needham Throop, assisted by a number of Past Preceptors and Sovereign Great Priory officers, installed the officers of King Baldwin Preceptory No. 6, Knights Templar.

Jetliner Splashes Into Ocean Leaving Four Dead, 12 Missing

LOS ANGELES (CP) — The Swedish Viking, a huge Scandinavian Airlines DC-8 jetliner flying the polar route, came down in the rainswept sea Monday night as it was heading for a landing at International Airport—and floated. Coast guard officials called it a "miracle."

Of the 45 passengers and crew aboard, four were dead, 12 missing and 29 were saved. Many were injured.

The four-engined plane, on a polar flight from Copenhagen via Seattle, Wash., splashed amid two-foot swells eight miles off shore with passengers said, no warning.

In a scene of pandemonium, those aboard scrambled into rubber boats or atop wings and fuselage. Some fell into the sea.

There were 36 passengers and nine crew members aboard the airliner.

An armada of small boats—coast guard cutters, life guard craft and a host of private yachts from the big Marina Del Rey harbor near the airport conducted a search-and-rescue operation that lasted for hours.

They plucked survivors from the waves, raced them ashore to ambulances that took them to hospitals, and in some cases went back to look for more.

Confusion about the number of survivors persisted through the night because of small private craft without radios picking up passengers.

One of the bodies was brought ashore just before midnight in a Standard Oil Co. tug and the other three bodies were aboard a private vessel named El Segundo.

The plane was still afloat hours after the crash.

Due at 6:05 p.m. PST—9:05 p.m. EST—the jetliner had circled in the airport landing pattern for some 30 minutes after a bad weather stackup of planes, then began its approach. It vanished from the radar screen at 7:40.

Chief pilot Kenneth Davis, an Englishman living in Sweden, said he made a "routine approach except for some difficulty with the landing gear."

He declined to give details, but commended his crew and the passengers for "totally heroic and disciplined action" in evacuating the plane and launching rubber boats.

The floating was "a miracle" to one coast guardsman. Another called it "kind of miraculous" that the pilot "was able to keep the ship in one piece, landing in two-foot waves and darkness."

Passengers reported they had no warning of the crash.

Olaff Anderson, 23, an off-duty SAS pilot from Copenhagen and on his honeymoon, was asleep when he felt what he thought was a "hard landing."

"I looked around and realized it was a little more. Seats were thrown all over the cabin. Water started to flood in.

"I was sitting right behind the emergency door near the tail. I opened it, put on a life preserver, and began hauling people out on the wing.

"Some children were screaming, but there really wasn't any panic. The rescue operation was very efficient.

"We got into a life raft but it had a hole and sank. We all jumped into the water and swam to a second raft."

Helicopters, the first arrivals, hovered over mud-dropping rafts, dropping flares.

A stiff breeze whipped the rain, with air and water temperatures in the chill 50s.

Bill Sidsham, skipper of the life guard boat Bay Watch, said his craft was the first boat to arrive and he found four crew members on a wing and many passengers in two large rafts.

One raft was in the water tied to the plane, he said, and the other was still on a wing.

"We took a load from one of them. Of the eight we took four were injured, two seriously, one by a boy aboard ship."

He said the plane was high in the water, right side up.

"Very many of the passengers were moaning and groaning," he said. "There were cries of 'Oh, God, get me ashore,' and 'I hurt! I hurt!'"

A coast guard cutter took another dozen aboard and carried them ashore on stretchers

Congress Hears LBJ's Farewell

WASHINGTON (CP) — President Lyndon Baines Johnson, proud, politically canny and sentimental in turn, said half and farewell Tuesday night in his sixth and final State of the Union address to the United States Congress.

The big man from Texas, who rallied the country after the November, 1963, assassination of President John Kennedy, decided last March 31 not to run for another term largely because of the Vietnam war.

In his speech he:

—Called his massive social legislation achievements aimed at a Great Society an American "watershed" and proposed new steps for incoming Republican President Nixon;

—Said Vietnam peace prospects are "better today than at any time since North Vietnam began its invasion with its regular forces more than four years ago;"

—Warned that the Middle East is a "threat to the entire world;" and —Proposed that the U.S. resume talks with the Soviet Union on nuclear arms limitations — on which Nixon is flagging his feet — "at the earliest possible moment."

He also said the U.S. has achieved surpluses in both the current and the next budget being bequeathed to Nixon and also in the long-troubled U.S. international payments picture.

It was a performance that began with a standing ovation from the Democratic party-controlled Congress and ended with the singing of Auld Lang Syne — a 45-minute address broken by 53 outbursts of applause for a long-time member of the club.

In appearing personally for this traditional affair, Johnson broke a precedent of 108 years. Outgoing presidents normally have their last state-of-union addresses read in absentia.

The last president to personally deliver his last message to Congress was John Adams in 1801.

Johnson spoke five days before handing over power to Nixon at mid-day next Monday, ending eight years of Democratic party rule.

Toll On U.S. Ship Heavy

HONOLULU (Reuters) — The search continued in the Pacific today for possible survivors blasted overboard by fire and explosions which killed at least 25 men aboard the nuclear-powered aircraft carrier USS Enterprise Tuesday.

In Pearl Harbor, navy experts probed the damaged areas of the Enterprise under the glare of floodlights.

Capt. Kent Lee, 45, commander of the stricken vessel — the world's biggest warship — said 25 men are known to have been killed, about 85 injured and 17 others of the 4,000-men crew were unaccounted for after the fire which occurred at sea 75 miles southeast of Hawaii.

At least 15 aircraft were destroyed and 40 others on deck at the time of the disaster, and others were damaged.

The ship's eight nuclear reactors were not involved in the accident.

The disaster occurred at 8:19 a.m. (1:19 p.m. EST) as the Enterprise was preparing to launch a second group of planes during flight operations preparatory to its fourth tour of duty off Vietnam.

Fourteen planes were in the air at the time of the explosion, and bombs and rockets were in the flight deck area. After the blast, the 14 planes landed at a naval air station on Oahu, and the Enterprise steamed back to Pearl Harbor Naval Base after extinguishing the fires.

Lee told reporters on returning to port that the fires began with an explosion in the vicinity of an F-4 Phantom jet on the afterflight deck, about 100 feet from the stern of the 1,123-foot long ship.

As the Enterprise limped back to Pearl Harbor the deck remained littered with the twisted skeletons of charred aircraft. Three large holes gaped in the flight deck while the hangar deck below also suffered extensive damage.

Two destroyers, the Rogers and the Stoddert, remained in the area where the explosions and fires broke out to continue a search for survivors.

The Enterprise, built at a cost of more than $400,000,000 and commissioned in 1961, was greeted by stunned and grieving onlookers as it docked here late Tuesday afternoon. A long line of ambulances waited on the pier nearest to take the injured to hospital.

Foreign Aid Budget Is Heavy

WASHINGTON (Reuters) — President Johnson today submitted to Congress a foreign aid budget once more earmarking heavy spending in the Asian subcontinent, and Latin America and again stressing emphasis on birth control, food production and education.

Outgoing foreign assistance chief William S. Gaud, administrator of the Agency for International Development, termed the president's request for new spending authority of $2,500,000,000 a "tight budget."

"It is the minimum needed to do the job," he said.

The bill foresees actual spending in the financial year beginning July 1 at $2,000,000,000.

The additional money requested would be obligated during the year, but not actually spent.

France May Send Troops to Lebanon

PARIS (Reuters) — President de Gaulle and his cabinet met here today amid growing speculation that France might send a military force to Lebanon.

Such a move probably would prove highly unpopular with Frenchmen, many of whom are still indignant with the authoritarian way in which de Gaulle last week clamped a total ban on arms shipments to Israel following an Israeli raid on Beirut airport Dec. 28.

The French foreign office said that France "would not stay indifferent if the Lebanon is threatened" — a statement interpreted by political observers in Paris as at least a moral commitment to help the Arab country in the event of an Israeli attack.

France administered Lebanon under a League of Nations mandate from 1920 to 1941.

The statement confirmed similar remarks made Monday in Beirut by former French information minister Georges Gorse after a meeting with Lebanese President Charles Helou.

Gorse ostensibly went to Beirut to open a concert hall but before leaving Paris he met de Gaulle and his statement gave rise to speculation in Lebanon that France might station a military force there.

Wilson Wants Parley Held Outside Britain

LONDON (CP) — Prime Minister Wilson suggested today the next prime ministers conference be held next year in another country.

While several countries have offered their capitals, Canada hasn't made up its mind whether to make an offer, an official said.

Wilson's suggestion came during the morning session just before Commonwealth leaders broke off for a pre-luncheon drink with Wilson and an off-the-record attempt to find a Commonwealth approach to the Nigerian war.

Prime Minister Trudeau attended the morning session but an official said he didn't offer Ottawa as a possible site for the next conference. Kenya and Barbados offered their capitals.

The official said it is too early for Canada to make a decision one way or the other. The way Wilson put his suggestion, he said, is that a conference site outside of Britain was something to be considered later in the year.

The emergency attempt to find a possible solution to the Nigerian war came as delegates adjourned for a private meeting with Wilson.

Commonwealth officials said the private meeting was just for a pre-luncheon drink in view of an early cleanup of discussions on Commonwealth co-operation.

However, one informant said the real reason was an attempt to find some way of pressing for a Nigerian settlement despite refusal of the federal authorities in Nigeria to allow the war to become a conference agenda item.

A federal spokesman has stated Lagos doesn't want a cease-fire at this time because the federal troops have the Biafrans "on the run" and figure they can clean up the war before the end of 1969.

A long, rambling communique will be issued later today to wind up the 17th conference which produced a lot of talk but little in the way of firm decision-making.

Johnson Forecasts Cut in War's Cost

WASHINGTON (Reuters) — President Johnson today forecast a 12-per-cent cut in Vietnam war spending as he presented his final federal budget, calling for record spending totalling $195,300,000,000 in 1969.

The outgoing president said his decision to yield a surplus of North Vietnam would help trim military and aid costs of the Asian war for the first time — by nearly $3,500,000,000 in the fiscal year starting July 1.

Government officials said the Vietnam cut was based on a slackened level of fighting in recent months, and said bigger reductions may be possible by mid-1970.

Johnson announced the Vietnam economy plan in submitting his final budget to congress, just five days before retiring from the White House. It was the first balanced federal budget since 1960.

He predicted a $3,400,000,000 surplus for the 1969-70 fiscal year, and said the balance sheet for the current year, 1968-69, would yield a surplus of about $2,400,000,000.

Johnson's projections — reversing a post-war record $25,200,000,000 deficit in 1967-68 — were based on plans to continue a 10-per-cent income tax surcharge, enacted last year to check growing inflation.

The budget also reverses a four-year trend of steadily mounting Vietnam spending, reducing the costs to the lowest level since 1957.

Relations With France Are Difficult

LONDON (CP) — External Affairs Minister Sharp says Canada's relations with France require more careful consideration than with any other country at this time.

The attitude of President de Gaulle on Canadian federalism is not in accord with Ottawa's view, he said at a press conference Tuesday.

Ottawa has been at pains to emphasize that it is just as interested as Quebec in promoting the aspirations of french-speaking Canadians, Sharp said.

Four Cosmonauts May Trade Ships in Space

MOSCOW (CP) — Four rookie Soviet cosmonauts, riding Soyus 4 and Soyus 5, began manoeuvring in space today for perhaps the world's first crew transfer in orbit.

A telecast from aboard Soyus 5 reported about an hour after its launching today that the "splendid" craft was functioning normally and its three-man crew were feeling fine.

Earlier, cosmonaut Vladimir Shatalov, flying alone in Soyus 4, reported all was well aboard his craft. Shatalov was launched about 24 hours before his companion ship.

There were unconfirmed reports in Moscow that the two ships would link up, and one of the men from Soyus 5 would climb aboard Soyus 4. As usual, space officials kept silent on plans for the four-man mission.

The cosmonaut transfer would give the Soviets another "first" in space, and also we-did mark the first time a man aboard the U.S. feat of manned docking in orbit.

Ship commander Brosi Volynov reported in the telecast from Soyus 5 that he and his two fellow crew members withstood the launch "very well" and had begun unspecified "joint experiments" with Shatalov's craft.

The telecast, relayed by videotape on Moscow television, showed Volynov and research engineer Yevgeny Khrunov smiling and relaying in the cabin. The third man aboard, Alexei Yeliseyev, was not within camera range and might have been in the spacecraft's other compartment.

Tass reported that by 1 p.m. (7 a.m. EST), Shatalov had made 18 orbits and Soyus 5 two orbits. Volynov was using manual controls to adjust the craft's inclination.

Both craft were within sight of each other.

Soyus is the Russian word for "union."

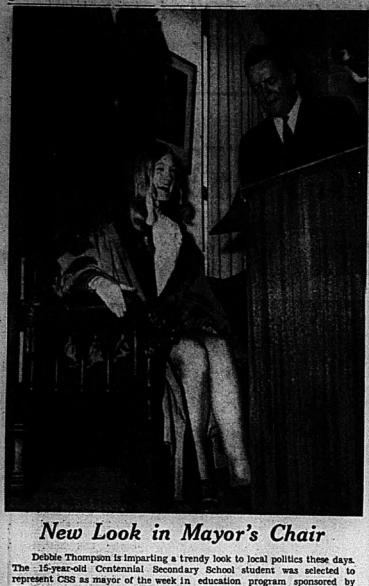
This is the first time since June, 1963, that the Soviet Union has attempted a space feat involving two manned ships. It is also the first Soviet mission with four cosmonauts in orbit simultaneously.

Soyus 5 was the first multi-manned Soviet space venture since the Voshkod 2 flight in March, 1965, when Col. Alexei Leonov made man's first walk in space. He was accompanied by Col. Pavel Belyayev.

Moscow television began to show videotaped film of the scene at the Baikonur Cosmodrome in central Asia within 40 minutes of the launching. Take-off of Soyus 5 was shown less than an hour after the blastoff.

Shatalov's takeoff Tuesday was shown on television within 90 minutes, the first time the Russians have shown the launching of one of their space ships on the day it took place.

The television broadcast today cut this gap down even further but the Soviet Union has still not shown a space launching live.



The announcer quoted the Soyus 5 crew as saying: "We felt a strong vibration after takeoff but we feel fine."

Volynov, in charge of the Soyus 5 crew, said it was a "great honor" to be chosen for the joint experiment with Soyus 4.

Tass quoted him as saying in the launch-pad statement that he and his crew are "proud that having been entrusted with participation in the peaceful exploration and use of outer space for mankind's practical needs. . . .

"We'll be reporting to you, dear friends, on the native earth. So long."

The announcer quoted the Soyus 5 crew as saying: "We felt a strong vibration after takeoff but we feel fine."

Potter Hopes Loyalist May Add Nursing Course

Belleville General Hospital may count on little local political sympathy to ease disappointment over postponement of its nursing school expansion.

The Ontario government decision to veto building plans for the BGH Edith Cavell School of Nursing — part of its province-wide austerity drive — rattled hospital authorities yesterday.

The obvious man to turn to in such a dilemma would be MPP Dr. Richard Potter.

He's not only the local provincial government political contact — as Quinte MPP — but a physician himself.

But today, Dr. Potter — who already has made his mark as one of the bluntest talkers in Ontario public affairs — left no doubt about his feelings in the issue.

For some time, says Dr. Potter, he has been trying to impress on the government that nursing education could be handled "very well" at Ontario community colleges.

And with Belleville already the home of Loyalist College, Dr. Potter felt it "just an unnecessary expense" to build a school of nursing in such a situation.

"How far I've been successful in convincing the government of this, I'm not prepared to say," he added. "Certainly, money is tight and we have to look at every dollar we're going to spend."

Under new training schemes, nurses spend their first two of their three-year study course in an academic environment.

"There's no reason in the world that I can see that these nurses should not get their training at the colleges . . ." he added.

Economy would result from reducing duplication of facilities in a single community, Dr. Potter emphasizes.

The same theory holds true for community colleges, however, he said.

"I'd like to see the colleges devote their time and training to this type of personnal rather than duplicating services which are already in the community".

Loyalist was a case in point, he indicated.

In Belleville, the Ontario Business College has served the community a "good many years".

"While the colleges . . . has a course in secretarial work it's really a duplication of what we have here", said the MPP.

Meantime, at BGH today hope was expressed that yesterday's announced setback was temporary.

"I think it's only deferred for the time being", said administrator Phillip Rickard.

Mayor and Merchant In Clash Over Plaza

Things are getting a bit edgy between at least one dos-stown Belleville merchant and mayor and council as far as the proposed shopping plaza in the northern end of the city is concerned.

The heated discussion developed at the weekly luncheon meeting of the Belleville Kiwanis Club when merchant Carl Rolof asked Mayor J. Russell Scott about the plaza.

Mayor and council were guests at the meeting of the Kiwanians yesterday and Mayor Scott was speaking about problems and developments in the city.

Mr. Rolof asked the mayor if he knew whether one client of the proposed plaza was a "K-Mart".

The mayor said no and replied four "national chains" were trying to obtain leases to operate in the plaza.

Mr. Rolof expressed concern that the store would be a K-Mart and would ignore bylaws, rulings on opening hours.

Mayor Scott said that he knew nothing of this, in which Mr. Rolof suggested somewhat heatedly that it should be a matter of concern for council and the mayor.

The rest of the meeting followed the original format — that of a report from the mayor.

Mayor Scott said: "It is our feeling that we should do something about the approaches to our city." He mentioned in particular Canniffon Road.

He also told Kiwanians of studies being conducted by the Moira River Conservation Authority and on urban renewal.

According to the mayor, it is hoped that one day Riverside Park will extend from Highway 401 to College Street on both sides of the river.

He spoke of improvements along the bay shore, saying that someday it could be the "finest beach and waterfront area in the Province of Ontario."

Concerning problems, the mayor told Kiwanians that both federally and provincially certain grants and policies have been "chopped" In particular he said that urban renewal grants would not be approved.

He mentioned that the city must proceed with sewers and the river which are going in this year.

In the question and answer period following Dr. Scott's address, he was asked if the Orr property near Riverside Park was owned by the city and if so could it be used as the Hastings County Museum.

Dr. Scott replied that the house was somewhat of a fire hazard and that putting in historically accurate articles could be hazardous.

He was also asked about the building of a fair grounds — whether it would be used in the near future.

Mayor Scott mentioned it will be used every minute of every day," he replied. Mayor Scott mentioned that work was still being done on the building, but that many activities were slated upon completion.

School Operates Patrol

TRENTON — Next week will see the Trenton Christian School begin operation of the town's first school bus patrol and it looks as though a second one is on the way.

The organization of the patrols is in the hands of Constable Jim Graham of Brighton OPP and Sergeant Jack Graham of the Trenton Police Department.

Constable Graham said today that St.-Peter's School has recently asked for aid in setting such a patrol.

The aim behind the new set-up is to make travelling on school buses safer for young students.

One of the most important points, according to Constable Graham, is that there must be complete silence when a bus approaches a railway crossing to make sure the driver can hear the sounds of any approaching train.

And getting on and off the bus will require a great ambunt of caution on the part of the students.

Younger tots should get on first followed by the older pupils. When the bus stops students living on the same side of the road as the bus should get off first. Those that live on the other side should walk 10 feet in front of the bus before they cross the road.

Patrol members will also be on the lookout for cars that do not stop when the red lights on the bus are flashing.

Woman Charged With Assault

PICTON (Staff) — A striking Proctor-Silex worker was charged with assault last night after an incident outside the Bell Hall here at 10:30 p.m.

Picton police laid the charge against Mrs. Ruby McConnell, Mrs. Mae Gray of Picton, a 41-year-old worker in the strikebound plant, reports she was thrown to the ground several times.

She was coming out of a bingo game at the hall, when the incident occurred.

Tyendinaga Reviews Colorful History

By ROY PEACOCK
Staff Reporter

Regional government may eventually see the municipality lose much of its identity, but Tyendinaga township in the southeast corner of Hastings county can look back to a colorful history.

The township is the site of the Mohawk Indian reservation of the same name and its major population centre Mill Point, or Deseronto, as it is now called, was once one of the biggest lumbering and sawmill towns in the area.

The township council can boast to still having its original minute book dating back to 1847 and can point to the fact that at one time the municipality had a greater population than did Belleville.

Records show that in 1800 Tyendinaga had a population of approximately 7,000 people following what was termed as "remarkable" growth during the 1850's.

This was the big boom period for the township with lumber mills, flour and grist mills going full blast.

The township was created back in 1820 out of lands surrendered to the Crown by the Mohawks of the Tyendinaga Reserve and like the reserve, took its name from Joseph Brant, noted Mohawk chief, whose Indian name was Tyanendenaga.

The township settled slowly in the 1820's and by 1830 when it separated from Thurlow for municipal purposes the population was still only about 770.

Prominent among the first settlers were the Ford, Sweeney, Meaken, Kenny, Hanley, English and Millimurray families from Ireland and the McLaren and McFarlane families from Scotland.

The Appleby, Lanlers and Morden names of United Empire Loyalist descent.

But the township experienced a population explosion in the 1830's when labor unrest and difficult times in the British Isles helped to boost the population to 1700 by 1838.

So great was the population increase that the government opened more Indian lands for settlement and the Mohawks lost their hunting grounds.

Many of the new settlers were British who settled because it was the only township in which new land was available in quantity.

The Irish Roman Catholics generally settled in the eastern half of the township while the Protestants were concentrated in the western part.

By 1837 the township had seven sawmills, a grist mill, five taverns and five weavers' shops.

Shannonville, Millbrook, Melrose and Lonsdale shared in the expansion.

According to the county history writing by Belleville high school teacher Gerald Boyce, the first town meeting in Tyendinaga appears to have been held in 1839 at Shannonville.

The first township minute book dates back to 1847—three years before the municipality was able to boast of separate government.

But the same book contains notations referring back to as early as 1830. The first mayor of the township was Wellington Frizel — in 1850.

As the lumbering trade diminished and people commenced moving from the farms, the township population suffered a gradual decline until in the 1940's a low point of about 3,000 was reached.

Now farming is regaining its importance and the population is again on the upswing with clerk William Walsh reporting last year's count at about 3,450.

Melrose has been the seat of municipal government since the township hall was built there in 1880. The village was named by its first storekeeper, Mr. Duncan, whose birthplace was in Melrose, Scotland.

Township History Recalled

Tyendinaga Clerk William J. Walsh and Reeve Carman Gibson check items in old township record book. Minute book dates back to 1847 but notations go back to 1830.

Council Meets on Tuesday

A resolution requesting the Ontario Department of Municipal Affairs to postpone regional government legislation will be considered at the inaugural meeting of Hastings county council starting next Tuesday.

The resolution from Simcoe county asked postponement of the legislation until such time as rural municipalities can be given a clear understanding as to the financial undertakings when they are attached to urban units.

Another resolution, from Ontario county, asks that the Minister of Lands and Forests be petitioned to amend the wolf bounty act to provide for the payment of a bounty for hybrid wolves.

Council will convene at 10 a.m. and go into caucus for appointment of a new warden and standing committee members. The formal session of council will commence at 2 p.m.

Destiny of Post Office Discussed by Councillors

TRENTON — The destiny of the old post office and a possible overhaul of the town administration will be discussed by members of council behind closed doors today.

The general government committee under the chairmanship of Councillor Stanley Ketcheson will discuss the two items and it is hoped recommendations will be formed to be presented to council at its next meeting.

"We will discuss the matters and if we make any recommendations they will be brought up at the next council meeting", explained Councillor Ketcheson.

"It would not be possible to make anything public after the meeting without allowing council to have a look at it first."

A report from Eric Hardy was received by council on its meeting of Jan. 6 in which Mr. Hardy made various recommendations concerning the revamping of the town's administration.

In the Hardy report on Trenton the consultant labelled some of the members of the town's administration as "lacking in proper qualifications" and suggested something be done about it right away.

The second report received by council contains his recommendations and the cost to carry them out.

Clerk-controller O. W. Larry has concurred and has recommended immediate action on the situation.

Mr. Hardy's recommendations will be considered by the committee which began its meeting this morning and if the councillors are satisfied they will be going to council at the next meeting to discuss re-hiring the consultant.

And the destiny of the old post office will be decided by this closed meeting. During the council meeting of Jan. 6 it was Councillor Gerald Weaver who demanded immediate action on renovation of the building.

Councillor Paul Tripp, however, wanted the matter referred to a closed committee meeting for one last time.

Winter Sports Capital Predicted for Marmora

MARMORA — With the energy and enthusiasm shown by members of the newly organized "Marmora and District Snowmobile Club," in the establishment of new trails and planned entertainment for the whole family, Marmora is well on the way to becoming the winter sports capital of Eastern Ontario.

Members will be entitled to take part in cross-country runs, snowmobile meets, candlelight parades, barbeques, and other functions being planned by the executive.

Establishment and maintenance of trails recently approved by Councils of Marmora Village and Marmora and Lake Township, is progressing at a good rate, and the 100-odd local snowmobile owners are constantly using the trails south along Crowe River, Crowe Lake, the Marmora-Deloro area, and north-Marmora and Tifton routes.

Seven thousand copies of a map indicating the trails around the immediate Marmora area of 250 miles, is in process of publication and will be distributed to all surrounding centres. Shown on the map also will be a link to the trail from Marmora north to Coe Hill which in turn joins to all 600 miles of trails in the Centre Hastings Winter Sports area. The map is made possible by the generous support of the various business men around the area, and Marmora is believed to be the first town to publish a map with regard to winter fun activities.

All trails in this vicinity are at present free of charge resulting from the generous consent of the numerous landowners.

Still Fighting

From the strategic point of view the war in Vietnam is like none other fought in the past.

Yet from that same viewpoint the conflict has proved little or nothing. War never proves anything, other than the fact that human nature leaves much to be desired.

From the mere academic standpoint, however, one would have expected that tactics would have become more efficient. All that has evolved is the fact that a relatively ill-equipped (but brave and determined enemy) has the Viet Cong and North Vietnamese — are a match for a large American force employing weapons of every description plus aircraft and helicopter transports and gun ships.

The communists have no aircraft to speak of, presumably moving all their men and weapons in ground vehicles, or else manhandling them.

The U.S. forces rely greatly on fire power. They also rely on the helicopters for transportation and additional fire power. Yet these same helicopters can be a hindrance rather than a help. They are vulnerable to ground weapons and to the kind of assault the Viet Cong brought off the other day at a big U.S. airfield in the Mekong Delta.

The Americans lost 15 helicopters in the Mekong Delta attack, and six others were damaged in a mortar barrage at the headquarters of the U.S. 9th division 40 miles away.

In effect, the Americans and their allies, for all their superior equipment, are still fighting (and not winning) this desperate conflict in Vietnam eight long years after it started. It is a tiresome affair, most of all for the United States. As wars go, it is as futile a confrontation as ever was fought. It must end some day, however, and in that assurance there is hope that Asia may have a brighter future ahead, unfettered by conflicting ideologies.

English Without Tears

As any foreigner who has to learn it will tell you, the English language is at once one of the most difficult and exasperating of languages. So many words mean so many different things. Its inconsistencies and nuances are awesome.

At the same time English can be one of the most beautiful and poetic of tongues. The fact it is recognized all over the world as the number one language of international business is another point in its favor.

That it can be abused, unfortunately, is also true, as Windsor Star columnist Pat Whealen points out elsewhere on this page. He draws attention specifically to the misuse of the word "facility," and it is ironic in this context to see the same kind of liberty being taken with the word in a European publication: German Features. In an article on rehabilitation of prison inmates, the article refers to a jail as "a confinement facility."

English certainly takes a beating these days, all the way from teenage talk to the gibberish of the scientific world and the "gobbledegook" of the government and civil service information services.

We hear about "the generation gap," and nowhere probably is this more apparent than in the language spoken by adults and the younger set respectively. Premier Robarts of Ontario Robarts apparently got caught out in this manner while addressing a university audience recently. He made some reference to something "going to pot" and when the students broke into laughter Mr. Robarts wanted to know what it was he had said that had caused so much mirth.

Well if Mr. Robarts had been "doing his thing" and "with-it-ing" the young people and talking say about marijuana and the sex bit, the feedback would have been . . . well you know, groovy man. The students were amused, because the premier was not on their wavelength.

Czech Newcomers

The influx of refugees from Czechoslovakia is bringing benefit to Belleville as well as other communities in Canada. Of more than 8,000 Czechs who fled their homeland after the Soviet occupation last August, about 50 have settled here. Most of them have found jobs. The more recent arrivals are busy learning English. The newcomers are welcome indeed. Belleville needs not only their professional skills but the cultural diversification their presence is helping to foster in this area.

Ratification Issue

Israel One of Five Nations Close to Nuclear Capability

WASHINGTON (CP)—Recurring reports that Israel is preparing to produce its own atomic weapons point up a dilemma that President-elect Nixon must reconcile with his go-slow attitude so far toward United States approval of the treaty to curb the spread of nuclear arms beyond the existing five countries who have them.

Israel is one of the five so-called "threshold" countries. West Germany, India, Japan and Switzerland are the others —generally considered to be close to the ability to produce nuclear arms.

Israel last week denied a National Broadcasting Company report that it now has or soon will have nuclear weapons. But one qualified source here said it is understood that Israel, originally with some French help, had embarked on establishing the production of plutonium from uranium which could be stockpiled for nuclear arms.

Eighty-four countries have signed the treaty to curb the spread of atomic arms but only six have ratified it. Canada last week became the fifth to do so. Senator J. W. Fulbright of the foreign relations committee—which would do the U.S. spadework on ratification—said it is not an immediate subject on his committee's agenda.

To take effect, the treaty has to be ratified by 40 countries, including the U.S., the Soviet Union and Britain. Only Britain of the three has ratified so far.

President Johnson had hoped to cap his final days in the White House with ratification but that won't happen now.

He warned Oct. 11 that if we do not proceed to ratify this treaty promptly the forces at work against it in other countries will quickly gain strength.

He may be right since West Germany, India and Israel are among those countries who for various reasons have dragged their heels on ratification.

Meanwhile, informants here say, the nuclear club of the U.S., U.S.S.R., Britain, France and China could be expanded by 1972 if not before.

The necessary knowledge to convert nuclear energy from peaceful uses to war arsenals has been broadly spread around by the U.S. and by Canada, it is contended.

A background briefing for correspondents here last week was told by one non-government authority that Canadian-built reactors give other countries the greater opportunity to break into the nuclear club.

This was so, despite Canadian safeguards, because Canadian nuclear reactors sold abroad use natural or non-enriched uranium. American reactors "burn" enriched uranium bars that have to be reprocessed in the U.S. after use and checks can be maintained on whether they have been operated at the high rate of "burn" required to turn out the plutonium for nuclear arms.

The Canadian view is that it safeguards the use of the reactors it has sold to India and Pakistan, for example, by ensuring inspection rights. India's reactor coming into operation in 1972 will also be inspected by the United Nations atomic agency.

The background session for correspondents was informed that the technical improvements being made in the next stage of reactors—so-called fast-breeder reactors—will make the recovery of the amount of plutonium that can be turned out and, without any international curbs, stockpiled for nuclear arms use.

Japan was cited as a country purposely waiting for the new reactors to be developed before getting into the nuclear energy field in a major way.

Indians' Complaint

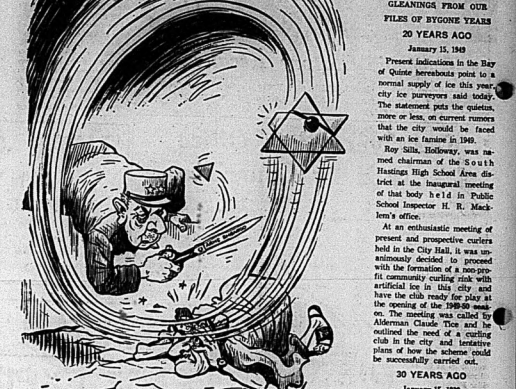
Ottawa and the Jay Treaty

Kitchener-Waterloo Record

The firm belief of Miss Kahn-Tineta Horn, the aggressive young Mohawk woman who crusades for Indian rights, is that Indians get nowhere by being mild and reasonable.

When she looks at the history of her own people, she observes that they were friendly and helpful to white men when the Indians were in the majority in this country. The Indians have been quiet and reasonable since they became a minority.

The way she sees it, the quiet, polite approach has been given a good try for some hundreds of years and has left the Indians with the short end of the stick. She tries deliberately to get her fellow Indians to try being a noisy and difficult for a change.



The sudden imposition of customs duties at a Canada-U.S. border point inside the St. Regis reserve has given her a first-rate opening. By some kind of official bumbling the Canadian government has put itself in a position where it has to be wrong.

If the Jay Treaty of 1794 meant what it said the Indians at St. Regis, on tribal land that was split by the Canada - U.S. boundary, are free to go back and forth and to take their personal possessions back and forth. If the Jay Treaty no longer holds they do not have that freedom.

The government is wrong either way. Either it was wrong in observing the treaty for 174 years, or it was wrong when late in 1968 it stopped observing the treaty.

The United States government observes the treaty and lets the Indians pass freely across the white man's boundary that was put through Iroquois land.

If the Canadian government is really insistent that the Indians should pay duty on their goods at the Cornwall bridge, it would be more reasonable to get tough with the United States as a treaty-breaker than to get back with a small group of Indians.

The Jargon Bit

English Gets A Going-Over

Pat Whealen in
The Windsor Star

Add to the linguistic Hall of Infamy the wrecker who first tore the respectable word facilities apart and set the bastard facility loose on an innocent bureaucracy.

He's lurking somewhere — probably in Washington — waiting for his masterpiece to fade out so he can make a new assault on the art of communication. But facility seems to have gained such a hold on the bureaucratic lack of imagination that it may never die out.

In his inaugural address to Windsor Council this week, Mayor John Wheelton used the word facility twice, once to refer to a swimming pool and once to an expressway. But which is correct, but still far too stuffy, he spoke of pollution control facilities, recreation facilities, and park facilities.

The point is that nine times out of ten it's not necessary to use either facility or facilities, and in the tenth case a simpler and more exact word can be found.

What's the difference between a swimming pool facility and a swimming pool? Or between an expressway facility and an expressway? Or between park facilities and parks? Why can't we have facilities for called owners, or a sewage treatment facility or a sewage treatment plant?

The worst local example is that facility (structure, building, or system) at the foot of which the city put up to (you should pardon the expression) facilitate parking downtown. It's the ordinary man it's a parking garage. To City Hall it's a municipal parking facility at street, multilevel high-rise parking facility. Or because it has a few shops on the ground floor, it probably qualifies as a municipal core-area cf-street multilevel high-rise parking facility and commercial complex.

There is, or used to be, no precedent for using the word facility to refer to one building, room, or useful project. Lately it has been creeping into the dictionaries. But that use of it is still jargon, or bureaucratese, or something similarly horrible.

Snow Clearance Problem

Brockville Recorder and Times

Brockville's snow clearance effort, never the best, has never looked worse than it has this winter, early as it may be in the season. On the eve of the first day of winter, December 20, it started to snow with a vengeance and it didn't stop until, 48 hours later, all the streets were ploughed and traffic had almost come to a halt. But as late as Sunday night, over two weeks after that original heavy snowfall, the citizens were still shouting that their streets had not been cleared.

We're used to snow in our Canadian winters and everyone knows that it isn't the easiest of materials to move from the streets. In fact the city's snow removal crews have been out with their equipment every night from December 20 from midnight to daylight, and they still have a long way to go to clean up the mess. The crews, the system employed or the equipment have just not proved up to the task of battling a heavy snowfall and something should be done to rectify the situation.

News Media Survey

Cornwall Standard - Freeholder

A coast - to - coast survey made by Brodie Snyder, assistant managing editor of the Montreal Gazette, shows that 63 per cent of those interviewed say their newspapers would be less satisfying without advertising. This is reported in Canadian Printer and Publisher. Only 20 percent say they would prefer their TV without any commercial advertising at all. Snyder's survey shows that newspaper circulation has been booming in North America all during the post-war period — fewer than 50 million copies daily in 1945, up 30 per cent to 65 to 70 million at present. According to UNESCO estimates, there are 7,500 daily newspapers throughout the world, selling at least 217 million copies every day. Add all the weeklies to that, and it comes to a lot of trees.

Letter to the Editor

Home and School Membership

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

In reply to an article carried in your paper a little while ago regarding the drop in membership in Home and School, I would like to point out that the figures used represented two areas. One, when per capita fee was charged to each parent at each association they belonged to. If they had children in two or three schools, this meant the same person would be counted two or three times. Under the new structure, where the membership free to the federation is on a family basis, you pay only once regardless of the number of schools your children attend, or if you move to any other part of Ontario. The new structure gives a definite number of members whereas the former system tended to inflate the actual memberships by repeated sales. The new system is also a saving to the family with children in several schools.

As to the drop in Associations this is a definite figure. The reason for much of it is the closing down of the small schools and creating one consolidated school. In some cases, this has meant the loss of three or four Associations but has in many cases made one larger and more effective Home and School. It has made it difficult for many of the parents to attend due to weather conditions and distances needed to travel but it is improving the co-operative spirit of the area.

This is a voluntary organization created to improve the lot of the child and enlighten the minds of the parents. Many attend the meetings and obtain unlimited information in regard to education and child study but are unable to help out by becoming members. If they would only volunteer their services and purchase their membership cards, their association would be much improved.

Your article has made the drop in membership look exceedingly large. Although there was a decline at the beginning of the new structure, the parents are now becoming accustomed to the new system and the membership sales for this year shows a definite increase in the first three months.

JOHN WELCH,
Acting Membership Chairman,
Belleville and District Council of Home and School Associations.

School Buses Re-routed

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

Effective Jan. 13 drivers of high school buses must find an alternate route to BCI to discharge and pick up country students by going north on Church St. and loading and unloading on the east side of Church St. For years the buses have used John St. for rural students who attend BCI or transfer to buses for delivery to the other high schools.

The reason for the change is said to be due to "traffic congestion on John St." The letter received by bus owners made no mention of safety hazards to students on John St., nor in fact is caused mainly by students of BCI and residents in that area parking on the street—the buses are only on John St. for a few minutes between 8 and 9 a.m. and 3.30 and 4 p.m. while these other vehicles are often there all day. Why was John St. not made a one-way street, giving bus buses space in front of BCI to load and unload? Moving the bottleneck, if such there is, from John St. to Church St. would not seem to be a solution, even though bus bays are provided. An alternate move — the paving of a circular driveway in front of BCI on the former athletic field which has been converted to a lawn — would still require buses to attempt a very difficult turn from Bridge St. to Church. An extremely tricky turn for an ordinary private vehicle and an even more difficult manoeuvre for a vehicle the size of a high school bus. Leaving the city, east and southbound buses will have to either turn from Church onto Victoria, then to Dundas, Victoria to Front St., and turn right on Bridge, or go from Church through Victoria to Station, across the upper bridge, left on North Front and down Coleman, right on Bridge and out of the city. Will this not contribute to greater traffic congestion on busier streets than John?

Is removing the congestion from John St. really a step forward in the direction of smooth-er flow of traffic on city streets, or is it a missing step anyway and no real answer to the problem? If other reasons for the change were involved, what are they?

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FILES OF BYGONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

Present indications in the Bay of Quinte hereabouts point to a normal supply of ice this year, city ice purveyors said today. The season past the quietus, more or less, on current rumors that the city would be faced with an ice famine in 1949.

Roy Sills, Holloway, was named chairman of the South Hastings High School Area district at the inaugural meeting of that body held in Public School Inspector H. R. Mackiem's office.

At an enthusiastic meeting of present and prospective curlers held in the City Hall, it was unanimously decided to proceed with the formation of a non-profit community curling rink with artificial ice in this city and have the club ready for play at the opening of the 1949-50 season. The meeting was called by Alderman Claude Tice and he outlined the need of a curling club in the city and tentative plans of how the scheme could be successfully carried out.

Despite the fact that almost perfect weather for marketing purposes prevailed, one of the smallest supplies of offerings of farm garden and dairy produce was available to shoppers on Saturday morning. Grade 'A' eggs were quoted at 25 cents per dozen; chickens of choice quality were selling at from $1.25 — $1.50; farmers' butter remained steady at 25 cents per two pounds.

Quebec Police Director Not Alarmed by Increase in Crime

MONTREAL (CP) — Although major crime in rural areas of Quebec last year increased 17 per cent over 1967, Provincial General-Director Maurice St. Pierre of the provincial police says he is not alarmed.

"We have some work to do and priorities to establish, but we are certainly not alarmed at the situation," Mr. St. Pierre said in an interview.

The increase in crime in Quebec is not particular to here but is part of a general worldwide increase. We are better off than the United States for example."

The director-general made his comments following release Tuesday of the QPF's preliminary report on crime last year.

A complete report for the year 1968—its figures do not include Montreal, Quebec City and other Quebec municipalities policed by municipal forces—is expected by the end of the month.

The report showed increases in several areas of crime, including that of murder, attempted murder and manslaughter.

Provincial police investigated 31 killings in 1968, an increase of 77 per cent.

Bank robberies were up 57 per cent, theft of motorized vehicles increased 25 per cent, and thefts by breaking and entering rose 21 per cent.

Mr. St. Pierre said several variables came into play in the computation of the 1968 crime figures, especially those involving murder and bank robbery.

Much of the increase in slayings could be attributed to underworld warfare in Montreal last year, and although most of the killings were carried out in that city, the victims' bodies often were disposed of outside city limits and on territory policed by provincial police.

Part of the reason for the increase in bank robberies considered in the preoccupation of investigators from the holdup squad in tracking down escaped convicts.

The entire 38-man holdup squad had been taken off regular investigations and patrols in mid-1968 to track down six prisoners, including two murderers and a terrorist, who escaped from prison in Quebec.

"These things certainly must be considered," Mr. St. Pierre said. "But for this year, we have plans which should improve the situation."

Ministers Discuss Ecumenism's Future

The future of ecumenism in the light of recent events in churches, was the topic of discussion at the Jan. meeting of the Belleville Ministerial Association.

Four Belleville clergymen, Msgr. J. P. Sullivan, Rev. S. W. Gentle, Archdeacon A. S. McConnell and Rev. E. L. Fenay, presented their different views on the subject, the concensus being that while the great ecumenical church is not just around the corner "at least we have dialogue."

Msgr. Sullivan of St. Michael's Church said that Pope John helped to change the attitude of his church toward ecumenism.

"It was no longer just a matter of opening the door to other churches," he said. "He encouraged dialogue with other churches and emphasized the need for all to move forward through Christ."

He said the Clergy in the past had fanned the flames of bigotry.

"The climate must be changed . . . It is they who must change the climate," he said.

Rev. Gentle of the Presbyterian Church asked what was meant by ecumenism.

"If we define it as co-operation and understanding, then it is already here, but if we cling to the idea of organic unity, that is different."

He said there was an element of conservatism in all denominations and these individuals tend to shy away from ecumenism in an organizational sense.

Archdeacon A. S. McConnell of St. Thomas Anglican Church noted that someone has said the Anglicans have a record of great activity in ecumenism but that they avoid coming to conclusions.

He asked whether ecumenism was a spiritual movement or whether it was a bunch of committees engaged in organization. The grass roots must become more involved in a movement toward real unity, he said.

"The vision of unity is part of the truth of the Church. Whatever is done, the truths of the Old and New Testaments must be maintained; also the truth of the Incarnation and the Episcopally ordained ministry."

Rev. Penny, Fellowship Baptist Church minister, zeroed in on modernistic liberalism which he termed a downgride movement.

He said modernism is not a Bible movement and made it clear that he did not favor a union with modernism, Barnanism or communism.

In a following discussion Mr. Gentle quoted Arnold Toynbee as saying that alliances are signs of weakness, not of strength. Archdeacon McConnell quoted the Archbishop of Canterbury as saying that the Church of England must do that unity may be born.

Scouting activities

A number of announcements were made at the meeting of the Belleville District Scout Council on Monday.

Speaking for the committee, Jack Hamilton said commissioner John Dodge said the Scouters' club will be revitalized at a meeting to be held either Jan. 17 or the 21.

A new Venturer Company will be formed in the Belleville group (Parkdale) in the fall of this year. Mr. Dodge also announced that a training workshop for troop scouters is scheduled for Jan. 31 at Eastminster Church Hall.

He also stated that 44 scouts passed the explorer badge-bronze badge at last year's camporee. These awards are now being distributed.

The program for the Feb. 22 scout rally is now complete and information will be made public soon.

The president of the District Council, John Werbenluk said tickets for the Feb. 11 get-together are now available. The dinner and evening entertainment will take place in the Masonic Temple at 6.30 p.m. and all adults are invited.

A Church parade held jointly with the girl guides is planned for Feb. 23 at St. Andrew, taking the form of a field day in which cubs can gain the athletic badge is scheduled for May 31.

A ski training course is starting this Saturday, Jan. 18 at the Oak Hill Centre. The time is 12.30 p.m. and all boys must fill in the registration forms beforehand. The registration fee will be refunded to all lads completing the course.

The Council confirmed the appointment of a new treasurer, Harold Bankier. A notice of motion was read dealing with the annual election of officers. It was proposed by R. E. Trussler that the constitution be changed to allow the election at the June meeting. Under this arrangement new officers would be sworn in at the Sept. meeting.

Successful Living

Smokers Do Their Own Polluting

By DORIS CLARK

Authorities tell us that bronchitis and lung cancer are more preventable than curable. Britain has the highest death rate from respiratory disease, usually blamed on the climate.

But the fact that people in major industrial centres are the chief sufferers adds up to air pollution as a number one culprit. Smokeless zones are being enforced.

Improvement takes time. Those who have lived half their lives in air pollution will still have bronchitis, we are told. Especially as many of them keep breathing in smoke of their own making from cigarettes.

Must we keep poisoning ourselves?

• • •

Dear Doris: I have been a widow for many years; mother of four children, all grown up. I'm left alone and find the time very long.

A friend of mine has someone who wants to meet me, but since we are in different villages she can never do so. Would it be out of place for me to write him a letter? — Lonely.

Dear Lonely: We assume that a friend of a friend is fit to be a friend of ours, too. Introductions are still in order, but lacking proximity of the go-between, I can't see the harm in a little of the drop-the-handkerchief routine.

You can't say, "I'm terribly lonely and want to meet you"; but Ms. Grundy might just wink at a note like this:

"Molly mentioned that you sometimes pass through here on your way to work. I gather you are just as interested in antiques as I am. Would you like to stop in and have a look at my grandmother's lovely old what-not one of these days?"

If Molly says he is more interested in candles or candelabra, word the note accordingly.

• • •

Confidential to Immigrant: Why on earth wouldn't you make it clear to your employer that the leg injury, which happened on the job, meant you couldn't stand all day? Rehabilitation workers have been known to design high stools and special chairs for such as you.

But you do have to tell somebody — preferably your doctor, or the company doctor. No quick whatever is suffering in silence. You come from Europe; your English is poor. But Canadians have hearts and would listen.

Points for Parents

By MARY BRYSON

Mother: "When are you going to get your hair cut? I've told you every day to stop at the barber shop."

Jack: "Oh, I forgot. Again."

Mother: "I think Jack may be forgetting about his haircut as a way of letting me know that I nag him about too many unimportant things."

There are many ways of rebelling, and passive resistance is one that teen-agers soon learn to use as a weapon against too much parental "telling."

To Animals and Children: I couldn't agree more. Recent surveys show that the basic interest of most children is not in sports, machines or games — but in animals. My childhood Christmas morning best remembered is the one when a wiggly little puppy was placed in my arms!

The Kindness Clubs, now in 14 countries, help children to learn about animals, how to be kind to them and how to enjoy them most. If you want to start a branch, write for details to Kindness Club Headquarters, 232 Waterloo Row, Fredericton, New Brunswick.

Anonymous letters are bad manners and may be ignored. When writing in, give Doris your right name and address. It will be kept confidential.

Super Mini-House

EDMONTON CP — This model house has everything — electric lights, tile floor, and rain gutters. More than 12 feet high, it was built by trade union members and raffled off by the Edmonton Aphasic Association to raise money for a school.

It is supposed to be a blueberry cake but it is more appropriate as a blueberry batter pudding with a lovely Orange Sauce, both of which Mary Moore gives you today. An added dividend is a big-time recipe to serve this to 48 people for the benefit of banquet conveners, so clip it.

Kitchen-Tested Recipes

Banquet Size Blueberry Pudding

By MARY MOORE

It rules are really made to be broken, I am going to do it. Furthermore it is one of my own.

I have made a blueberry cake and the blueberries stained the batter blue. I thought "All is ruined!" but then tasted it. It was too easy to make and tasted too good to ignore. Sliced thinly and buttered it is a sort of tea bread. To mask the blue I served it as a pudding with an orange sauce. This saved the day and gave it the eye-appeal that is so important.

One more item in connection with this is that I am giving amounts for a banquet requiring 48 servings. So conveners please clip. (Cubs?) (Family Size)

BLUEBERRY PUDDING

Batter:
2 cups sifted cake flour
1 tablespoon baking powder
1 teaspoon salt
⅔ cup sugar
¼ teaspoon nutmeg
½ cup plus 1 tablespoon shortening
2 small eggs (or 1½ large ones)
⅔ cup milk
one 11-oz. package thawed frozen blueberries (or drained 15-oz. can blue berries) grated rind one lemon

Topping:
½ cup sugar
¼ teaspoon cinnamon

Into a mixing bowl sift sifted flour, baking powder, salt, sugar and nutmeg. Cut in shortening with pastry blender until size of large peas. Add eggs, milk, blueberries and lemon rind and stir to barely mix. Pour into standard loaf pan lined with buttered wax paper. Mix together topping sugar and cinnamon and sprinkle all over top. Bake at 350 deg. Fahr. 65 min. Serve warm as a dessert with —

ORANGE SAUCE made by stirring together in saucepan 2 tablespoons cornstarch, ½ cup (OR ¾) sugar and when mixed stir in over heat one 6-oz. can fresh frozen orange juice concentrate and 1½ cups boiling water until thick.

WEDNESDAY

Club Activities

PHI PSI CHAPTER BETA SIGMA PHI

The Phi Psi Chapter, Beta Sigma Phi, held its first meeting of 1969 at the home of Mrs. Lorrie Roebuck.

The regular business was conducted, and plans were discussed for the year.

A welcome guest—and former member of the Chapter, Mrs. Donna Kamphuis attended the meeting. Following the conclusion of the meeting, Miss Beth Bird led in an interesting discussion titled, "Am I Spiritually Right?"

The hostess and co-hostess Miss Sandra Findlay served refreshments to round off a pleasant evening.

Medical Secretaries Enjoy Films

The January meeting of the Quinte Medical Secretaries Association was held in Education Hall last Wednesday evening with 16 members present. The president, Mrs. Doreen Ware took the chair.

Following the business which included Mrs. Beth Cunningham accepting the position of the Ontario Medical Secretaries Association representative, Mrs. Margaret Stansfield introduced guest for the evening, Dr. J. Blechard, who showed films of British, Paris and Holland which were most enjoyable.

Dr. Birchard was thanked by Mrs. Beth Cunningham.

Mrs. Seymour Bochcok, a volunteer director of the Christmas Exchange has agreed to speak at the February meeting.

Mrs. A. Scales Senior Citizen Of the Year

At the regular meeting of the Senior Citizens Club held Wednesday evening Mrs. A. Scales was voted senior citizen of the year. She was presented with a plaque by Lorne Williams, Recreation Director.

The meeting was opened by the president, Mrs. M. Doyle who wished everyone the best for 1969. At this time letters were read from Mayor R. J. Scott, M.P. and Mr. Loeghurst and one from the Tiremen's Christmas fund.

During the business portion it was decided that a bus trip would be arranged to go to the Ice Follies in Toronto on Jan. 25.

Entertainment was provided during the program by Mrs. S. Crookwright, Mr. Young, Mrs. Sturms and Mr. Mac. Welsh and his entertainers.

At the close Mrs. Vickers and her committee served lunch and a social evening was enjoyed.

Mrs. Buckley was winner of the door prize.

DEAR ANN: A dear friend of mine has asked me to help her. I don't know if I am capable of the task. She wants me to speak to her 25-year-old son — a handsome, brilliant lad (last year of law, fine family, social prestige, money, a marvelous future.

ANN LANDERS

This young man could have had any girl in town, so he goes and selects a 24-year-old girl who is blind. Don't misunderstand, Ann, Rose is a nice enough person. She is pleasant looking and her eyes are not disfigured. To look at her one would think she is perfectly normal. I should mention, perhaps, that she graduated from a fashion school of music and supports herself by teaching piano.

The young man says he is deeply in love, that Rose's blindness makes no difference to him, but I have an idea he is martyring himself. It might even be pity that he feels for her. What will happen if she gets pregnant? Will she be able to take care of a child? There are so many problems ahead he has not thought of, Ann. Please help me get through to him. — A FRIEND'S FRIEND.

* * *

DEAR FRIEND: I hope you will stay out of it and not attempt to prevent what sounds like a beautiful marriage.

Rose might be a better wife to this young man than many girls with perfect vision. She sounds like a truly remarkable person. Your friend should be delighted to have her in the family.

How inspiring that in spite of her handicap the girl is planning for a full future. Her sightless eyes see beauty and fulfillment in the days ahead. The boy's mother is the one who is blind.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I am so stunned I don't know what to do or think. A friend had left my home. Over a cup of coffee she outlined all the things that are wrong with me. She did it "for my own good" because she is a "true friend."

I never thought I was perfect, Ann, but I didn't realize no one liked me and that a great many people whom I considered friends are laughing at me behind my back. Nor was I aware that my quietness was interpreted as stupidity and that it has hurt my husband in his profession because people lose respect for him when they meet his "dull wife."

The woman criticized my hair (old-fashioned), my clothes (too conservative), and she even had something to say about the car I drive.

What do you make of this? — STILL DAZED.

* * *

DEAR STILL: I don't know what's eating that woman (I hesitate to call her a friend), but it must be something big.

Self-appointed critics are usually fed up with themselves but they find it less painful to re-adjust their acquaintances.

This woman is destructive and I advise you to stay away from her.

FASHIONS IN IRISH FABRICS — This snappy little waistcoat and skirt by a British company recently appeared in fashions in fabrics from Ulster show held in London. It is in woollen Ulster tartan, a rich combination of brick red mustard and brown adapted from an authentic 17th century design. The skirt is a wrap-around while the high, curved waistcoat has button-down flaps.

ENGAGEMENT NOTICE

Mr. and Mrs. William E. Szrymgeour of Belleville announce the engagement of their daughter, Patricia Ann to Mr. Stuart Robert Howell, son of Mrs. Stuart W. Howell and the late Mr. S. Howell of Belleville. The wedding will take place February 15, 1969 at 7.00 p.m. in St. Thomas' Anglican Church.

ENGAGEMENT NOTICE

The engagement is announced of Catherine Anne Walsh, daughter of Mrs. John Walsh, Shannonville and the late Mr. John Walsh, to Mr. John Frederick Abrams, son of Mr. and Mrs. Edward Abrams of Shannonville. The wedding will take place Feb. 15, 1969 at 11 a.m. in St. Charles Borromeo Church, Read.

Presbyterian W.M.S. Groups Meet

The annual meeting of the Kingston Presbyterian Women's Missionary Society was held on Jan. 8 in St. Andrew's Church, Kingston.

Upon arrival at the Church, coffee and donuts were served. The theme was Lamp, Light, Life, with the quotation from the 119th Psalm "Thy word is a lamp unto my feet and a light unto my path."

The morning session commenced with the call to worship by the president, Mrs. G. H. Lyons, Kingston, who also welcomed the group. The Belleville WMS was in charge of the devotional period in the morning. The Scripture was taken from John 1 and a communion service given by Mrs. John Craig.

The minutes of the 1967 annual meeting were read and adopted. Mrs. F. R. McPhee was appointed delegate to the Synodical to be held in Brampton in April with Mrs. Fanthom or Mrs. B. Haggerty as alternatives.

Mrs. W. H. L. Smith, treasurer, gave the treasurer's report. This was encouraging although down slightly from 1967, which was probably due to various extra activities held in Centennial year. Each Auxiliary is asked to try to increase its givings as the need is great.

Reports of the various committees were printed so that each member would have it before her. Some of the conveners added a verbal report to these. Mrs. W. McLaren, the historian, requested that interesting items be sent to her for her scrap book.

A recommendation was brought in from the previous executive meeting to the effect that the fiscal year be changed to begin Dec. 1 and end Nov. 30. This motion was carried. There was also a discussion as to whether or not the date of the annual meeting be changed but it was left as is.

The Nominating Committee was named and comprises of Mrs. K. D. Taylor, Mrs. J

Suggestion for Republic With Congress Is Coolly Received

OTTAWA (CP) — A republic instead of a monarchy, and a congressional legislative system instead of a Parliament met with little enthusiasm at secret federal-provincial constitutional talks in the last year.

This is revealed by confidential reports of the continuing committee prepared for the coming resumption next month. The reports also show that important changes were proposed for the Senate and the Supreme Court of Canada.

A proposal to change Canada's name to "The Canadian Union" is included among a variety of suggestions, some discussed in detail and some not yet examined.

On the name change, the committee says the idea was "to better reflect the nature of Canada as a federation of states and an association of two nations."

The committee of top public servants representing the 11 governments took a preliminary look at a republican government and congressional system, evidently proposed by Quebec.

The committee also examined these proposals about the Senate:

—Appointment by the provinces of a proportion of the senators, now named solely by the prime minister of Canada.

—Appointment by the provinces of all the senators.

—Limited terms to senatorial appointments, now held until age 75. Among specific terms examined were three and six years. The possibility of an elected Senate appears to have found no support.

—No Senate powers to approve federal government nominations to key posts such as Supreme Court judges, ambassadors and heads of cultural languages and human rights.

—Restriction of the Senate's power to reject federal government legislation to permit the Upper Chamber only to delay it.

The committee makes no recommendations to the conference on the specific proposals examined.

On the judicial system, the committee reports that it held only a brief introductory discussion, mainly on the proposal that Supreme Court appointments be subject to Senate approval.

Source of this proposal was not given but the committee says the purpose of it was to ensure a provincial viewpoint could be brought to bear on the court's composition.

A contrasting suggestion was that this purpose could be achieved by appointment by the provinces of some of the judges. And a third suggestion was that the federal and provincial governments consult on proposed appointments.

Honeymoon Soon Over

Rebounding UK Press Asks If Tradeau Sphinx Without Riddle

LONDON (CP) — The British press is on the rebound from its brief, heady honeymoon with Prime Minister Trudeau, and the shortcomings—real or imagined—of the colorful Commonwealth newcomer seem to have left some newspapers in a sulky mood.

In the beginning, popular and serious dailies alike were intrigued and enchanted by this unknown, unconventional Canadian with the wide trench-coat and Chelsea tastes, intellectual aura and youthful candor.

The gossip columns called him "Trendy Trudeau" and "the show-stealer," revelled in the indiscretions of his first London date—blonde divorcee Eva Rittinghausen—and tried without success to extract more from his second, English actress Jennifer Hales.

Cartoonists ran riot portraying the dashing bachelor leader and even the egghead Guardian referred in an editorial to Trudeau's "glamorous presence."

Serious commentators on both sides of the channel tabbed Trudeau the man to watch at the conference and sat back in keen anticipation.

Suddenly, the spell turned sour, the bubble of enthusiasm burst. Almost overnight, Trudeau seemed under fire from all quarters. Much of the criticism appeared gratuitous, based on little more than disappointment that his performance at the conference table—and in the realm of international policy-making—hasn't measured up to the fresh, dynamic image.

The contrast seemed to be expressed in a front-page photograph splashed across The Daily Telegraph Tuesday showing a tired Trudeau in white tie and tails covering a yawn at a Guildhall banquet as he sat beside the impassive-looking wife of the Mauritius prime minister.

Earlier, the influential Economist suggested it is time Trudeau produced some hard policy decisions in case the "image of the sphinx" gives way to that of a country that can't make up its mind.

The Daily Mail's diplomatic correspondent, John Dickie, echoed the theme under the headline: "Has the spellbinder lost his spell?"

Dickie quoted an unidentified Commonwealth leader as saying: "Is Trudeau a sphinx without a riddle?" and added the Canadian had "lost a lot of his glitter around the conference corridors." He also suggested Canada's fillies would soon wonder whether lack of decisions are a "camouflage for indecision."

The Daily Telegraph referred obliquely to him in an editorial as a "Trendy prig"—a most uncharacteristic outburst from this pillar of the establishment. The Telegraph also bitingly mocked "Trendeau" in its daily satirical column The Way of the World.

What went wrong?

The new mood began as the first week of the conference ended. Trudeau hadn't taken any strong initiatives at the table—but they may not have been the reason for the sudden disillusionment.

Old Fleet Street hands were speculating whether the cause —or a strong contributory factor—is the general chill was something Trudeau said at a huge press luncheon last Thursday.

In the middle of a question-and-answer session with some of the 500 foreign and Commonwealth reporters present, Trudeau was asked for a comment on the case of Anthony Grey, the Reuters reporter who has been under house arrest in Peking for a year and a half.

Trudeau replied briefly that he hadn't even studied the case. He conferred for a moment with Mitchell Sharp and added that the external affairs minister didn't know about it either.

Whether coincidentally or not, the mood began that weekend, and the mass-circulation Sunday newspaper The People weighed in with a column saying "pole-necked Pierre" wasn't such a hit after all. Political columnist Terence Lancaster said East Africans at the conference were feeling "particularly let down" because Trudeau hadn't given them the expected solid backing over Rhodesia.

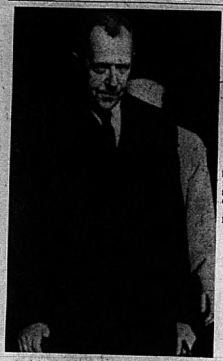
French newspapers commented in a similar vein, with Le Monde saying the African delegates had been "deceived" by the Canadian leader.

But The Guardian, at least, still regards him hardly. In a report on Trudeau's touch-in with Canadian students last Sunday, writer Geoffrey Moorhouse said approvingly: "Trudeau had not yet developed "the inscrutable codfish eyes of power . . . the overweening superiorities of high office."

"He haven't seen anything quite like it before," Moorhouse said of the informal talkfest between statesman and students.

Welfare Root Aim Says PM

OTTAWA (CP) — The Commonwealth is "only an accident" held together by the self-interest of its 28 members, Prime Minister Trudeau said in an interview broadcast Tuesday night.



The similarities of the members are outweighted by their differences and member nations will adhere to the organization only to further their own welfare, he said on the CBC television program Front Page Questions.

Also interviewed on the program, filmed in London, were President Kenneth Kaunda of Zambia and Prime Minister Lee Kuan Yew of Singapore.

Mr. Trudeau said the Commonwealth conference ending today has provided a valuable forum for the exchange of ideas among heads of the various governments.

"We have to hear how other countries react to planned changes in foreign policy before they are made, Mr. Trudeau said.

"So we readjust our own foreign policy and perhaps increase sanctions."

Karpis Flies to Montreal

Alvin Karpis Paroled After 32 Years

VANCOUVER (CP) — Public enemy No. 1 of the Roaring Thirties boarded a jetliner Tuesday night and flew to a new life.

Gone was Old Creepy, co-leader of the notorious Karpis-Ma Barker gang.

In his place was Alvin Karpis, 61, a thin, mild-mannered accountant.

After 32 years in U.S. federal prisons, Karpis, born in Canada, was deported Tuesday and is on his way to an accountant's job in Montreal that was lined up for him by his lawyer, James Carty of Woodland, Wash.

Earlier Tuesday, he showed little nervousness at a news conference in Seattle, his first contact with a world vastly different from the one he remembered when "murder was a trademark."

Described by officials of McNeil Island federal penitentiary as a "model prisoner," he was credited by officials and former prisoners with helping to rehabilitate other prisoners and with establishment of a self-improvement course.

He was trained in cost accounting while at Alcatraz penitentiary in San Francisco Bay.

One of the few surviving members of the gangs that blazed their way into the headlines of the Thirties from the hinterland of America, Karpis, speaking in little more than a whisper, said the police of the time were little better than the criminals.

"The Texas Rangers initiated the policy of shooting first and asking questions later," he said, citing Bonnie and Clyde, "a couple of fun-loving kids." It was "no credit to the law enforcement officers" that the couple was machine-gunned as they sat in their car.

They hadn't shown the Bonnie and Clyde film in prison, but "I intend to see it as soon as I arrive in Montreal."

He used to watch some of the television shows about the FBI while behind bars, but had to give them up.

"It was too much to see all my old friends being slaughtered."

Born Alvin Karpavicz, he left home at 14 and did not re-establish contact with his family until he was arrested for the last time 14 years later in New Orleans.

Kate (Ma) Barker met Karpis at Tulsa, Okla., and he rapidly became one of her favorites. He was a senior member of the gang when it began its reign of terror in 1931.

At least five persons were killed, four of them police officers; more than $500,000 was taken in bank holdups and kidnappings.

It was for the kidnapping of Minneapolis brewer William James Jr. in 1933 that Karpis was finally sentenced to life in prison.

He was lucky.

Ma and son Frank shot it out with FBI agents in a Lakeshore cabin at Ocala, Fla., in 1935. She died with a machine-gun in her hands and he was clasping a .45.

Tradeau Escorts Actress

LONDON (AP) — Prime Minister Trudeau escorted attractive actress Jennifer Hale to a performance of the play Hadrian VII at the tiny Mermaid Theatre Tuesday night.

Trudeau, the most eligible bachelor attending the Commonwealth conference in London, went backstage afterwards to meet the star of the show, Canadian actor Douglas Rain.

Murder Rate Climbs

OTTAWA (CP)—Both the murder rat and the number of killings during another criminal act increased in the first six months of Canada's five-year trial of partial abolition of the death penalty, statistics show.

The figures were made public Tuesday by Barry Mather, New Democrat MP for Surrey, one of the early advocates of a trial abolition in this country.

The abolition retention battle culminated Dec. 29, 1967, in legislation abolishing the death penalty for all killings except those of police and prison guards until Dec. 29, 1972.

Mr. Mather said that at his request, the Dominion Bureau of Statistics furnished data which showed:

—Number of murders rose to 141 in the first six months compared with 122 in the first six months of 1967.

—The murder rate rose to .008 per 1,000 population age seven and older from .007.

Mr. Mather said in an interview the figures for so short a period provide no conclusive proof for or against the death penalty.

By provinces, the number of murders and rate in the first six months of the trial, with the 1967 figures bracketed:

Newfoundland 3 and .005 (none); Prince Edward Island none either period; Nova Scotia 6 and .009 (5 and .008); New Brunswick 1 and .002 (3 and .006); Quebec 35 and .007 (29 and .008); Ontario 39 and .006 (40 and .007); Manitoba 16 and .02 (4 and .006); Saskatchewan 6 and .01 (8 and .01); Alberta 6 and .005 (18 and .01); British Columbia 28 and .01 (13 and .009); Yukon and Northwest Territories none (5 and .3).

Hashish Parties Alleged

MONTREAUX (AP) — Swiss police said Tuesday they are holding 15 youths, including three Canadians and three Americans, after cracking a large-scale juvenile narcotics ring that staged "hashish parties" in the Lake Geneva region.

The principals, operating out of this resort town, were described by police as an American dropout from a Swiss boarding school and the Canadian trio of "hippies" who had set up winter quarters here after staying in Marseille, Copenhagen and Amsterdam in search of drugs.

Three kilograms of hashish worth 15,000 francs ($3,600) were seized from the Canadians, police said.

Police did not disclose any identities but said the arrested are between 18 and 28 years old.

Shulman Says Beds Are Empty

TORONTO (CP) — Morton Shulman, New Democratic member of the legislature for Toronto High Park, said Wednesday there is a continuing surplus of beds for the mentally ill in Ontario hospitals while many urgent cases await admission.

He released a table he said came from the research branch of the Ontario health department, showing that there were 1,559 empty beds in provincial hospitals Nov. 30 when 943 persons were awaiting admission.

The mentally ill patients "being refused admission" included 395 urgent cases, he said in a statement.

There were 228 empty beds at the Orillia hospital and 300 urgent cases on the waiting list, he said.

"Yesterday morning the superintendent of the Brockville Ontario Hospital threatened one of the staff psychiatrists, Dr. J. Mullner, with criminal proceedings after learning he had been one of the staff members who had requested my help in improving the situation at the hospital," Dr. Shulman said.

In a letter to Premier John Robarts, copies of which he released, Dr. Shulman asked that Dr. Mullner and other Brockville staff members be called as witnesses before the legislature's standing committee on health.

Union Carbide Among Firms Asking Tariff Boost on Ethylene

OTTAWA (CP) — Imperial Oil Ltd. joined four other big foreign-owned firms Tuesday in arguing that if the government raises the import duty on polyethylene now, lower prices for the plastic will result in the years ahead.

Their argument is that some increased protection for Canadian chemical firms now will enable them to expand sufficiently so that more economic production will bring prices down when the plants hit their full stride.

Canadian polyethylene producers are facing highly competitive imports due to a world surplus of the product while Canadian plants need to expand to meet Canadian needs.

The four firms are British-controlled Canadian Industries Ltd., and American-controlled Dow Chemical of Canada, Du Pont of Canada Ltd., and Union Carbide Canada Ltd. Imperial itself is predominantly owned by Standard Oil of New Jersey.

The four polyethylene producers are asking the tariff board to recommend raising the present, 7½-per-cent duty on polyethylene to 10 per cent, the rate Canada bargained for in 1967 at the Kennedy Round of tariff-cutting negotiations under the General Agreement on Tariffs and Trade.

Frank Capon, vice-president of Du Pont and spokesman for the four, said the increase would mean three-tenths of a cent a pound for polyethylene in Canada. The application is being opposed by many small, independent packaging firms and spokesmen for other industry depending on polyethylene supplies.

George Nicholson of Imperial Oil's chemical products division said that, as a principal supplier of the raw material ethylene, Imperial is interested in seeing a healthy polyethylene industry in Canada. Without it, Imperial would not have a big market for a principal byproduct of the petroleum cracking business.

Mr. Nicholson said that with an assured market and steady growth, Imperial could cut its ethylene prices 30 per cent in the next five years. Canadian ethylene prices now are nearly double U.S. prices in the big American market.

"Notice how cleverly I talked her down from two dozen brushes to a single dozen?"

Price of Gold Hits All-time Peak at London

LONDON (AP) — The price of gold jumped 35 cents on the London free bullion market to an all-time peak today, apparently on uncertainty over the policy of President-elect Nixon and general distrust of paper money.

The morning fixing set the price for the metal at $42.75 U.S. an ounce. This compared with Tuesday afternoon's fixing of $42.40.

Dealers said there was a complete lack of sellers and strong demand. Turnover was virtually nil.

"In this situation the price just had to go up," one dealer said.

Buyers seemed anxious to change their paper money into solid gold in advance of today's American budget and Nixon's inaugural speech next Monday, dealers said. Many believe this may give some clue to future U.S. policy toward bullion.

They recalled last month's news conference by Nixon's treasury secretary-designate, David Kennedy, who declined comment when asked if the United States would continue its gold price policy. Any upward move would mean big profits for gold speculators.

For these same reasons, the informants said, bullion owners were unwilling to sell.

In the London foreign exchange market, meanwhile, the pound sterling edged upward two points to $2.3025 after Tuesday's 11-point drop in reaction to poor December foreign trade figures. Trade was only moderate today, however.

Toronto Stock Exchange Offers 13 Additional Seats

TORONTO (CP) — In the first move of its kind since 1934, the Toronto Stock Exchange said Tuesday it has accepted bids for 13 additional seats from stockbroking firms.

The seats were priced at $125,000 each and the new seat holders will come up for formal election by the TSE's existing membership soon.

John R. Kimber, exchange president, said the board of governors felt the TSE should have greater representation from broking firms in other parts of Canada.

Plans to increase the number of seats for this reason were first announced in November, when the exchange said it would accept bids of $125,000 for up to 17 seats.

"The number of seats offered was arrived at by determining what additional capacity was available on the floor of the TSE, and then assessing what appeared to be the current demand for seats," said Mr. Kimber.

Men Reluctant to Serve.

Sirhan May Be Tried by Jury Composed Largely of Women

LOS ANGELES (Reuters) — The possibility of a largely female jury for the Sirhan B. Sirhan murder trial began to emerge today as a long string of male jurors asked to be excused because of hardship with their jobs.

So far six men have asked to be excused on the grounds that the three-month-long trial of the 24-year-old Jordanian would mean they faced a long period without full salary.

Sirhan faces the possibility of death in a gas chamber for the assassination of Senator Robert Kennedy and the wounding of five other persons at the Ambassador Hotel here June 5, 1968.

The four jurors so far selected all are women. Three women have been excused.

The counsel for either side may try to correct the sex bias in the jury at a later date by arbitrarily dismissing a number of persons already selected.

Each side is permitted to dismiss up to 20 of the selected jurors without giving a reason.

Among other reasons given by prospective male jurors for not wishing to serve were liability to heart attack, prejudice against Sirhan, and that being locked up in a hotel for two months on jury service would "make a man want to crawl up a wall."

Chief defence counsel Grant Cooper told reporters it was "most probable" Sirhan would take the stand in his own defence. "He has to tell his side of the story," Cooper said. "He accepts our advice."

Emile Zola Berman, author of the three-man defence team, told a news conference that the Arab-Israeli situation would not come up as an issue in the case.

He said that the defence would only introduce it in explaining how Sirhan saw the issue as part of his background and in respect to his upbringing.

Jury selection in the closely-guarded courtroom on the eighth floor of the Los Angeles Hall of Justice is expected to last at least a month.

APPLE SALE!

McINTOSH – SPYS or RED DELICIOUS

Your Choice 3-LB CELLO BAG 49¢

Tips about apples!

Now...right now, is the time to buy apples. Right now at A&P, apples are at their best. Here are some apple buying and handling tips:

SELECT APPLES THAT ARE FIRM, particularly the larger sizes. Big apples tend to mature more rapidly, and when soft, usually have a mealy texture.

REFRIGERATE YOUR APPLES. Warm temperatures cause apples to lose their crispness and tangy flavour.

QUICK PEELING TIP: If you are going to cook apples, dip them quickly in and out of boiling water. The skin will come off much more readily.

TO PREVENT DISCOLOURATION OF PEELED APPLES, place slices in a pan of cold water. Add a pinch of salt for each whole apple peeled.

LEAKING PIES: Sprinkle salt on spilled juice from pies in a hot oven. The juice will burn crisply, making it easier to remove.

DISCOLOURATION OF ALUMINUM UTENSILS can be removed by boiling a number of apple peelings in the utensil.

THE BEST TIP OF ALL: Don't miss the wonderful selection, the great apple values A&P has right now.

Views on Language Question Cost School Trustee His Job

MATAGAMI, Que. (CP) — The wife of a mine security guard fired for views he expressed as a school trustee in this mining town 600 miles north of Montreal has been asked to return to her job following a three-day lay-off.

Mrs. Lydia Loyer, an employee of the Hudson's Bay Co. store in Matagami, was called back to her job Tuesday by store manager Marcel Brassard. In a statement, Mr. Brassard said Mrs. Loyer — hired on a part-time basis last September—was laid off Saturday along with other part-time employees because of a "greatly reduced" work load in January.

There were "no political implications in the company's action," he said.

Mrs. Loyer was called back to her job Tuesday "to dispel any misunderstanding of the company's motives".

The woman's husband, Maurice Loyer, said in an interview earlier that he was fired by Mattagami Lake Mines Ltd. for having said that French-speaking children were not treated on the same basis as English-speaking children in the company town.

Mine Manager Murray Airth said in an interview last Friday that Mr. Loyer was fired because of this involvement with the Mouvement pour l'integration scolaire — movement for school integration— whose members want Quebec classes taught in French only.

He described Mr. Loyer as "not the kind of employee we like to have."

Mr. Loyer said the company had notified him to vacate his company-owned house by Feb. 1.

Mr. Loyer, who was fired Jan. 2, said he is not a member of the movement, nor is he a separatist or a fationalist, although he does share some of the movement's objectives.

Last fall, the Matagami branch of the movement was involved in a dispute with John Inglesias, a superintendent for Mattagami Lake Mines and chairman of the local school board.

The organization accused Mr. Inglesias of having a discriminatory attitude toward French-Canadians. He resigned as board chairman Dec. 9 and was replaced by Mr. Brassard, the Hudson's Bay store manager.

Raymond Lemieux, Montreal president of the Mouvement pour l'integration scolaire, Monday said his organization has started a fund to keep Mr. Loyer in Matagami "to fight English imperialism."

Stirling Personals

STIRLING — Mr. and Mrs. J. V. Beatty, Toronto, spent a few days last week with her mother, Mrs. Hugh Morton.

At a recent meeting of the Senior Citizens' Club, George Heasman was presented with a decorated birthday cake which all enjoyed.

Arthur Scott is a patient in the Belleville General Hospital.

Mr. and Mrs. Jack Bush recently entertained the family of Charles Hoard of Seymour in honor of his birthday.

Parliament Back in Session -- Erosion of Traditions Irks Dief

OTTAWA (CP) — The new streamlined Parliament went back into session Tuesday and quickly ran into a couple of snags linked with the revised rules.

In the first sitting under the new rules, adopted just before Christmas, John Diefenbaker reacted indignantly to removal of the coat of arms from the cover of the Commons book of standing orders.

The Conservative elder statesmen shook an accusing finger at the government and called on the Speaker to look into the "erosion of our traditions."

Government House Leader Donald S. MacDonald replied that the government wasn't responsible for publication of the book. And in any event the coat of arms was still there, on the Speaker's chair pictured on the cover.

More opposition static was raised a few minutes later with removal from the government order paper of a resolution on establishment of an Indian claims commission.

The new rules eliminate the resolution stage that formerly preceded all bills involving expenditure of money. But Opposition Leader Stanfield insisted the House had a right to know when the legislation would be introduced.

Indian Affairs Minister Jean Chretien, who had hoped to introduce the bill right after the Christmas break, said he still hopes to get it in this month.

By the end of the sitting, four farm bills had been given second reading and sent off to the agriculture committee for detailed study.

A prime aim of the new rules is to de-emphasize second-reading debate, formerly considered approval in principle, and to shift main consideration of a bill to committee.

After the committee study it must still come back for a "report stage," when amendments may be made, and a more crucial third-reading stage.

The process appeared to be working with the farm bills, which slipped through the House without serious objection. Several members spoke of possible improvements in committee, however.

The four bills, all sponsored by Agriculture Minister H. A. Olson, would:

—Provide for compensation to farmers whose produce is banned from sale because of contamination—through no fault of the farmer—by a pesticide.

—Set new regulations on import of seeds, plants and plant products that might carry pests.

—Amend the Animal Contagious Diseases Act to remove present maximum amounts for compensation to farmers when diseased animals are ordered slaughtered. The agriculture department now will be able to adjust rates.

—Set regulations on the import and sale of pesticides. The subject of pesticides, both benefits and dangers, concerned several speakers.

NDP member Ran Hardin (Kootenay West) said the agriculture department must do far more research on the effects of pesticides before it approves them for public use.

It was disconcerting to find that some government-approved pesticides had caused contamination.

Conservative Harold Danforth (PC—Kent-Essex) complained that it would be difficult and costly for a farmer to obtain compensation.

Delivery Problems Negotiated

OTTAWA (CP) — Postal union and department negotiators failed to reach agreement Tuesday on proposals for implementation of the five-day delivery week Saturday, Feb. 1, but they plan to meet again today.

Roger Decarie, president of the 12,000-member Letter Carriers Union of Canada, said in an interview following a three-hour meeting:

"We did not get too much out of it. We have not been able so far to convince the department to abandon its proposed straight-through delivery plan."

The latter is the scheme whereby carriers will make one pickup of mail delivery at post offices, in contrast to the present daily pickups now, and in most cases remain out on their routes all day.

The union contends this will mean cold lunches, extra work and general inconvenience to its members. The department says carriers may return to offices to eat their lunches but the time lost will be tacked on to their work day.

Men Relocated Says Kierans

OTTAWA (CP) — Most postmen whose jobs are wiped out by changes in the postal system already have been relocated, Postmaster-General Eric Kierans told the Commons Tuesday.

In a statement dealing with complaints from the postmen, he said new posts have been found for all but 601 of the 2,068 whose jobs became redundant with start of five-day delivery Feb. 1, or through other changes.

There also are 215 unfilled vacancies in the department, reducing the redundant number to 386, Mr. Kierans said.

Officials of the 12,000-member Letter Carriers Union of Canada have been meeting in Ottawa to discuss the changes. They have threatened a walkout or work slowdown if no agreement is reached.

Reynolds Expects 50,000 in City

J. R. Reynolds, city manager, is predicting that Belleville's population will be about 50,000 people "a lot sooner than some people think."

He was replying to a question by a Jaycee asking how long Belleville's numerous surveys were going to go on at a cost to the taxpayer.

Mr. Reynolds said that it was quite true that Belleville had had numerous surveys but that happens in all municipalities.

"We're only on the threshold of development," he said. "We'll see far more in the next five years."

Mr. Reynolds informed Jaycees that the capital works program for the next five years would provide millions of dollars for services to industrial parks.

"I'm looking forward to 1969 and 1970 with confidence," he said.

Asked what would happen to the money set aside for urban renewal, he replied that there had been no monies set aside — only for services.

Mr. Reynolds was also asked if anything was being planned for new garbage dump sites. He said there were plans for a new location.

He said he was still awaiting a report when he was queried about the magic circle plan for downtown Belleville.

He recommended that the Jaycees should encourage participation and interest in local levels of government.

Flexible Plan Required

As far as Bert Kenny, planning director of the Belleville and Suburban Planning Board, is concerned there is no official plan at present for the Belleville area.

He admitted when questioned by a Jaycee that there was one for the old city of Belleville.

Mr. Kenny said that "our main concern is to provide a design with sufficient flexibility." He said that if industry located here zones should have the ability to be adjusted easily.

He replied to a question about what can be done concerning land speculation.

"I don't know," Mr. Kenny replied. "You can minimize speculation with good planning, but you can't stop it."

One Jaycee was interested in a reverse taxation system where landowners were taxed for not improving their holdings rather than for improving them.

Mr. Kenny felt that this would increase urban sprawl and land speculation.

Resources Needed

Lorne Williams, recreation director, told Jaycees when asked if there was enough recreation for teenagers, that it's hard to know what youth wants half the time.

He spoke of coffee houses that had flopped and other youth organized projects that had failed because of lack of interest.

Mr. Williams explained that teenagers did not want to be told what they needed and that they preferred to tell recreation people what they wanted.

He added that teenagers desired certain things, but they wanted to come and go as they pleased.

Asked if the community centre idea was shelved, he said "I think the voters answered that." He added that he thought the new centre was necessary and would eventually come about.

He explained that it would come after industrial growth and city development.

According to Mr. Williams most of the recreation resources are here in Belleville. He said it is just a matter of utilizing what is here.

He told Jaycees that if they wanted to get involved they should get behind outdoor recreation. He said there were big problems as far as finance is concerned.

Members of the Belleville Jaycees questioned city officials at a dinner meeting last night at the Shrine Club. Panel members included Lorrie Williams, Bert Kenny, J. R. Reynolds, Ray Brown and Ben Corke who explained city problems and developments from their own prospective points of view.

Industrial Expansion Issue at Meeting

Mayor Smart in Fifth Term

NAPANEE — The inaugural meeting of Napanee's new town council was held in the council chambers Monday morning at 11 a.m., with Rev. David Trafford giving the invocation. The mayor, reeve, deputy-reeve and the six new councillors were sworn in by clerk - treasurer Carson Graham.

Mayor Lorne Smart gave his inaugural address for his fifth term, and committees were appointed. The same evening at 7.30 Council held its first business meeting.

The mayor drew a picture of a year of progress for Napanee, and of hard work for all members of the council. "Being a councillor does not mean simply attending council meetings, nor even looking after council matters one day a week. It means that on certain occasions you will be extra busy, but that practically every day some item of business concerning the town will come to your attention," he warned council.

The mayor noted that citizens would receive two tax bills in 1969, one from the town and a second from the new County Board of Education. They can then see just how much education is costing, and how much it costs to run the town.

Wheels had started moving in the area Mayor Smart asserted, and he expected them to move more rapidly in 1969. Already Canron Ltd., had begun the erection of its new plant, and the selection of Napanee as its location by a second plant was practically assured. "We must be ready for this expansion", he stated.

"A great deal of work must be done on the streets, with particular attention to Dundas, Bridge and Thomas Sts.," the mayor warned. The engineer, J. D. Lee of Kingston is preparing plans for a second clarifier for the sewer disposal plant, and additional expansion may be necessary as more sewers are built. The question of sewers and water for the Camden Road area will be re-opened, even though not sufficient names of ratepayers were on last year's petition. "The official plan has designated this area for housing, and we must be prepared for further building of homes there", he said.

"Napanee has room for 123 new homes right now in the two new housing developments," the mayor stated. He also spoke of annexation of some of the built-up areas in township lands adjoining the town and now receiving town services.

"We must live up to many problems," he pointed out, "and the build up of this is the imminence of regional government. It is coming, and it is coming fast. Small towns with a population of less than 4,000 may find themselves stripped of much of their power in the shuffle," he warned. "Our town and area must prepare to build up its population so that we can fight back if we are threatened," he stated.

The mayor is planning to set up two new committees, one on housing and the second on future town and area development, and the study of regional government. Membership would be from three to five, with, perhaps, some interested citizens from adjoining townships as members.

Lunch Rules Will Not Change

PICTON — There will be no change in the present lunch hour regulations at Queen Elizabeth School.

The school board received a letter at its last meeting from a parent requesting that their child be allowed to stay at the school for lunch.

The board discussed the matter but felt that it would not be feasible to make a change in the lunch-hour regulations.

Board member Lloyd Seeley pointed out that at present students up to and including grade four were allowed to bring their lunch, provided that they live south of Main St. and west of Talbot St.

Mr. Seeley said this brings the number of children staying for lunch up to about 110. "If we extend lunch privileges any further, supervision will have to be hired," he said.

Carl Reid principal of Queen Elizabeth School, agreed with Mr. Seeley.

He said there are no major problems involved at present but there would be if the whole student body of 800 were allowed to eat their lunch at the school.

Brown Wants Industry

Ray Brown, industrial commissioner for Belleville, expressed optimism with the industrial facilities that are offered in Belleville at last night's meeting.

He was asked about losing industry to Trenton and what Belleville has to offer to potential companies.

"We all lose Napden Mills," Mr. Brown conceded. He added that as far as new prospects were concerned things were quite the contrary. "I think we can effectively attract and accommodate industry," he said. "Time will tell."

Mr. Brown was asked how long the representatives of the new proposed plaza would wait for Belleville to make up its mind.

He opposed it could lean-frog to an adjoining area and cause as much havoc as within Belleville," Mr. Brown replied.

Asked if Belleville had the resources necessary to compete for new industry, he said that Belleville had the resource capability. "Perhaps in time I could substantiate 'this,'" he said.

He was also asked what importance the industrial commission placed on social and cultural facilities in city.

"It is not an important factor. The wife considers it an important factor," he said.

Mr. Brown had a suggestion for the Jaycees. He recommended that they set up tourist booths to provide an opportunity for travellers to find out about Belleville.

No Real Lack of Blood At Belleville Hospital

Staff Reporter
By LENNY WILLIAMSON

Although metropolitan hospitals report a serious shortage of blood, the situation at Belleville General Hospital is far from critical.

"We don't use the volume of blood here that is required at Toronto hospitals where a great deal of major surgery is undertaken," said pathologist Dr. G. T. Tremblay.

"Occasionally we have a big run on some of the more unusual types of blood and have to send out an appeal for emergency donors," the pathologist explained.

Such an emergency occurred last Friday, when Mrs. Graham F. Beebe, in charge of the list of general donors for the Red Cross, was called upon to find five emergency donors. Their blood was needed before two scheduled operations could go ahead.

All blood used at the hospital is obtained from the Red Cross in Toronto. Blood obtained at donors clinics throughout the province is stored at the central blood bank and released to local hospitals as needed.

Last year the local Red Cross branch collected 1,400 pints of blood at the five clinics held in January, April, June, August and October. In addition, Mrs. Beebe appealed to 84 emergency donors during the year when the supply of unusual blood types was low at the hospital.

According to Dr. Tremblay no operation has had to be postponed at the local hospital due to lack of blood. The emergency donors always come through.

But Mrs. Beeby would like to see the number of annual donations increased in the Belleville area.

"Giving blood is the ultimate in charitable acts," she said. "The donor is giving something unique — a gift of himself."

The Red Cross branch here has the names of about 4,000 donors in its files, but not all are active. Others have impressive scores. One doctor has given 144 donations.

The Jan. clinic, to be held this year on Jan. 23 at Club Canara, is the largest of the year. In 1968 over 430 people donated blood. The Red Cross insists that a donor wait three months between donations, and donors must be over 18 years old unless they have the written permission of both parents.

Besides providing the operating teams to collect blood, and central processing, storage and distribution facilities, the Red Cross gives each local branch $1 for each pint of blood donated.

"All our local operating expenses come from that $1 a pint allowance," said Mrs. Beeby. "Therefore, the larger the amount of blood donated, the more money we have to spend in promoting our clinics and in bringing in more donors."

Red Cross records prove chivalry is not quite dead. More men than women figure on the donor lists.

Blood Bank

The blood supply in the transfusion laboratory at Belleville General Hospital is checked by Mrs. Leni Amann, charge technologist. Blood supplied by the Red Cross is stored in cylindrical refrigerators until needed.

Peace of a rural winter setting was rudely shattered on Tyendinaga's eighth concession yesterday when fire destroyed home of Mr. and Mrs. Arnold Dean. Steam marks spot as Belleville firefighters hose down ruins.

Quinte Fires Are Destructive

Fires broke out at scattered points across the Quinte district yesterday, causing considerable property damage and minor injuries.

In Belleville a fireman and a home owner were injured when fire threatened a house on West Moira Street last night.

Cecil Grills, 43, received cuts and minor back injuries when he leapt 20 feet from a second-storey as fire spread from a bedroom through the upstairs of his home.

Fireman Jack Finkle also was given emergency treatment at Belleville General Hospital after he was struck in the eye by a sliver of debris.

Earlier, Mr. and Mrs. Arnold Dean and their two children were left homeless when fire gutted their home on Tyendinaga township's eighth concession.

The house was burning out of control by the time firemen arrived from Belleville.

At Bonarlaw, five miles south of Marmora, the barn of Herbert White also was burning beyond control by the time firefighters were called.

Lost in the blaze were six horses, six cows, several pigs and some machinery.

The blaze was first spotted by Mrs. White, alone at home at the time, who called volunteer firefighters from Spring brook, four miles away.

'You Forgot Something'

When the world football champion New York Jets left Fort Lauderdale for home they left behind the Super Bowl Trophy and the game football. They were found later in one of the hotel rooms. No Blues For Joe

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Joe Namath is happy and he says it has nothing to do with his $15,000 winner's share from the Super Bowl or other riches likely to follow this milestone in football history.

Namath reported in Tuesday night to the East squad for Sunday's American Football League all-star game in the Gator Bowl, along with 10 other members of the world champion New York Jets.

"I'm happy and monetary value is no part of it," Namath said when asked what he figured the AFL's first victory over the National Football League champs will mean to him financially.

"It isn't that I think I have enough money," the smooth throwing quarterback said.

"The way I spend it, there probably isn't enough, but I'm happy and my plan for the off-season is to stay happy."

Namath rejected questions about his injuries—two fingers on his left hand taped together, a thumb on his throwing hand that he said got tired in the Super Bowl game, or his troublesome knees.

Namath is scheduled to share the East quarterbacking with Bob Griese in the all-star game.

Missed Ottawa Breakaway Boosts Baby Habs to Second

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Pierre Jarry of Ottawa 67s is one of the most prolific scorers in the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A series.

But he's probably still talking to himself about the goal he missed Tuesday night.

Jarry got a clean breakaway late in the game and zoomed in on goalie Ted Tucker of Montreal Junior Canadiens on what seemed like a sure goal for the little winger who has scored 26 so far this season.

But Tucker, refusing to be drawn out of his net, sprawled across the goalmouth and deflected Jarry's low shot.

As a result, the 67s had to settle for a 4-4 tie with the powerful Canadiens, who used the one point to take over second place in the 10-team league.

Montreal now has 41 points, eight behind the leading St. Catharines Black Hawks and one ahead of Peterborough Petes.

The 67s were looking for a win to enhance their chances of making the playoffs. They are in a ninth-place tie with London Knights. The top eight teams after the regular schedule qualify for the playoffs.

Jarry, who has 26 assists for a total of 35 points, went scoreless Tuesday night. Doug Keeler, with two goals, Jean Potvin and Peter Gew led the Ottawa marksmen.

Scoring for Montreal were Rejean Houle, Normand Gratton, Robert Guidon and Marc Tardiff.

In the only other game, the Knights skated to a 5-4 victory over Oshawa Generals. Danny Maloney getting the winner with four minutes left to play.

Maloney's winner came just 37 seconds after Bob Kelly deflected a shot at the London crease with the Knights short-handed to tie the game 4-4.

Maloney also assisted on two other London goals.

Bob Roselle scored twice and assisted on two goals for London. Other marksmen for the Knights were George Graham and Bert Wilson.

Rick Kessell scored two goals and assisted on another for the Generals. Gerry Methe got the other Oshawa goal.

Symbols Unveiled

Red, White and Blue Will Adorn Expo Uniforms

MONTREAL (CP) — Montreal Expos of baseball's National League Tuesday unveiled the symbol and colors the team will use for its 1969 major league debut.

The symbol selected by the Expos is a mod-like shape of an M encompassing a small "e". The colors are red, white and blue.

"We worked for about two months to get the proper symbol," John McHale, club president, said at a news conference.

Main design criterion was for the symbol and colors to project the image of all of Canada. The designers, club directors and officials felt this had been achieved.

The Expos had hoped also to unveil the club's uniform but some last-minute changes dealing with the numbers on the uniform have forced a two-week delay.

There are three uses of the club's symbol and signature. The symbol by itself in color for uniform identification; the symbol with the word "expos"—with a small "e"—signature for promotional use and the symbol with the Montreal Expos signature for legal requirements.

The symbol was designed by Stewart, Morrison Ltd., of Toronto, New York and London.

Oscar A Tower of Strength

BALTIMORE (AP) — The East, sparked by the brilliance of Cincinnati's Oscar Robertson, stormed to a 123-112 victory over the West Tuesday night in the annual National Basketball Association all-star game.

Robertson, voted the game's most valuable player more for his leadership and assists than his game-high 24 points, helped the East to a 16-point lead in the first quarter, 35-19.

The West, however, with Elgin Baylor of Los Angeles as the key man, barged back into contention, took the lead at one point in the third period, then wilted under a Robertson-led rally.

Chuvalo Promised Shot

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (CP) — Canadian heavyweight champion George Chuvalo of Toronto Tuesday worked out with the best possible sparring partner —heavyweight champion Jimmy Ellis.

Chuvalo, training here for a Feb. 5 bout in New York against Buster Mathis, was unable to find a sparring partner until Ellis volunteered.

Irv Ungerman of Toronto, Chuvalo's manager, said that Ellis promised Chuvalo he would eventually get a title bout.

The Handguns

The five highest scores for the Quinte Marksmanship shoot Jan. 14 were: Joe Stenekes 354; Don Parks 344; Tim Whitney 341; Dick Charlton 334; Ray Reed 318.
Club Average - 1181.

Today The Day?

Railbirds Await Battle of Sexes

MAIMI (AP) — The battle of the sexes in the jockey ranks will come up in the fourth race at Tropical Park today if Barbara Jo Rubin rides a horse named Stoneland.

If she makes the ride, Barbara Jo, 19 ,will become the first female jockey to race at an American track.

But she faces revolt from the male jockeys. And there's a chance Stoneland won't even make it to the post.

In the draw for the race, Stoneland wound up on the also-eligible list. That means at least one of the 12 starting horses must be scratched. But Barbara Jo's horse might make it through the luck of another draw.

Several of the riders named on horses for the six-furlong fourth race said they would not compete against Barbara Jo.

Craig Perrel and Carlos Berrera said they would ride. But Mike Miceli and Gerry Gellano said they would not.

Mike Hole said "maybe, maybe not." Others like Bobby Ussery, Jerry Harrison and Bob Wholey Jr. also adopted a wait-and-see attitude.

Most jockeys at Tropical are members of the Jockeys' Guild. The guild cannot organize a formal boycott without running the risk of violating anti-trust laws.

Barbara Jo, who has remained quiet throughout the fuss, qualified to ride by passing a test Monday before track stewards.

If she performs capably in her first race, she will be issued a riding licence.

The male-female jockey feud started when Penny Ann Early was granted a licence to ride in Kentucky in November. She was named on three horses, one of which was scratched because of muddy conditions, another on which she was replaced by a male, and another where the male jockeys staged a boycott, causing cancellation of the race at Churchill Downs.

Arctic Slides A Feature Of Fish and Game Club Banquet

STAFF — Award night is on tap Tuesday, January 31 at Club Casara for the Belleville and District Fish and Game Club and the women will be on hand as the annual fish and game competition prize winners are announced.

A well known local naturalist, huntress and taxidermist, Mrs. Alma Wallis, will be the guest speaker and she will show her new set of slides entitled "A Trip To The Arctic."

Fish and Game Club prize winners will be declared in the following categories: Best Fish, Best Speckled Trout, Best Brown Trout, Best Kamloops Trout, Best Lake Trout, Best Pickerel, Best Pike, Best Small-Mouth Bass, Best Muskellunge, Best Large-Mouth Bass, Biggest Buck Deer, Biggest Black Bear, Biggest Moose.

Tickets for the annual affair are only three dollars per person and are available at Bob Bissell's Sport Shop or from club directors Fred Clarke (962-1873), Jack Layton (968-8375), Tom Heim (968-7760), Ray Nix (968-3368), or Don MacKinnon (968-8228).

A SWINGING TIME IS HAD BY ALL as BCI cheerleaders practice their routines in the BCI gym. The Collegian cheerleaders, who are coached by Miss Mary Etue, captured their third consecutive Bay of Quinte championship Saturday at Moira Secondary School. From left, the girls are Vicki Joblin, Sherry Graham, Gail Reid, Linda Summers, Sue Pearce, Cathy Manship, Jane Douglas and Carol Spratley. Cathy Dean is absent from the picture.

Teachers Tighten Grip on Top

STAFF — Belleville Teachers defeated CFB Trenton 55-49 last night to strengthen their hold on first place in the Bay of Quinte Men's Basketball League, while Belleville Aces moved past Cobourg into second place by thrashing them 89-62.

Bruce Faulds hooped 26 points to lead the Teachers to victory over Trenton Brian McKenzie added 14 points and Earl Naismith six for the Teachers who have won five of six games this season.

Paul Hargreaves netted 14 for Trenton, while Joe Theriault added nine points and Don Brennan and Jim Horning eight each.

The Aces led 38-34 at the half and pulled away to win handily as former BCI stars John Chalmers and Tom Lornie led the way with 27 and 23 points respectively. Gary Swan netted 14 points for the Aces and Mark Sheridan added 13 for the winners.

Clark topped the Cobourg scorers with 14 points, while Anderson added 13 and Kaiser 11 for the Cobourg club, who have four points and are tied for third place with CFB Trenton.

Picton Produce Surprise

The playoff hungry Picton Merchants started off with a bang last night and showed the boom on the league leading Kingston Merchants.

Picton grabbed a 7-1 lead after two periods and held on to win 8-5 to strengthen their hold on second place in the six team Eastern Ontario Intermediate Hockey League.

Picton, with 24 points, trails league leading Kingston by eight points, but has two games in hand over the Kingston club.

Frank James scored a hat trick to pace the Picton attack, while R. Weese added a pair of goals and singletons apiece to George Jacklin, Gary Goyer and Jim Guernsey.

Leo Lavallee fired two goals for Kingston while Guy White, Pat Driscoll, Gary Lavallee and Easton added a goal each for the league leaders.

Kapp Faces Former Foes

Trophy Monopoly

STAFF — Joe Kapp, former British Columbia Lions quarterback who directed the Minnesota Vikings to the National Football League's Western Conference final against Baltimore Colts last December will be joined by two Canadian Football League Stars at the head table of the 1st annual Sports Celebrities Dinner, Jan. 28, at Toronto's Royal York Hotel.

Bill Symons, the Schenley Award - winning Argonaut halfback and Ken Lehmann, winning linebacker of the Grey Cup champion Ottawa Rough Riders will sit with Joe Kapp whom they once played against.

Olympic swimming star Elaine Tanner and judo star Doug Rogers, both of Vancouver will also be present.

Elaine won a pair of silver medals for Canada in the 100 and 200-metre backstroke events at the 1966 Olympics and Rogers, a 205-pound airlines pilot, won a gold medal in the open judo class at the 1967 Pan-Am Games in Winnipeg.

The dinner is sponsored by the Ontario Sportswriters and Sportscasters Association, and proceeds will go to the Ontario Society for Crippled Children to rebuild a summer camp at Blue Mountain, near Collingwood.

Tickets are available from any Association member or from Ticket Chairman, Gerry Lougheed, Sports Department, The Globe and Mail, Toronto.

BCI Girls Top Rooters Again

STAFF — Cheerleading success requires more than physical attributes for cheerleading groups are judged on style, enthusiasm, originality, leadership ability and uniformity.

BCI's ten - member cheerleading squad is a case in point, Saturday at the Bay of Quinte Girls' bantam Basketball Tournament the Collegian misses captured the Trenton Real Estate Board Trophy for the third consecutive year.

The trophy goes annually to the cheerleading group judged the best in the Bay of Quinte District. BCI has been the only team to win the trophy which has been up for competition for three years.

BCI's cheerleaders practiced every morning for two hours during the last week of Christmas holidays in order to prepare for defence of their championship.

Miss Mary Etue coaches the BCI squad which has only two girls left from last year. The girls made up both of the cheers they used in Saffiday's competition at Moira Secondary School. The cheers were "Great" and "Go! Stop!"

Vicki Joblin is the captain of the ten member team and her teammates are Janice Bell, Sherry Graham, Gail Reid, Linda Summers, Sue Pearce, Cathy Manship, Jane Douglas, Carol Spratley and Cathy Dean.

Shuffleboard Standings

STAFF — Even provincial champions have their bad nights.

Shuffleboard old - timer "Windy" Rushlow handed one out last night during shuffleboard play at the Duke of Edinburgh Unit of the Army, Navy, and Air Force Association.

Rushlow scored a five-ender in a 15-13 singles match win over Hagh Nerbery, member of the Branch 99 Legion shuffleboard crew that brought provincial honors to the city in an all-Ontario Legion tourney near the end of last year.

Rushlow's Canadian Hotel team downed the ANAFers 5 games to 4.

Do the National Hockey League powers-that-be really think they can shut their eyes, and when they open them again, the Russians will have vanished?

Or did they think Anatoly Tarasov's challenge to North American ice supremacy was some form of quaint Balkan joke?

Just listen to the excuses — not just by NHL teams, mind you, but by your average man-on-the-street — as to why we should ignore the Soviet bid to make Vladivostok a potential NHL expansion city.

"We don't want to hurt the poor fellas" they say. "Those Ruskies could never take the punishment playing OUR (i.e. - dirty) game, instead of those sissified-pansy-pansy international rules."

No less an expert than Gordie Howe doesn't buy that one. "As for what rules each a game were played under, I don't think it would matter," says the Floral, Saskatchewan smoothie, who ought to know something about "our rules" after enduring 23 NHL winters.

"I formed the opinion the Russians would like the rough going." Howe says. "They're big and tough."

And from Bill Gadsby, another fellow who has more stitches from National League action than your average patchwork quilt: "The Russians have a tendency to come out of their end with their heads down, and you can catch them real good."

Gadsby, who coached a Red Wing organization junior team in a game with the Russians two years ago, hastened to add: "I think they could adjust real quick."

But why should we worry about it — Mr. Tarasov and Co. certainly aren't.

"We assure you that our boys will be able to knock the eagerness for rough-housing out of anybody who tries to play rough against a Soviet hockey team," snipped Izvah Anatoly.

The remark came in Tarasov's most recent and vehement challenge to the pros in a Soviet magazine article entitled "Pride or Cowardice."

"We have said that we and not you are the champions of the world . . . Let's play and see if you can win from us and prove that you are the strongest in the world, and not just in the Western Hemisphere," Tarasov taunted.

He was quick to note that Canada's 1963 National Team, which twice beat the New York Rangers, was trounced 5-0 by the Soviets at Grenoble last year.

And Tarasov reminded us that Canadians have beaten Russians only twice in the last three years — both times in Canadian rinks with Canadian officials.

Hit mounting displeasure at playing Canadian teams that are no match for their Soviet opponents came to a head yesterday, with the announcement that the Russian Nationals have cancelled their eight-city tour of Canada scheduled for the end of this month.

No more "second-rate" matches for us, was the Soviet hint.

There aren't many more cheeks left for the National Hockey League to turn. The only honest sentiments against NHL-Russian encounters came from those people who are merely afraid the Soviets might actually win a game.

"It is time," Tarasov says, "for Canadian team officials to forget their arguments against the match and let the world see a most interesting, most gripping spectacle that would afford enormous pleasure to everyone who has occasion to see it."

Amen, Anatoly.

Dump Rangers

Los Angeles Twosome Keeping Kings Solvent

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Without Bill Flett and Eddie Joyal, Los Angeles Kings might be completely out of the running in the Western Division of the National Hockey League.

Flett, with 28 goals, and Joyal, with 23, were the Kings' top goal scorers last season and helped the team to a second-place finish. This season, the two again are leading the Kings.

Los Angeles, behind Flett's two goals, defeated New York Rangers 3-1 Tuesday night to move into third place in the Western Division. The goals were the 11th and 12th for Flett. Joyal has 15.

Scoring the other goal for Los Angeles Tuesday night was Gord Labossiere while Vic Hadfield scored for the Rangers.

Los Angeles, last in the NHL in goal production, has only 85 this season and Joyal and Flett have accounted for almost one-third of that total.

Flett opened the scoring at 5:50 of the first period. The Rangers tied the score on Hadfield's goal at 0:58 of the second period.

Then Flett, a solidly-built right winger, scored his second of the night at 4:48 of the third period and Labossiere, recently recalled from Springfield of the American Hockey League, added an insurance tally at 7:15.

Rookie Gerry Desjardins kicked out 35 New York shots in continuing to give Los Angeles sound goaltending.

There were no other NHL games Tuesday night. Tonight Detroit Red Wings visit Montreal Canadiens, Boston Bruins are at Toronto Maple Leafs, Chicago Black Hawks face the Seals at Oakland, St. Louis Blues welcome Philadelphia Flyers and Minnesota North Stars play host to Pittsburgh Penguins.

Tour Tangle

Juckes Requests Soviet Suspension

WINNIPEG (CP) — Canadian amateur hockey officials expect to be told today the Russians have changed their minds again and will be in Montreal Friday night to start their Canadian tour.

Soviet officials threw the Canadians a curve Tuesday, indicating that two eight-game tours in Canada were off.

Immediate Canadian Amateur Hockey Association reaction was anger as executive-director Gordon Juckes fired off a cable asking that the Russians be suspended from all international play unless they fulfil the commitment.

Later, the anger was tempered with hope.

Juckes said in an interview he expected the Russians to reconsider.

"If you want to be charitable, you can believe there was a misunderstanding. If there was no misunderstanding, then I would hope that the seriousness of the situation would be presented with such force that they would do something about it.

The Canadian embassy in Moscow was attempting to straighten out any misunderstanding Tuesday while Fenny Ahearne of the International Ice Hockey Federation promised to bring his influence to bear.

Involved are tours by the Soviet national team from Friday to Jan. 30 with a final game in Ottawa, and the Moscow Selects, in effect the Soviet B team, Feb. 24-March 9.

Acting president Earl Dawson of the CAHA said cancellation would cost the association about $190,000, about $150,000 in receipts and $40,000 which had been invested in a visit of Russia by Canada's national team last year.

Winnipeg coach Jack McLeod said he had counted on the games to condition his squad and help shape his lineup for the world hockey championships in Stockholm March 15-30.

All opposition for the Russians was to be provided by Canada's Nationals—either the Ottawa or Winnipeg teams or a mixture of both.

Juckes said word from the Canadian embassy was that Soviet coach Anatoli Tarasov had been complaining about inferior competition in Canada since the Nationals would be at Lake Placid, N.Y. Another complaint was that Canada would be at a Colorado tournament during the tour.

The Nationals are scheduled for a Colorado tournament Feb. 21-22 but that doesn't conflict with either Russian tour.

Dawson said he expected the Russians would use the tour as a lever to attempt to force a game with a National Hockey League team, either Toronto or Montreal.

"I think the stage was set a week ago when Anatoli Tarasov challenged the NHL to a game."

Juckes isn't so sure and said: "I don't think it would be a good tactical move on their part. I feel the NHL will support the CAHA."

In Montreal, a Forum spokesman said "a couple of thousand" advance tickets—worth about $35,000—have been sold for Friday's game. A sellout of 16,685 was expected in Toronto for Sunday's game.

Harold Ballard, executive vice-president of Maple Leaf Gardens, said he suspected for some time the Russians did not intend to carry out their commitment.

"It merely shows how unreliable the Russians are and they wonder why the National Hockey League isn't anxious to get involved with them."

Hornets Bombard Goalie In 7-2 Win Over Woodstock

GALT (CP) — Galt Hornets shelled Woodstock Athletics' goaltender Gerry Pennington with 38 shots Tuesday night and skated away with a 7-2 win in the only Ontario Hockey Association Senior series game.

Bill Hway paced the winners with two goals. Howie Dietrich, Fern Belanger, Bob Ertel, Vance Millar and John Beechey scored one each. Mac Westgate and Art Bacon replied for Woodstock.

The win moved the Hornets within two points of first-place Barrie Flyers, who have played three more games.

The Athletics in eighth place with a record of five wins and one tie against 21 defeats.

Insurance to Drop Investment Feature

SASKATOON (CP) — An investment counsellor said Tuesday that under the new federal budget future life insurance policies would largely be term contracts and saving contracts would "gradually disappear."

W. Hugh Arscott said in a lecture series during farm and home week that oth r saving vehicles, such as investment certificates, bonds, mutual funds and other market instruments, would be used more commonly.

Mr. Arscott said that as a result of the federal budget "financial security . . . is a brand new ball game."

Regarding the high rate of estate tax when property passes from the last parent to the children, Mr. Arscott said that "if Saskatchewan adopts the same practice as Alberta, and refunds the provincial share of the estate tax, the confiscatory nature of the tax can be eliminated."

Sand and Snow Save 33 Aboard Jetliner

MILAN, Italy (CP-Reuters) — Sand and snow at the bottom of a quarry saved the lives of all 33 persons aboard a crashed British United Airways BAC-111 jet, police said today.

The twin-engined jet skimmed over roofs of suburban houses here, plowed through an electric power line, then plunged into the sand pit only minutes after taking off for London Tuesday night.

But all 26 passengers—including a 40-day-old baby—and seven crew members survived. Five passengers—all Italians—were taken to hospital although none was badly hurt.

Eleven of the passengers were Britons, 14 Italians and Jean Dogherty of Toronto who works for BUA.

PREFER DAYAN

TEL AVIV (AP) — Defence Minister Moshe Dayan's popularity is rising steadily, and 60 per cent of the Israeli public would like to see him premier, a public opinion poll reports. Only 20 per cent of those questioned said they preferred Premier Levi Eshkol to Dayan.

LSD Ingredients Worth $46 Million Seized in London

LONDON (AP) — Scotland Yard detectives swooped on houses in east and west London today and seized substances that could be used to make £18,000,000 ($46,800,000) worth of LSD.

"Our experts estimate this is what the finished product would have been worth on the black market," a Yard spokesman said.

Police also seized $13,000 in U.S. bills and £1,000 in British notes.

A man was being questioned in Paddington police station about the haul, the spokesman said.

Police said the Yard had been investigating reports of illegal "factories" manufacturing LSD in London for more than a week.

The substances seized were due to be smuggled out of Britain, officials said.

Transplants Are Not Answer

HAMILTON (CP) — Heart transplant surgery has no future as a practical solution to heart disease, Dr. Hans Selye, director of the University of Montreal's Institute of Experimental Medicine and Surgery, said Tuesday.

He told a news conference the great number of persons suffering and dying from heart disease makes transplant surgery impractical. In the United States, he said, about 500,000 persons are dying from coronary artery complications every year.

Students Protest Embargo

TORONTO (CP) — More than 400 students from three universities demonstrated before the French consulate Tuesday against France's embargo of arms to Israel.

One of the students was admitted to the office of Marcelle Campana, French consul-general, and read what students described as an indictment of French President de Gaulle.

The students from the University of Toronto, York University, and Scarborough College, marched behind an accordion player who played Israeli folk songs.

They carried signs which read: Vive la France, down with de Gaulle; De Gaulle, assassin of French honor; Le Grand Charles, Le Petit Hero of the U.S.S.R.

WATCH THE HEART

CHICAGO (AP) — Snow shovellers are prime candidates for heart attacks, the American Medical Association warns. But, it said, if you are sure you are physically fit, go ahead with the snow-shovelling task.

United Church Moderator Opposes Canadian Envoy to Vatican

TORONTO (CP) — The moderator of the United Church of Canada and the inter-church committee on Protestant-Roman Catholic relations said Tuesday they are against appointment of an envoy to the Vatican.

Dr. Robert B. McClure, first lay moderator of the United Church, said in a statement that one of Canada's greatest problems is unity — "especially between Quebec and the western provinces, and this is bound to be a divisive move."

Prime Minister Trudeau said Saturday in an interview with the CBC in London, England that he will discuss with the Pope in Rome Thursday the possibility of Canadian establishment of diplomatic relations with the Vatican.

In a separate statement, the inter-church committee said sending an envoy to the Vatican "would establish in Canada a new and highly undesirable principle in the relationship of church and state, one that the late President Kennedy, a Roman Catholic, would not introduce in the United States."

The committee is composed of representatives of the Anglican Church of Canada, the Baptist Federation of Canada, the Presbyterian Church in Canada, the Church of Christ Disciples, the Salvation Army of Canada and the United Church.

Later, at London, Ont., Mr. McClure said Christianity is the cheapest religion in the world.

"It's cheaper than the jungle man in The Congo, not relatively but absolutely."

He was referring to the church's financial support, and charitable contributions to those needing help.

PM Flirted in Wrong League, Declares MP

OTTAWA (CP) — Eldon Woolliams (PC—Calgary North) suggested in the Commons Tuesday that Canada's farmers might be better off if Prime Minister Trudeau at the Commonwealth prime ministers' conference in London had flirted "a little more with markets than with skirts."

The remark was thrust into an exchange between the Calgary lawyer and Agriculture Minister H. A. Olson over a new variety of high-yield Mexican wheat approved by the agriculture department for production and sale as feed grain by Canadian farmers.

Mr. Woolliams had the last word, switching his attack to the absent prime minister who grabbed headlines in London last week by dating several young ladies, at least one of whom couldn't resist the temptation to tell all about it.

Said Mr. Woolliams:

"Probably if the prime minister at the Commonwealth prime ministers' conference had been flirting a little more with markets than with skirts the farmers would have been better off."

English Teachers Doubt French-Canadians Need Be Coercive

QUEBEC (CP) — Groups representing 5,000 English-speaking teachers from the Montreal area say it is questionable whether the French-Canadian nation needs to resort to "coercive methods" to ensure its survival.

The comment is contained in a joint brief submitted today to the Quebec legislature's education committee by the Montreal Teachers Association, representing Protestant teachers, and the Federation of English-speaking Catholic Teachers.

The brief refers to the controversial language-rights bill which was sent to the education committee for study prior to second reading in the legislature last December. Public hearings on the bill opened Tuesday.

The French language in Quebec appears to be flourishing "to an extent unparalleled in the past 200 years," the brief says, although legislation to ensure French-speaking employees the right of communication in their own language in industry and commerce would not be unreasonable.

However, the "large English-speaking minority in Quebec, . . . like its French-speaking co-citizens, has no intention of disappearing. Thus Quebec is a bicultural society which must become a truly bilingual society."

The brief says the influx of immigrant labor has created a new and serious problem in the realm of language and education in Quebec.

"A certain number of these immigrants may arrive here with the intension of assimilating into the English sector and so ensure themselves of a mobility which would be lacking were they to become French-speaking.

Any attempts to force these immigrants to join the French sector would simply send them to Ontario or the U.S. and thus reduce the supply of labor we so badly need for our growing Quebec economy."

The brief suggests an amendment to the section of the bill regarding immigrant children to limit the possibility of "coercive measures" towards parents in choosing the language of education of their children.

The bill to protect minority rights was introduced after a school commission in the Montreal suburb of St. Leonard voted last June to remove bilingual instruction in elementary classes in favor of all-French classes.

The suburb, which has a large Italian-Canadian population, exploded in controversy over the language question. Parents who wanted English-language instruction for their children opened private classes.

'Not a Religious Act' Says Sharp

LONDON (CP) — External Affairs Minister Sharp says Canadians would regard recognition of the Vatican as a diplomatic and not a religious act.

The situation in regard to the Vatican is analogous to that concerning China in that the government has stated it is an objective to recognize Peking, he said at a news conference Tuesday.

Questions and Answers On Highway Travel

Ontario Motor League Eastern Ontario Club

Many people are of the opinion that if you park your car in a public parking lot, the lot is responsible for the contents in your car if stolen. This is not so, even if your doors and trunks are all locked. There usually are signs in parking lots to this effect. Many people losing valuables locked in their car or trunks have sued the parking lots but have lost the cases.

QUESTION: I am new in the area and would like a list of the nearest good ski resorts, some that I could reach in a few hours.

ANSWER: Snow Ridge is a very popular ski resort in New York State. It is on Highway 12 about 50 miles south of Watertown, N.Y. and about 120 miles from Kingston.

Snow Ridge is in the Lake Ontario snow belt with an average annual snow fall of 220 inches, about 120 days of fine skiing, from early December to April. Superb facilities for beginners, intermediates, and experts. It has 2 cafeterias three chair lifts, three T-bars, five slopes, four rope tows 500 feet drop, daily fee $5 to $8.

Camp Fortune is one mile west of Chelsea in the Gatineau Hills off Highway 11 in the province of Quebec, 10 miles north of Ottawa. The Gatineau Hills provide many cross - country ski trails and some excellent downhill runs. The ski centres are so near to Hull and Ottawa that, if a visitor desires, he can take downtown lodgings and commute each day to the slopes. It is about 125 miles from Kingston, about a two-hour drive.

Camp Fortune has eight slopes, one chair and two-pomo lifts, five rope tows, daily fee $2 to $4.

Mont Ste. Marie at Lake Ste. Marie off Highway 11 is the highest peak in the Gatineau Park, with an elevation of 1,240 feet above an area studded with lakes. The view from the summit is breathtaking, and its northern flanks assure prime snow conditions and happy skiing. It has three slopes, two chair lifts, daily fee $5.

These are all daily trips and very popular ski resorts. If you are a member of the Motor League we have free ski maps at our office showing all ski areas in Ontario, Quebec, and New York State with a description of each.

A few safety rules for skiing:

1. Don't wear lowing scarves or other loose clothing that might tangle.
2. Carry poles by shafts, not by straps over wrist.
3. Don't swing lift chairs.
4. Clear unloading platform promptly.
5. Don't ski alone.
6. Check traffic uphill before descending.
7. When overtaking another skier, warn him with "on your right" or "on your left."
8. Pass to the right of skiers approaching in opposite direction.
9. When walking or climbing on a ski trail or slope, wear your skis and keep to the side.
10. Stop at the side of trails, never in the middle where you can't be seen from above.
11. Don't drink and ski.
12. When you're tired, stop skiing.

Marmora Council Holds Meeting

At the first meeting of the Marmora Village Council this week, Reeve William Shannon announced chairmen of committees as follows: water, Ed McNamara; finance, Jack Reynolds; roads and streets, Bill. Monk and property, Grant Airhart.

New councillor, Grant Airhart, becomes a member of the Marmora Recreation Committee to represent Council, along with Bill Monk. Jack Reynolds is Council's representative on the board of Marmora Public Library.

New members appointed to the Rink Commission by Council are Maurice Fenton, Jack Golden and Boyd Warren.

Enquiries have been sent to the Department of Highways regarding the connecting link on Highway 14 for improvements consisting of paving, curbing and installation of storm sewers.

A letter is being written to the Canadian Mitchell Associates, Bramalea, to have a representative come to Marmora to assist council in planning a future park in the recently purchased river front property on the north side of No. 7 highway in the Village.

Students Control College

MONCTON, N.B. (CP) — Classes remained suspended at the University of Moncton today as students, seeking more financial aid for the institution, continued to control a key campus building.

Working in shifts, about 125 students guarded doors to the science and administrative building with fire hoses while administrative officials and fellow students outside pondered the protest's outcome.

Following a meeting Tuesday night, the professors' association at the University issued a mild statement suggesting the occupation, which began late Saturday, be ended.

The statement said the professors did not feel the students would help the "financing of the university" by their demonstration.

The administration appeared hesitant about taking action that would end the occupation although university President Adelard Savoie said following a joint meeting with the student federation that "discussion has begun on certain problems.".

He said a further joint meeting would be held today.

Meanwhile in Fredericton, the higher education commission released figures which said government grants to the university averaged $1,200 more per student than those given to the University of New Brunswick.

The figures said grants to the Moncton university averaged $4,000 per student while grants to UNB averaged only $2,800 per student.

A student spokesman said the occupation would not end until there was some government commitment for increased aid to the university.

DESIGNED TO FILL THE EMPTY DAYS!

In 1850, James Naismith was trying to figure out a game to fill the physical education curriculum between the football and baseball seasons. Basketball was born and is the only one . . . and it's the only competitive sport of purely American origin!

There's a wonderful invention used all over the world to sell no longer needed basketballs or almost anything . . . how to call it an Intelligence Ad . . . and you get it by dialing 962-9171.

NERO PLAYED THE BAGPIPES?

Although we think of the bagpipes as being a Scottish instrument, it is very popular in ancient India and the Roman Emperor Nero had one, too. Made of a leather bag and reed pipes, the bagpipe was a popular folk and military instrument in Scotland and Ireland.

Whether you wish to sell a good set of bagpipes or any other no longer needed musical instruments .or your house, rely on its fast-acting Intelligencer ad to do it for you! Call 962-9171 for information.

Hyperkinetic Child Requires Treatment by Specialist

By Dr. George C. Thosteson

"I beg the indulgence of readers who may not be personally concerned with today's remarks on the hyperkinetic (or overactive) child, but it is of such great importance to parents of such children that one more reference to the matter seems imperative.

From all over the country have come letters. Many say, in effect, "We didn't know that was wrong with our child, but he fits your description exactly."

Others have written that at last, knowing what to look for, they are getting effective treatment for such children.

Still others, and to them this is particularly addressed, continue to write letters like this one:

"Dear Doctor: In your article about the hyperkinetic child you mention that there are just a few doctors able to diagnose this problem. As we are not in a position to just go from one doctor to another, we would appreciate your recommending a doctor in this area. M. F."

The problem exists everywhere, but people are puzzled as to where to go for help.

It is not quite correct to say that "just a few" physicians can diagnose this condition. A good many can — but it is not a skill that is possessed generally. It requires special training.

But finding such a physician decidedly should not entail "going from one doctor to another." The county Medical Society is an excellent source, almost anywhere in the country, to be referred to for a physician familiar with this problem. And the many Child Guidance Clinics are ideal places.

Children's hospitals are a natural place to go for this help if your city has such a hospital. Otherwise make inquiry at any hospital that has a pediatrics department, and particularly if it has a psychiatric service.

People in smaller communities may well have to go to one of the cities, but I was delighted to learn a pediatrician in a Michigan community of less than 30,000 took some special post-graduate training in this field because he saw so many youngsters who needed such care.

It is always proper to ask your regular physician to find the nearest source of diagnosis and treatment.

The hyperkinetic child is one who just can't sit still, can't help jittering, annoying others talking when he should be still and wasting his own supercharged energies. He isn't "bad." He can't help it. He is a distraction in school, a problem at home.

Care must be taken to distinguish between the hyperkinetic child and the child who has a genuine psychiatric or emotional illness.

But with this hyperkinetic, once identified, effective treatment generally is entirely possible. Sometimes it has a psychiatric service.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Is it true a person can grow taller by stretching exercises? I am 13½ and my mother thinks I can grow short an inch taller by stretching. — F. W.

Your bones govern your height, and you can't stretch them — but at 13½ you have several years yet for normal growth.

EMERSON HODGINS
Tweed

TWEED—A highly respected and well-known Tweed resident, Emerson Hodgins, passed away in Kingston on January 9th. Mr. Hodgins was the son of the late Walter Hodgins and his wife, the former Alice Edwards.

The deceased was born in Renfrew, seventy years ago. He was married to Doris Margaret Tweedy, in Belleville, on September 21st, 1925 and they had made their home in Tweed since that time. Besides his wife, who survives, he is survived by two sons, Donald Emerson Hodgins, Tweed, and John Ross Hodgins also of Tweed, and by his daughter-in-law, Mrs. Donald Hodgins (Diana) of Tweed.

Other family relatives who are left to mourn his loss are John L. Hodgins, Bentley; Mrs. Sam Johnston, Cobden, Ontario; Mrs. Roy Raymond, Bentley; Mrs. Harold Gibson, Cobden; Mrs. Percival Dowsett, Crosby, and Mrs. James Valentine, St. Rose, Quebec, all sisters and brothers of the deceased.

Mr. Hodgins was the owner and operator of the well-established firm, The Tweed Feed Mill which he purchased in June 1944, coming from Peterborough, where he previously resided and where he travelled for Robin Hood Flour Mills Limited.

Mr. Hodgins was interested in the social, religious, municipal and agricultural life of his village and his township and county. He was a devoted member of the Bloomfield United Church, Tweed, of which he was a member; was a past-member of the Board of Stewards of St. John's Church; was a member of the Kiwanis Club of Tweed; of the Rameses Shrine, of Toronto; of Hastings County Board of Education of Tweed; was a past-member of the Tweed Municipal-Village Council; and Past-President of Tweed Agricultural Society; also past-director of Ontario Feed Dealer's Association; member of the Tweed Masonic Lodge; and Odd Fellows Lodge of Smiths Falls, and a member of the Tweed Order of the Eastern Star.

Mr. Hodgins rested at the W. M. Bush Funeral Home, Tweed, until Sunday, thence to St. John's United Church, where the funeral service was conducted by Reverend Howard V. Kennedy, of St. John's at 2.30 p.m. Interment was entombment in St. James' Vault in Victoria Cemetery, Tweed.

The honorary bearers were Gilbert Cotton, S. Howard Connor, C. Edward Way, Harold Emerson, Charles Porritt, Lincoln Elliott.

The acting bearers were: John Trudeau, Smiths Falls, Osborne Smith, Peterborough, Raphael Cournoyer, William G. Baker, Kenneth Belch, Wesley Hamilton of Tweed.

WILLIAM MEIKLEJOHN

KYLSTONE — Funeral services were held on Monday, Jan. 13 for Bill Meiklejohn, 21, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Laurence Meiklejohn, who died in Civic Hospital at Peterborough on Friday, Jan. 10, while being prepared for surgery. While not always in the best of health, his final illness was of short duration.

Besides his parents, and grandmother, Mrs. Chester Meiklejohn, he is survived by five sisters, Margaret, Aileen, Janie, Brenda and Norma; and two brothers, Glen and Eddie. He was predeceased by one brother Tom.

The funeral service was conducted by Rev. Gordon Whitehorne, in the chapel and at Mount Pleasant vault, where temporary interment was made.

Pall bearers were Robert and Fred Spencer, Ted Reid, Donald Stewart, Dennis Gray and Donald Wood.

MRS. CLIFFORD H. DAWSON

TRENTON — The funeral for Mrs. Lillian May Dawson, RR1, Trenton, was held from the Weaver Funeral Home, Trenton, on Monday afternoon.

Mr. K. McCallister of Smithfield conducted the service in the chapel and also said the graveside prayers at Mount Evergreen Cemetery vault with interment in Stone's cemetery in the spring.

The bearers were James VanDusen, Gerald Nicholls, Harold Morgan, Donald Sharpe, Fred Stewart and Alex Sharpe.

In failing health for some time, Mrs. Dawson died in Trenton Memorial Hospital on Friday. She was born in Morganston, 72 years ago, a daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Henry Resnick and had resided in the community all of her life.

Surviving are two daughters, Mrs. Carmen (Doris) Jones, Oshawa, Mrs. William (Myrtle) Calman, Trenton and six grandchildren.

TORONTO STOCKS

TORONTO (CP) — The Toronto stock market posted a small advance in moderately active mid-morning trading today. All four major indexes were up.

The market has been rising since Thursday after its severe plunge last week. On average, stocks have recovered more than half their losses.

Brokers are encouraged by the favorable trend in New York, where the market picked up more slowly than Toronto since the decline.

In industrials, Canadian Goldale gained 1% to 32¾, Canada Steamship Lines 1 to 35, Dyke Diversified 1 to 24½, Hand Chemical A ¾ to 25½ and a-mous Players ½ to 69½.

Among the heaviest traders, Alcan and Imperial Oil rose ¼ each to 30¾ and 31⅛.

Trading was halted in Hardee Farms pending a statement from the company. The stock closed Tuesday at $1.65, up 40 cents on the day. The company indicated that the statement would be made later this week.

Leigh Instruments advanced 1⅝ to 49¼. The firm said it is negotiating to acquire two private electronics companies in Ontario.

Mines listed in the base metal section continued to advance, and the base metal index touched a record for the second successive day. Denison rose 2 to 73½, Kerr Addison ⅝ to 18⅝ and Roman Corp. ¾ to 23⅛.

Golds inched up in the wake of the rising price of bullion on the free market. Giant Yellowknife was up ⅛ to 14½ and Camflo 20 cents to $5.80.

On index, industrials gained .39 to 187.93, golds 2.36 to 352.17 base metals .41 to 116.32 and western oils 3.54 to 238.96. Volume by 11 a.m. was 1,256,000 shares compared with 1,441,600 at the same time Tuesday.

Prices rose for the fourth successive trading session on the Toronto exchange Tuesday and the market closed with moderate gains.

The advance was helped by the firmer trend in New York where recent weakness gave way to a small rise.

The industrial index gained .65 to 187.54, while the mining stocks listed in the base metal section edged up to an all-time high. The base metal index rose .28 to 115.91.

The market as a whole has recovered almost half the losses posted early last week when prices were hit by an unexpected slump in New York.

The announcement of higher prime loan rates by Canadian chartered banks made no immediate impact, although last week's similar increase by U.S. banks took much of the blame for a bad spell in the market.

Among bank shares, Canadian Imperial Bank gained ¼ to 22¼ and Toronto-Dominion ½ to 22¼.

Among the heaviest traders, Hardee Farms was up 40 cents to $1.65.

Cardinal Roasted On Rights Bill

QUEBEC (CP) — Education Minister Jean-Guy Cardinal got a roasting Tuesday and supporters of a bilingual Quebec dominated the opening of a public hearing into the Union Nationale government's language rights bill.

Sittings of the legislature's education committee were to resume at 10 a.m. today.

Mr. Cardinal was accused of fostering the "injustice and rape of the English language in St. Leonard," the Montreal suburb where the language issue erupted in 1968.

Robert Beale, president of the Association of Parents of St. Leonard, told the hearing Mr. Cardinal had not given the association the courtesy of an answer to letters and appeals for government funds.

The association helps maintain a private school for 255 English-speaking Grade I students in St. Leonard at a weekly cost of $1,000.

The school was established after the Roman Catholic school board abolished English-language instruction at the Grade I level.

On Dec. 12, Mr. Beale said, the association sent a telegram to Mr. Cardinal asking the government to assume the costs of the school organized on a temporary basis by parents and financed by public canvassing.

Asked by a Liberal member to comment on Mr. Beale's accusations, Mr. Cardinal said he would reply only after all briefs had been presented.

The Mouvement pour l'integration scolaire, the French-language antibilingualism group that has led a fight against the bill and worked toward French-only instruction in St. Leonard, was not present Tuesday.

The Parents' Association for Catholic Education urged rapid adoption of the bill "as a measure solely to restrain the school boards of Quebec from restricting English-language education."

It recommended that "legislation to foster and preserve the French language be drafted only after the report of the royal commission established by Premier Jean-Jacques Bertrand to study the status of the French language.

Bilingualism also was urged by the eastern region of the Canadian Jewish Congress, the Quebec division of the Canadian Manufacturers Association, the Montreal Board of Trade, the Provincial Association of Catholic Principals and the Quebec section of a group known as Pro-Canada.

The Jewish congress asked that a clause on immigrants be cut out. It would "create a distinction between one resident and another and set up an extra group in one category."

A congress spokesman said that an immigrant family should have the same choice of schools in Quebec as have people born in the province.

Unilingualism was advocated by Jean Labrecque, president of l'Association des professeurs de l'ecole normal Laval—a Quebec City group of less than 50 college teachers.

Crown Takes Tough Line On Failure to Pay Rebates

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP) — The Crown will take a tough line against landlords who do not return rent rebates to tenants and will, in future, not drop charges once a charge is laid, Windsor's assistant Crown attorney said Tuesday.

Thomas Docherty's warning came after a charge for failure to pay the 1968 municipal tax rebate was dropped against Mrs. Heather Cartlidge of Windsor in provincial court.

The charge alleged that Mrs. Cartlidge did not pay a rebate of $5.44 to a tenant, Margaret Bateman.

Mr. Docherty said he understood the money had been paid since the charge was laid Jan. 9. But he warned in future the Crown would prosecute once a charge had been laid to prevent a landlord "from merely paying the money and getting off the hook."

He said the Crown would seek the maximum penalty of a $200 fine in future cases.

Program Called 'Ill Conceived'

TORONTO (CP) — James Bullbrook, Liberal member of the legislature for Sarnia, Tuesday called the provincial government tax rebate program the "most ill-conceived, ill-administered legislation ever passed in Ontario."

At a news conference, Mr. Bullbrook demanded that the government indicate immediately the future of the program.

He also said Municipal Affairs Minister William Darcy McKeough should cancel the program and resign.

Drilling Costs High

Small Firms Bide Time in Arctic Hunt

TORONTO (CP) — Although drilling operations in Canada's the huge oil discovery reported last summer on the north slope of Alaska has lifted the shares of at least six Canadian oil companies to record prices, most of the smaller firms are biding their time for the big names in the petroleum industry to come up with further drilling results before starting detailed explorations.

This is because the cost of drilling in the Far North, up to $1,500,000 a well in Alaska, is about five times as great as in more accessible areas.

From a short-term market point of view, therefore, the sources of drilling news during the remaining months of the winter season are limited to the select band of companies which can afford the risks.

According to the latest maps, there are about 60 Canadian companies with exploration permits or shared interests in the Canadian Arctic-Alaska region. The popular area extends from northern Alaska across the Yukon and Northwest Territories and includes the arctic islands.

The companies with winter drilling plans in the Canadian Arctic are Imperial Oil, Shell Canada, Gulf Canada (formerly British American Oil), Texaco, Canadian Pacific Oil and Gas and a group composed of Great Plains Development, General Crude Oil Co. and J. Ray McDermott Canada Ltd.

Panarctic Oils, a consortium of 21 companies in partnership with the federal government, will drill its first hole in March or April on Melville Island in the Arctic.

The possibilities in Alaska have just been enlarged by Calgary-based Home Oil Co.'s announcement of test-drilling plans near Prudhoe Bay, where the original oil strike was made last year. Home is acquiring additional land rights from its next neighbor, Atlantic Richfield.

The company had been expected to release these details for several weeks and the Home stocks have been trading heavily on the Toronto Stock Exchange.

Home A has climbed to $41.75 from a 1968 low of $12.12 and Home B to $41 from $18.75.

Home Oil is the only Canadian company which has reported on immediate drilling plans in Alaska, while the other dozen or so rigs belong mainly to American owners.

Atlantic Richfield Co. and Humble Oil Co., the pioneers of those discovery at Prudhoe Bay was assessed as potentially one of the richest oil reservoirs in the world, still was spearheading the operation with four rigs.

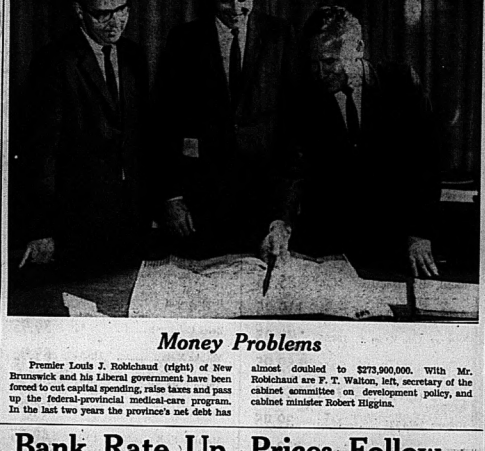
British Petroleum Co. of London is expected to operate three rigs. Standard Oil of Indiana, Standard Oil of California and a group composed of Mobil Oil Corp., Phillips Petroleum Co. and Colorado Oil and Gas will operate either one or two rigs each.

Despite the apparent surge of activity, however, oil industry observers say the assessment period probably will last for other three to five years.

Only by then, it is thought, will the full extent and location of the reserves be measured. Also, it could take at least that time to work out the transportation and marketing problems.

"The whole industry may have to reappraise its structure because there is a real possibility now of finding huge reserves of the nature of those in the Middle East," commented a Calgary oil official recently.

The transportation problem has so far produced two main suggestions:



—A 700-mile pipeline from Prudhoe Bay due south to Anchorage on Alaska's Cook Inlet or a 1,700-mile pipeline across Canada to link up with an existing line in Edmonton.

—Transportation in 250,000-ton tankers direct from the Arctic Ocean via Davroe, Lopez and the Pacific seaboard of North America. Growth in the size of tankers and new ice-breaking techniques may have made this possible.

The marketing question mark hanging over northern oil reserves—whether they originate in Canada or Alaska—could develop into a lengthy controversy with the United States.

This is because anything found on U.S. soil will diminish U.S. demand for Canadian crude oil, while any reserves discovered in Canada will correspondingly increase the amount of Canadian oil for sale abroad.

Although the U.S. government exempts Canada from official oil quota barriers, the export of oil to the U.S. is controlled by informal agreements. In recent years, the unofficial flow of oil has been expanding at a slower rate.

Money Problems

Premier Louis J. Robichaud (right) of New Brunswick and his Liberal government have been forced to cut capital spending, raise taxes and pass up the federal-provincial medical-care program. In the last two years the province's net debt has almost doubled to $273,900,000. With Mr. Robichaud are F. T. Walton, left, secretary of the cabinet committee on development policy, and cabinet minister Robert Higgins.

Bank Rate Up, Prices Follow

By KEN SMITH
Canadian Press Business Editor

TORONTO (CP) — Up, up and away. . . .

Toronto-based chartered banks bumped up their prime interest rates Tuesday, giving new voice to the question of what's in store for consumer prices.

A quick consensus was that, following the interest rates, they will go up generally a bit more.

The prime rate increase of seven per cent from 6% and effective Monday, Jan. 20, was announced first by Canadian Imperial Bank of Commerce. Toronto-Dominion Bank and Bank of Nova Scotia quickly followed.

The prime lending rate is the interest charged by banks to their No. 1 customers. It customarily foretells higher interest charges down the line to other customers—from a small businessman wanting $100,000 to expand a plant to a housekeeper wanting $600 for a new automatic dishwasher.

Whether or not the higher rates apply directly to a housekeeper, in the past they have meant increased prices as the interest charges filter through the economy.

The increase had been widely expected following four developments which have reflected the latest trend to higher interest rates.

On Dec. 18, the Bank of Canada raised its bank rate to 6% per cent from six because of "the persistence of inflationary price and cost increases in recent months."

The bank rate is generally taken as a signal from the central bank as to how it wants interest rates to move.

At the first of the year, the National Housing Act mortgage rates were raised to a record 9% per cent from 8%, although several major lenders are reported to be letting money out at slightly below the NHA rate.

Major New York banks increased their prime rates Jan. 7 to seven per cent from 6%, reflecting an international trend to higher interest charges.

Finally, interest rates have been climbing in other Canadian money markets and on the bond market.

The Bank of Nova Scotia said it had delayed increasing its prime rate after the Bank of Canada's Dec. 18 "in the hope that the demand for money would moderate after Christmas."

"However no easing in demand has occurred. . . ."

Noting the higher rates in the U.S., it said it is unusual for Canadian interest charges to be lower and "as a result a moderate increase in rates can no longer be delayed."

Meanwhile, the effectiveness of higher interest rates as an anti-inflationary weapon was being questioned.

Basically, here is the way higher rates are supposed to work to slow the economy down and relieve pressures, creating higher costs and prices:

As interest rates climb and make money more expensive people—ranging from businessmen with plans to build new plants to workers considering a new car or television set—are supposed to postpone their schemes on grounds they are not willing to pay the higher cost of money.

This reduces over-all demand, so fewer people want money.

In this changed market condition, money becomes cheaper to borrow—and people then resume their spending intentions.

This squeeze of interest rate levels on the money market is supposed to produce a well-regulated, effective system of checks and balances.

In recent years, however, there have been some suggestions that the system is not working properly. Although interest rates have been climbing almost without interruption, so has demand and, hence, costs and prices.

James Gillies, dean of the faculty of administrative studies at Toronto's York University, suggested in a recent article in the Telegram that a serious and immediate study of the impact of the government's interest rate policy is essential.

He said that, faced with higher interest rates, normal consumer and business activity should have declined markedly.

"But they have not, because the apartment builder has believed that he can charge rents sufficiently high to make money even when he is paying more than eight per cent for mortgage money.

"Consumers have believed that their incomes will rise rapidly enough to permit them to service more debt at higher rates, and obviously manufacturers have felt they can pass on the cost of higher rates in the form of higher prices.

"And so far all who have reasoned this way have been correct. . . .

"Could it possibly be that we are at such a stage of inflation that people anticipate higher prices to such an extent that they simply ignore higher interest costs when they make their borrowing plans?

"If this is true, then it may well be that the policy that has been followed for the past few years of increasing interest rates to control inflation has instead been simply contributing to it."

Accident Victim's Parents Tell of Southern Hospitality

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont. (CP) — Don Elsley, a Niagara Falls businessman, has reason today to be grateful for the hospitality of a southern United States city he had never visited until this year.

Mr. Elsley got to know Greenville, N.C., a city of 25,000, pretty well after his daughter, Dawn, 22, was seriously injured in a car accident near there on New Year's Eve.

Mr. Elsley returned home last weekend to praise the hospitality of Greenville. His wife stayed behind with their daughter, who faces a minimum of three months in hospital.

"At our motel, people sent things to the room over and above what you'd normally find."

He said that in a city with a housing problem, made worse by a high population of university students, new-found friends managed to find an unfurnished apartment for Mrs. Elsley so she could remain near her daughter.

Friends loaned dishes, pots and pans and brought food.

A car dealer placed a car at their disposal without charge.

A woman drove 60 miles to Greenville to return Dawn's glasses, found at the accident scene.

Morality Comes Before Law

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

On Monday, Nov. 18, 1968, on the steps of City Hall, hundreds of them traded punches with the police. What were They doing at City Hall? They were having a court hearing on charges filed against them during an earlier demonstration.

As a matter of fact, Their leader — who the day before had announced a civil disobedience campaign — defied the court and refused to appear to answer his summons.

The charge being heard in City Hall that day resulted from clashes with the police a month earlier, when hundreds of Them took to the streets to protest alleged "discrimination in housing, job opportunities, and voting rights.

After the hearing about 400 "civil rights" supporters carried Their leaders on Their shoulders to City Hall. According to witnesses, "when the demonstrators began marching up the building's steps, police shut the gates in front of them. As the marchers tried to force their way out, scuffles and fist fights broke out."

Sounds depressingly familiar, doesn't it? The same words and phrases we have become so accustomed to — "demonstration," "civil disobedience" "job opportunities," and "voting rights."

Only this time there is a difference.

The country was not the United States, but Northern Ireland.

The city was not Chicago or Cleveland, but Londonderry.

And the protesters, of course were white Irish Roman Catholics.

Doing exactly what our American blacks are doing, and for much the same reasons.

Making an unholy fuss for a holy cause. Disturbing the peace — as only the Irish, God bless them, know how to disturb the peace — for a peace based on injustice is a bitter mockery of the word.

Asking for what every man has a right to ask — a decent place to live, a fair crack at a job, a vote that counts as much as any other man's.

Asking to be judged as individuals, not as part of an abstract, faceless mass — not as Roman Catholics in a nominally Protestant country, but as men, with the same loves and fears, the same needs and hopes, the same rights and responsibilities.

If the law won't provide those basic things, the law must be changed. If the law won't be changed legally, it will be changed extra-legally. That was what the American Revolution was about. That is what every revolution — good and bad alike — is about.

Morality comes before law. If any ruling group accepted this, there would be no demonstrations, no scuffles, no conflicts, no revolution.

Jean Dixon's Horoscope

For Jan. 16th.

Your birthday today: The year ahead is full of diligent effort for which good material and spiritual returns are indicated. Less chance of getting other people to do part of the work is balanced by a greater efficiency. Romantic interests are stronger in the early part of the year, less important later. Today's natives are rather genial, peaceful people with a liking for dramatic literature.

ARIES (Mar. 21 — Apr. 19): Personal interests right and left take your attentions, while work pressures lead you into abrupt actions. Strive for a bit better balance between fun and career and take some advice from an old hand.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 — May 20): Try turning your imagination on full blast in positive, optimistic directions. Fresh beginnings are open all around you in all sorts of social contacts. Your work schedules now are apt to be erratic; use the opportunity for experimentation.

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): A great sales effort is going on to get you to commit yourself to some venture. Leave your investments untouched; concentrate instead on your regular activities.

CANCER (June 21—July 22): When your friends start tantrums, your partner is tense and mistrustful. Keep your poise and try to think what set off the fireworks. You may have triggered the reaction with some innocent error.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22): Nothing you've set your heart on seems available in this easier perverse day. Keep your diet simple or fast for the day. Whatever romantic interests you may have at the moment has attracted competition.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 — Sept. 22): Speculation is to be avoided today! Otherwise it is a productive day for creative effort, family and friends with a promise for excitement later.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 — Oct. 22): Don't be surprised if you seem to be skipped in the excitement of the day. It is all too easy to be goaded into some complaint. Avoid passing through crowded areas or traffic.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23—Nov. 21): Don't try new theories or systems. Institutions relating to speculation or chance are likely to go awry suddenly. Search for some fault in your nutrition when aware of nervous tensions; correct it.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): The temptation is to dump everything and everybody in favor of a fresh start. Nobody wants to try anything but his own schemes, so there's no point in pushing any ambitious plans. Avert a worse pile-up later.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 — Jan. 19): Coincidence upsets your apple-cart today. Errands for relatives are in step with the day and easier to perform. Friends are helpful, but should not be told too much right now. Affairs of the heart are favored.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb. 8): Work advances nicely, but increase of expenses threatens. Schedules tend to be upset all day, so you make adjustments as best you can. Take care that some practical joke doesn't trick you into a burst of temper.

PISCES (Feb. 19 — Mar. 20): Be alone as much as you can manage, but be sure to include your mate in any invitation for the evening. Work conditions may change in a way you didn't expect; however, hold your peace for the present.

Cosmonauts Space-walk Between Linked Ships

'Space Station' Term Is Used

MOSCOW (Reuters) — Russia made giant strides in its race for the moon today — linking up two manned satellites, transferring two men through space from one to the other, and unlinking them again.

It was the first orbital link-up of two manned craft. The two craft were coupled together for four hours 35 minutes.

The two craft linked up earlier today to form what was officially described as the world's first orbiting space station.

An announcement carried by the Soviet news agency Tass said Lt.-Col. Yevgeny Khrunov, 36, and civilian engineer Alexei Yeliseyev, 35, made their walks separately and the process took about an hour.

In the Soyuz 4 half of the station they joined Lt.-Col. Vladimir Shatalov, 41, who manoeuvred his craft to make the earlier link-up.

The commander of mission, Lt.-Col. Boris Volynov, 34, remained in Soyuz 5.

Both spacecraft have two compartments and are capable of carrying several spacemen.

The Russian word Soyuz means union and observers considered the link-up a key step in Soviet plans to construct a platform in space that could be used as the starting point of a mission to the moon.

Tass said the experiment created pre-conditions for carrying out replacement of crews on long-term orbital flights, or the rescue of crews in emergencies.

Khrunov was apparently first to make the switch over to Soyuz 4, while Yeliseyev waited near an open hatch in Soyuz 5.

Khrunov completed his walk while the spacecraft was over Latin America and then, when the craft was over Soviet territory, Yeliseyev emerged and crossed over as Khrunov waited in the open hatch of Soyuz 4.

The two men spent an hour in condition of space, Tass said, although they were not actually outside at the same time.

Moscow television reported that both felt well after the transfer.

The space walks were announced less than three hours after Moscow radio and television triumphantly reported the docking in space.

The Soyuz mission thus achieved the world's first docking of two manned spaceships. The U.S. Gemini program achieved linkups only with one manned and one unmanned ship.

It also was the first time the Soviet Union achieved manual docking, something the United States has already done. The two previous Soviet dockings were automatic, between unmanned spaceships.

After the link-up at 11:28 a.m. G.M.T. (6:28 a.m. EST), Lt.-Col. Boris Volynov, 34, captain of the three-man Soyuz 5, took command of the station.

Tass news agency said: "There was a mutual mechanical coupling of the ships. They were rigidly tightened up and their electrical circuits were connected."

The announcement said everything was functioning normally and telephone communications were established between the two parts of the station.

The preliminary approach of the two ships was controlled from the ground and satellites were within 100 yards of each other when Shatalov took over manual control.

Tass said the space station had four compartments for the crew and "provided for the implementation of a large series of experiments and investigations, as well as comfortable conditions for work and rest."

Procedural Logjam Broken

Vietnam Peace Conference Will Open This Saturday

PARIS (CP-Reuters) — Procedural obstacles to beginning the enlarged Vietnam peace talks have been overcome and a first session will be held Saturday, the United States announced today.

More than two months of haggling over the diplomatic geometry of the enlarged talks — who will sit where — came to an end when the Americans announced the terms of the settlement.

The American delegation announced at a news conference that the United States, North Vietnam, South Vietnam and the Viet Cong will sit down to bargain at a solid round table flanked at mid-points by two smaller rectangular tables.

There will be a distance of approximately 18 inches separating each of the rectangular tables from the circular table.

The compromise was designed to get around a conflict between the descriptions used by the parties to the talks.

Washington and Saigon call the talks two-sided while Hanoi and the Viet Cong insist they are four-sided, thus claiming independent status for the National Liberation Front, political arm of the Viet Cong.

Agreement was reached in dealings between the deputy head of the American delegation, Cyrus Vance, and his North Vietnamese counterpart, Col. Hau Van Lau.

Vance and Lau, with the agreement of their respective allies, also agreed that there would be no flags or nameplates inside the conference room and that the American-South Vietnamese side would speak first, an American spokesman said.

The first session will be at 10:30 a.m. (4:30 a.m. EST) Saturday and will be devoted exclusively to establishing the procedures that will govern the rest of the conference.

Russians Arrive Friday

OTTAWA (CP) — The Russian hockey team will arrive in Montreal Friday for their Canadian hockey tour, the Soviet news agency Novosti said here today.

The Russians first announced earlier this week they had cancelled their eight-game tour.

Vladimir Maklodin, a press attache at the Russian embassy here, was told the Moscow team would be leaving for Canada early Friday.

What Gives?

Nigeria Balks At Peace Talks

LONDON (CP) — Nigeria will refuse to hold unconditional peace talks with Biafra and will meet the "rebels" only to inform them to surrender, Chief Obafemi Awolowo said today.

Awolowo, Nigeria's representative at the now concluded Commonwealth prime ministers meeting, also said there will be no unconditional ceasefire and that unless there is a surrender, Nigeria will pursue the war until the "rebels" are beaten.

Prime Minister Trudeau, at a news conference Wednesday night, said that Nigeria was prepared to negotiate without conditions on ending the civil war and that "certain light and hope" had been brought into the situation.

Trudeau also said that he has instructed his officials to get in touch with Biafran representatives and that "some feelers" had been put out to him to act as mediator in the Nigeria-Biafra struggle.

The Canadian leader, now in Rome, said he hoped Nigeria-Biafra talks would take place in London.

Trudeau's remarks followed a private meeting among the 27 Commonwealth leaders, including Awolowo, which took place at Lancaster House, a former stately home used for government entertainment, just before noon Wednesday.

The meeting was called by Prime Minister Wilson in a fresh effort to bring an end to the Nigerian struggle. Reports following from that meeting suggested that a breakthrough had occurred in bringing the two sides together.

However, Awolowo said the Lancaster meeting was merely a place where he had a chance of explaining to the leaders the Nigerian position on the rebellion after he had refused to allow the Nigerian issue to be placed on the Commonwealth conference agenda.

Tradeau Pays Visit to Pope

VATICAN CITY (CP) — Pope Paul received Canadian Prime Minister Trudeau in private audience today and expressed confidence the English- and French-speaking communities of Canada would overcome their differences.

The 69-year-old bachelor prime minister and the pontiff conferred in French in the privacy of the Pope's library in the Apostolic Palace.

They discussed a wide range of problems, from Vietnam, to peace and European unity, and there was unconfirmed speculation that they had touched on the possibility of establishing diplomatic relations between Canada and the Vatican.

The meeting took place within two hours after Trudeau's arrival in Rome from London on a chartered Air Canada flight.

PSI Premiums Go Up 46 Per Cent in April

TORONTO (CP) — Physicians Services Inc. announced today it will increase its medical insurance premiums by 46 per cent in April.

In a letter to subscribers, Secretary Treasurer C. A. Bond said PSI's Blue Plan, which covers most of the 1,200,000 insured, is to be increased to $5.75 a month for single subscribers. Present rates are $3.90. Rates for subscribers with one dependent will increase to $13.75 from $9.40 and family rates will go up to $19.40 from $13.25.

The Blue Plan covers doctors' fees in hospitals, house calls and visits to doctors' offices.

The letter told subscribers that payments to doctors have been about $1,000,000 a month more than the firm's income for several months.

By March, PSI would have to dip into reserves which have become too low for comfort at the present schedule rate.

PSI said the situation arose because more people are using doctors' services more often and that new diagnostic and treatment methods cost more.

16 Sailors Are Found On Carrier

HONOLULU (Reuters) — The giant, nuclear-powered aircraft carrier Enterprise may be ordered back to mainland United States for repairs as the result of an explosion and fires which killed at least 25 crew members Tuesday, unofficial sources said today.

One sailor was still missing but 16 others feared lost were found alive after a muster aboard the ship, now lying in Pearl Harbor dockyard.

Admiral John Hyland, commander of the Pacific Fleet, said naval repair experts were conducting detailed examinations of the damage.

Hyland said the blast that triggered a series of fires aboard the Enterprise—the world's biggest warship—occurred beneath or close to a F-4 Phantom jet fighter perched on the stern of flight deck.

Peace Would Bring Slump

WASHINGTON (AP) — A cabinet-level report to President Johnson warns that the United States faces a possible recession when the Vietnam war ends, and urges that the government be ready with an action plan to stop it.

The report, sent to Congress today by the president, said the economy would be subjected to the same deflationary pressures that followed the Korean war.

While not predicting any date for an end to hostilities in Vietnam, the committee of top White House advisers based estimates on an assumption that the transition to peace could be essentially completed by July 1, 1971 — in other words, the start of the 1972 fiscal year.

City Approves Five Year Capital Budget of $12,000,000

City council at a special meeting yesterday approved without change a five year capital works budget totalling almost 12 million dollars which by 1973 would boost the Belleville's capital debt to more than 21 million dollars.

City manager J. R. Reynolds in submitting the budget said the five year program if carried out in its entirety, would boost the ratio of debenture debt to taxable assessment from the present 12.3 per cent to 18.3 per cent.

"The demand for improvements and services in the years ahead will strain the city's debt position," said the city manager.

He hoped, however, that continuation of industrial and commercial development would provide the necessary assessment to maintain the ratio of capital debt to taxable assessment at 20 per cent or less.

This, he said, reflected a "sound financial position" for the municipality.

The capital works budget, including an amount of $2,724,500 for 1969, will not be forwarded to the Ontario Municipal Board for approval.

Mr. Reynolds said that as result of previous talks with the OMB chairman, the city's works budget for this year will be approved.

In his capital works budget report — Mr. Reynolds said the estimated taxable assessment for 1969 is $112,000,000 which by 1973 it is felt will have increased to $125,500,000.

In the same period the city's debt will have increased from the present $13,074,213 to $23,082,500 but the increase in assessment will actually result in a decrease in the mill rate required to meet the annual debt.

By the end of this year the city's capital debt will have increased to $17,618,131 and will require a mill rate of 19 mills for annual debt retirement because of increased assessment this year will have decreased to 17 mills by the end of the five year period.

The big item in this year's capital works program is an amount of $1,815,000 required by the Public Utilities Commission for an addition to the water filtration plant.

Mr. Reynolds said the entire amount for this item would be charged in the 1969 capital works budget.

Sanitary sewers, including a proposed new sewer main up the bed of the Moira River to serve the Northeast industrial park area and Hillcrest will cost an estimated $610,000.

The city has a balance of $981,000 available in its 1968 capital works budget quota and application has been made to the OMB for approval of several projects, including the Dundas Street Moira River Bridge and Phase I of the Sidney Street Bridge under the 1968 quota.

Installation of storm sewers in the Hillcrest area costing $130,000 and the provision of $180,000 for the purchase of the Oliver property for use as industrial land will be provided in the 1969 current budget.

Capital works planned for 1970 will cost an estimated $1,140,000, 1971, $1,223,000; 1972, $2,365,000 and in 1973, $1,130,000.

Summing up the five year works budget Mayor Scott said all items were realistic and necessary with "no political pork barrelling."

Mayor Scott Forecasts Tax Increase of 3½ Mills

A 1969 tax increase of "at least" three and a half mills over last year's residential rate of 41.7 mills was forecast yesterday by Belleville Mayor J. Russell Scott.

The prediction was made as council approved the five year capital works program totaling nearly twelve million dollars which in 1969 alone will add 2.75 mills to the tax rate.

And no provision is made in the five year works budget for any school construction.

Alderman Enos David raised the school question, noting that any sizable tax increase for school requirements would create an intolerable situation for many residents.

Mayor Scott replied that the city this year is acting only as tax collection agents for the new school board with council having no responsibility in determining school money requirements.

He said he understood that school requirements could boost last year's school rate by up to 25 per cent.

"We will have to watch every item very carefully to keep the increase in three and a half mills," continued Mayor Scott.

He said this was especially important as fully one third of the city's ratepayers were on fixed incomes or on fixed pensions.

City manager J. R. Reynolds said he expected to have figures for the preparation of the 1969 current budget by the first of Feb.

He hoped the year's current budget would be ready for presentation to council by late March or early in April.

CJBQ Applies For Power Increase

Radio station CJBQ is hoping to strengthen dramatically its Quinte coverage.

The station has applied to the Canadian Radio - Television Commission to increase its power output from 1,000 to 10,000 watts, Frank Murray, Quinte Broadcasting Company manager announced today.

The big boost calls for a new transmitter site at Niles Corners near Hillier in Prince Edward County. Six 300-foot towers will replace the present transmitter operation on Highway 37 north of Mountain View.

The improved signal will provide complete coverage of all sections of Hastings and Prince Edward counties, said Mr. Murray.

Detailed application for the power boost is now in the hands of the commission and the Department of Transport.

It's expected a public hearing will be held shortly to consider the request, added Mr. Murray.

If approved, construction of the towers is expected to commence in late spring with the new broadcast facilities on the air by next winter.

The increase will not affect CJBQ's frequency which remains at 800.

Shriners Instal Officers

Members of the Belleville Shrine Club participated in the installation of officers last night at the Shrine Club. It was their monthly dinner meeting.

Elected president was Dick Sargent. Assistant to the president is J. E. MacDonald, chairman of the board, William Stewart and secretary treasurer, Hammy Doldge.

Elected as directors were H. G. Birkenshaw, H. McConnell, Harold Rankler, C. Caverly, G. Miller and H. West.

Bradford Envisions Quinte As Electronics Centre

The Quinte area could become a major electronics unit in Ontario industry, Loyalist College president J. K. Bradford said last night.

Mr. Bradford envisioned the region with the "potential of becoming the electronics centre of the province," in a speech to the Bay of Quinte Section, Institute of Electrical and Electronics Engineers at Sun Luck Gardens.

Loyalist would work to realize that potential, he said, providing "better-than-average staff and course structures in the specialized electrical and electronic fields."

The college also would happily consult with industry to keep its courses updated to industrial practices and needs.

"I'm encouraged by the interest and response that we have already had in my informal discussions with several representative industries," added Mr. Bradford.

Graduates unable to find work locally will seek it elsewhere in the province, he warned.

"From the glimpse I've caught of the future of this part of the province, however, I should prefer to have my students look toward a diversified vocational field right here at home," said Mr. Bradford.

Police Investigate Two Car Crash

PICTON (Staff) — OPP were called yesterday to investigate a two-car accident on old Highway 33, three miles west of Wellington.

Police said there were no injuries, but $250 damage was done to the car driven by Allen Lumley, of RR1, Hillier, and $300 damage to the car driven by Russel Forsyth, also of RR1, Hillier.

Police said the cars collided where the Hillier road meets old Highway 33. No charges have been laid.

New Fireman

Seven Try for Position

How high do you have to be to qualify for a job that starts at $5,800?

Householders living near the West Moira Street fireball could have easily answered the question yesterday as the department sought a new recruit.

Not that anyone was reeling among the reels.

Quite the contrary. In fact, admission to the ranks of city firefighters imposes the most stringent requirements.

And thereby lies the reason the applicants got so high — as far up as 60 feet.

A fireman with a fear of heights has as much hope of a career survival as a cat burglar with corns.

Yesterday's applicants were put to the full rigors of a sky test strapped to an aerial ladder and swung 60 feet above the fireball.

Their driving abilities in action also were examined during test runs of one of the department's heaviest pumpers.

Exactly seven applicants were called by fire chief Ted Poste to take the trials. They had been screened from an original 19 who applied for the position and were first given a written IQ test.

The rigorous selection program is necessitated by modern firefighting technology, says Chief Poste.

As a reward, the lucky survivor starts in a job that pays $5,800 to a probationary fireman — plus fringe benefits.

Communication Is the Key To Controlling Emergencies

Communication is the key to controlling community emergencies.

Communication also means public information.

But just how much should the public be told.

Everything, asserts Quinte Emergency Measures Organization director Angus Duffy.

And it was a view he impressed on a meeting at EMO headquarters yesterday that drew police, communications services and local government representatives from around the district.

"If you inform the people they'll respond," says Mr. Duffy. "But if you try to keep them in the dark they'll try to find out for themselves."

The result can only compound emergency problems — with curious crowds adding to the illitial confusion of the situation.

Basic object of yesterday's meeting that crowded the EMO offices was to discuss Mr. Duffy's plan for the Quinte area in the event of a natural emergency.

Its painstaking coverage of detail had a graphic inspiration: It followed the pattern natural gas pipeline explosion on North Sidney Street. Nobody was seriously injured since the incident occurred on a rural sideroad.

But it did activate thinking in community disasters, says the EMO official.

Among his observations following the pipeline explosion, said Mr. Duffy, was the way public curiosity was stimulated.

Police, fire, radio station and newspaper switchboards were jammed by urgent calls.

"It tied up communications to some extent for the people who had a real job to do," he said.

(Luck was with the authorities in the pipeline emergency. A police cruiser was nearby at the time and its officers were on the scene in minutes, able to establish control and instantly feedback a situation assessment. However, there were other communication problems. Mr. Duffy, for instance, says he couldn't satisfactorily convince a police officer of his identity and had to find his own way around the security cordon).

Quick communication to news media — notably local radio station — not only informs, but advises the public on how it should respond to situations.

More traditional official attitudes have been criticized about public information, says Mr. Duffy.

Police officers "generally" oppose public information action until they have controlled the emergency situation.

Aim of the new plan is to "reduce hardship and loss of life and property" in an emergency.

It stresses: "Location of airfields in the area and the history of river flooding in Belleville, along with other potential causes of disaster indicates the necessity of planning for natural disasters."

Evasive Trudeau Answers Without An Answer

By RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA — Nobody — including himself — is the national press corps' laments former socialist parliamentarian, Gerald Fisher, now a television network personality, yet has managed to get scooped on every Prime Minister Trudeau any really difficult questions.

On it, introspective, the 146-odd press, radio and TV types have steeled themselves to contrapt him on subjects the prime minister might consider prickly, they, too readily, allow the questions to be fobbed off.

Considering how basic, even urgent many of the questions answers are — defence, taxation, language rights, national unity, inflation, even the government's own financial management — there is no shortage of questions that require asking and answering.

A few have been asked — laconically with infinite diplomacy, sometimes even apologetically — but master of the art of dialogue that he is, the quick-witted prime minister skilfully has evaded the direct reply.

With exquisite professionalism he employs many devices to defuse the potentially explosive question.

The techniques are entertainingly varied.

The prime minister plays the press conference and TV "show" by the rules the public relations organs he has made of them.

He can wave off a question.

Or simply shrug and make a move.

If he senses it may be embarrassing to be too obvious in evading the issue, he can come up with what Douglas Fisher calls his "little boy look" — which seems to be so charmingly disarming that nobody has the heart to push it.

Or, as he has been doing more and more, he can philosophize endlessly.

Perhaps, best of all, he can employ the put-down, often devastatingly.

Like he did with the British press when asked to explain what he planned for his initial meeting with Prime Minister Harold Wilson. He gave a straight-faced "lawn-bowling."

The prime minister — any prime minister — being the power centre he is — comes armed with a built-in immunity against the kinds of difficult or politically dangerous questions.

Perhaps somebody in this or some other press, radio - TV corps might get to the prime minister with a hard question that compels a hard answer. But it won't likely be soon.

He has held perhaps a half-dozen full-dress press conferences and made TV appearances, and in all the 8 months he has been the nation's leading news-maker, he has been asked only one really tough question.

It was asked by Clifford Cowan, Ottawa bureau chief of a chain of 11 prairie and west coast radio stations.

"Do you feel that a man who refused to serve his country in war," reporter Cowan asked Prime Trudeau, "should expect to lead its people?"

There was an awkward silence, finally broken by Mr. Trudeau.

"Who said that?" he asked, startled.

"The Can dian Press said during like that," Cowan said blue.

There was another long, painful silence, and then came the reply:

"Well . . . it all depends on the standards set . . . I broke no laws . . . I refused no calling . . . but I didn't rush to the forefront either . . . each must serve in the way he sees best."

And there the exchange ended.

Trudeau's answer," says Cliff Cowan, "barred the door to further questions, and nobody was about to help me push it open.

For his daring in asking such a pointedly embarrassing question, Cowan later was subjected to quite some criticism from a minority of other newsmen. They were convinced when Cowan limited it was "a fair and important question that had to be asked, and should have been answered more fully."

Each prime minister has his own question and answer technique.

Lester Pearson fended off embarrassing questions with a grating "Oh, for goodness sake."

John Diefenbaker answered with answers in a painfully personal way. Mackenzie King in his last days to answer, "Ask Mitch," by far, is the best performer. Or maybe he's simply so much smarter than the rest.

He is just so skilful nobody has come even close to penetrating his defences.

And so, far too many hard questions still get soft answers.

P.M. In Rome

So Prime Minister Trudeau has managed to fit in his trip to Rome, for an audience with Pope Paul and talks with Italian President Saragat and Prime Minister Mariano Rumor.

In doing so the dilemma whether to take the chartered DC-8 jetliner or a Government Yukon transport, with the accompanying Commonwealth conference press party as passengers, has been solved.

The solution? Why, Rome and back in a day of course. The eternal city is only a little more than two hours away by jet from London. Mr. Trudeau is in Rome right now, having left London at 7.45 a.m. this morning. And he leaves Italy at midnight to-night for the non-stop flight back to Canada.

The taxpayer, naturally, will pay for this extra flight time, but it will not be as costly as it would be had the decision been made to stay overnight in Rome, with all the attendant cost in airport and other expenses.

Deseronto's Plans

In Deseronto the year ahead looks promising in most essentials except housing, according to Mayor James Sharpe.

In his inaugural address to council the other day, Mr. Sharpe drew attention to the new quarter of a million dollar school extension and to the prospects for adequate sewer and disposal treatment, as well as a water system and purification plant.

Housing remains a blank spot — and because of this lack, industrial prospects are poor. For this reason Mayor Sharpe has urged that the community concentrate on house construction first and industry afterwards. At the moment the mayor says it is virtually impossible to rent or buy a good home in Deseronto.

This is a sorry situation for any community. Deseronto may be off the beaten track, but that is no reason to sit back and watch the world pass by. There is always room for initiative and Mayor Sharpe rightly points the finger at the industrial and publicity committee. He wants to see street improvements, shacks unfit for habitation demolished, and properties cleaned up.

Like many a community, Belleville included, Deseronto is in search of a new image. Downtown redevelopment is something for the future in Belleville and Deseronto also needs to move with the times. The new bridge to Prince Edward is bound to stimulate tourism, and if the community can make headway in house construction and industry as well so much the better.

Cosmic Chit-Chat

The Russians are a strange people the way they incline to sickly sentimentalism and patriotism.

That they are patriotic no one doubts, but there is something phony about the rhetoric they inject into their space jaunts.

Like his fellow Soviet and American space fliers, Lt.-Col. Vladimir Shatalov is a brave man and true, but he did sound a little silly when he beamed and sundry farewell with these words: "Goodbye, dear friends, and meet again soon on mother earth . . . I will exert all my force to carry out the tasks assigned to me."

Imagine the likes of U.S. astronaut Walter Schirra coming out with such a candy floss statement as that. Houston ground control, if not struck completely dumb by one of its men delivering himself of such wishwash would likely say, "Aw shucks, come off it . . ."

Still, if the Russians are not the taciturn, laconic type, they are learning something about U.S.-style publicity. While they do not give blow-by-blow, beginning-to-end television coverage, they have, on this occasion, released pictures of the blast-off and of Col. Shatalov in orbit in his space capsule. That is more than they have done in the past and it could mean that they achieved parity with the world-wide publicity, have stung them into giving similar coverage to Soviet space flights.

Swedish Action

Sweden, for reasons best known to itself, has decided to accord diplomatic recognition to North Vietnam and Cuba. Sweden has played a strictly neutral role in world affairs for many years, but its traditions and standard of living are wholly western-orientated. Why it should suddenly get all excited about two communist countries with virtually no friends outside the communist world is difficult to understand.

Music Has Charms For German Medical Men

German Features

Music is something more than a hobby for a group of 40 classically swinging pediatricians from west Germany; it's practically a second profession.

The 40 get together for practice nearly every evening they can get away from their practices. They have long since organized as a chamber orchestra. And their music has already begun earning them plaudits outside the country.

Only recently they returned from a highly successful Bach and Vivaldi tour with concerts in Jamaica, Mexico and the U.S. They have also played in numerous European cities and in India and Japan.

As evidence of just how serious the doctors take their music: they pay for their trips and fares on the concert tours and use their vacations to practise.

The orchestra is headed by Prof. Hermann-Frans Mai, who is director of the University of Muenster's Pediatrics Clinic.

Mini-books Are Popular

German Features

No larger than a fly, the mini-books being published by famous Gutenberg museum in Mainz might seem an ideal way to build a compact library of the world's great works. But one thing may prove distressing: reading the volumes requires a magnifying glass.

Actually, the mini-books are aimed more at collectors and curiosity seekers than anyone else. The Mainz museum has already come out with four: "Words of Love," the "Lord's prayer," "Poems of Freedom" and the "Olympic Oath." The size of each is about ¼ in. by ¼ in. They're generally sold in plexiglass jackets with a magnifying glass top to ease the reading chore.

But believe it or not, the Gutenberg Museum volumes are not the world's smallest. That claim is reserved for the Japanese who have published a volume of poems in their language and English in a book about half the size of the Germans. Reading the Japanese text requires a microscope.

There are a number of other mini-books in the world for anyone specializing in the field. In Czechoslovakia, a full volume of the Koran about one by one-and-a-half inches is being marketed. A publishing house in Leipzig, East Germany, has published a 690-page edition of "Faust" in a format the size of a thumb nail. And Hungary even has a mini-number with reproductions of famous paintings.

Chores . . TV . . and the Flu

Ottawa Journal

The flu, whether from Hong Kong or the man in the next office, has its advantages. This writer, compelled to toll drizzly with a queasy stomach for four days at home, caught up with cleaning out the cupboard as well as his top drawer. He also collected 10 books from his relatives for the Superfluity Shop — an act of dubious charity — and made inroads on all his files of yesteryear as though acknowledging them was to end them.

Then there was television. A four-day exposure to television produces two very strong convictions. One of it is much more juvenile, inane, yacky, cheap and time-wasting (ha ha ever one had imagined. And some of it is so enjoyable, exciting, inspiring, educating, artistic and entertaining, that it can indeed compete with or surpass the best of theatre, opera or concert. Alas, for every hour of this first class programming there are about two days of junk.

Still, if a person will scan his playbill each day and know which hour to have the thing on every two days — it's a joy. There was Tyrone Guthrie, via BBC, reminiscing of his life in Ireland. Bernard Lovell matching wits and views against science and the BBC; again, flying a helicopter all over England and giving us the country's history in a poetry composed of music, pictures and words — and, earlier, Hal Holbbrook doing Mark Twain.

Little Girl Lost

Richard Needham in the Globe and Mail

It happened in Calgary some 30 years ago. I was rushing along the street to catch a train when a little girl walking in front of me dropped the bottle of milk she'd been sent to buy. The bottle broke, the milk spilled, the child started to weep. I went past and got my train. I have never forgotten that incident, never forgiven myself for my failure to stop and give the kid the price of another bottle. I should have known then what I know now: that there's always another train.

Good Work By Police

Ottawa Journal

The most common and therefore most unthinking comment about police anywhere is how they nag us about speeding and parking. This past week in Ottawa has seen the other side of a policeman's life. First there was the dangerous mission related to bombs in post boxes. Then there was being confronted with the ghastly and utterly incredible double murder on the Carp highway. In the former they and the military acted dexterously, in the latter with alertness and imagination. The communities is impressed and grateful.

"Remarkable sort of fellow — made quite an impression."

TODAY IN HISTORY

1858—Lester Pearson was elected national leader of the Liberal party, succeeding Louis St. Laurent.

Second World War

Twenty-five years ago today — in 1944—officials disclosed that Gen. Eisenhower had arrived in Britain to direct the invasion following a conference with Prime Minister Churchill and President Roosevelt. Allied navy patrol planes sank a 10,000-ton Japanese vessel and set two others afire out of a six-ship convoy caught off the Japanese base at Kaviang.

Operatic Therapy

German Features

One of the modern day maxims at confinement facilities is to work for rehabilitation of law breakers. And in west Germany the precept is being put to work in increasingly experimental many of them highly unusual. Most are aimed at helping young offenders.

At Luebeck's prison, for example, five young women between the ages of 18 and 23 serving time for various crimes were recently taken to an opera performance of two of Puccini's "La Boheme".

At an institution in Hanover — one of west Germany's many up to date — prisoners are allowed to attend courses to acquire the necessary knowledge to pass their driver's licence test.

In West Berlin, Tegel Prison was recently thrown open to journalists for an original type press conference. Inmates there help prisoners as well as inform the public about the ways and accidents of prison life. The reporters conversed with their cellmates, ate the same food and liberally sampled the jail-free atmosphere among prisoners as well as getting an inside view of prison life.

In the years ahead, further rehabilitation programs are planned.

Relative Values

Richard Needham in the Globe and Mail

It is an Ottawa girl of 17 who waited on tables in a steak house which attracted pleasant family people. When the steak house got its liquor license, it could no longer work there, being under 21. She took a job in another restaurant, where the male customers stared down the front of her dress, pinched her bottom and made other remarks in her presence. But it didn't have a licence, and so she was saved from the horrors of the Demon Rum. Praise the Lord!

Ontario Housing Starts

The Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation reports that urban starts in Ontario totalled 6,900 in November, 1968. This was 46 per cent more than in November 1967 but 2 per cent below the level of the previous month. The annual rate reached 81,900, compared with 61,000 in November 1967 and 73,400 in October 1968. Starts in Metropolitan Toronto were 3,344, 72 per cent above those of November 1967. When compared with October 1968, however, a 19 per cent fall occurred.

In the eleven months January to November, cumulative urban starts in Ontario rose by 12 per cent from 58,216 in 1967 to 65,387 in 1968. This rate of growth was exceeded in all other Regions. Ontario's share of total Canadian urb-n starts fell, ling from 46 per cent to 43 per cent. Starts in Metropolitan Toronto, however, rose by 20 per cent of the national total, were 34.7 per cent more than in the corresponding period of 19-67. However, this rate of growth was less than that which occurred in the other four major Canadian metropolitan areas (Montreal, Vancouver, Winnipeg and Ottawa-Hull).

Metrop'itan Toronto accounted for 54 per cent of Ontario's urban starts in the first eleven months of 1968. It was followed by Hamilton and Ottawa (7 per cent each), then London and Kitchener (5 per cent each). The only other areas with 1 per cent or more of the Regional total were Brampton (3 per cent), Windsor and St. Catharines (2 per cent each), Oshawa, Barrie, Sudbury and Kingston (1 per cent each). Compared with the previous year, the previous year, the areas with the largest numerical increases were Toronto (3,911), Brampton (1,305), Oshawa (1,152) and London (771). These were followed by Kitchener (363) and Kingston (260).

Other centres with an increase of 100 or more units were Peterborough, Guelph, Thorold, Belleville, Windsor, Port William, Port Arthur and Simcoe. Starts fell by 100 units or more in 11 places in Hamilton (-1,000), Niagara Falls (over 200), Sault Ste. Marie, Sarnia, and Guelph (over 136 each), and St. Catharines and Welland (over 100 each). In percentage terms, the greatest increases occurred in Aurora, Kenora and Simcoe and the greatest decreases in Midland, Timmins, Sault Ste. Marie and Owen Sound.

Mrs. Russell Scott Heads Campaign

Mrs. Russell Scott will lead this year's March of Dimes in the Belleville area.

The wife of Belleville's mayor today was named Chief Marching Mother for the fund campaign ending Feb. 3.

No fund goal has been announced, but Mrs. Scott is hopeful the 1969 campaign will exceed last year's $5,800.

The March of Dimes launches its appeal while its role — rehabilitation of disabled adults — is taking new directions.

Government now has taken over a casework services of the parent Rehabilitation Foundation for the Disabled, freeing the Foundation for more personal emphasis in its work.

The takeover makes it possible for the organization to devote more effort in seeking employment for handicapped persons able to work.

"And this is our main interest," emphasized Mrs. Scott. "There's no better way to feel you're part of the community than to be able to work and be paid for it."

Self-sufficiency is the objective in Foundation workshops where the disabled are taught the skills that help them find employment.

March of Dimes funds also help supply the handicapped with various aids — crutches, wheelchairs, special lifts.

There are incidental benefits to the community in total rehabilitation, said Mrs. Scott.

The disabled who go to work are glad to come off the welfare rolls and the money they earn becomes new spending power in the community.

This year, the March of Dimes is campaigning under a new symbol.

The traditional red maple leaf which has symbolized the organization since 1951 has been replaced by a green fir tree with one branch missing.

The campaign slogan is "The Ability Fund — March of Dimes."

"It's indicative of the fact that, although the people we're concerned with have a disability they still have plenty of abilities left," said Mrs. Scott.

The Belleville March of Dimes drive runs through January, climaxed with the familiar one-hour blitz Feb. 3.

General campaign chairman is Mrs. Vera Morphy. Directors are Fred Deacon, Mrs. Joan Bennett, Dr. Ross Burtt, Mrs. Phyllis Hume, Roland Belanger and Dave Sovereign.

The lectures were arranged by the Belleville branch of the Canadian Mental Health Association in co-operation with police officials.

Group Discusses County Planning

Revived interest in planning on a county-wide basis was evidenced by a meeting on the subject in Madoc Tuesday.

About 60 representatives from all the municipalities in Hastings County attended a panel discussion in Madoc's Legion Hall. Purpose of the gathering was to inform the township representatives of the aims and organization of a county-wide planning body.

County clerk Carl Bateman moderated the discussion led by a panel composed of E. A. Gomme, head of the planning branch of the Ontario Department of Municipal Affairs Bert Kenny, director of Belleville and Suburban Planning Board and Horace Casey, reeve of Thurlow.

"No opposition to county-wide planning was expressed at the meeting," Mr. Bateman reported. "There seemed to be agreement on the need for area planning but how it can be put into effect in as large a county as Hastings is the big question."

The idea was proposed some years ago, but no further action was taken on the matter.

Now, Mr. Bateman says, greater interest in planning is being expressed throughout the county and it is likely more meetings will be field in the future to discuss the issue.

Committees Appointed At Inaugural Meeting Of Campbellford Council

CAMPBELLFORD — Campbellford Municipal Court held its inaugural meeting with the following standing committees appointed: finance, Reeve Locke; road and bridge, Councillor Newman; Police Deputy, Reeve Dunk; property, Councillor Machesney; fire water and light, Councillor Murray; welfare, Councillor Sharp; industrial, Councillor Carter; legal, Councillor Westlake. Each committee has also two other members of council to assist the aforementioned chairmen.

The appointment of members to various boards follows: L.O.D.A., Councillor Westlake; Memorial Hospital, Mayor Tanner, recreation committee, Councillors Machesney and Carter; Community Centre board, Mayor Tanner, Deputy Reeve Dunk, and J. C. Torrance; Local Court of Revision to be named by the Mayor.

The striking committee appointed by Mayor Tanner included Reeve Locke, Deputy Reeve Dunk and Councillor Murray.

Councillor Machesney questioned the appointment to the Community Centre board and also the Memorial Hospital appointment and felt the appointments should have been by open meeting of the Council rather than as appeared to him "cut and dried."

A representative of Ontario Housing addressed Council re the building of tee units for Senior Citizens on land bordered by Front St. and Beaver Hall Rd. Ontario Housing Corporation asked that lots be serviced by the corporation before it would let tenders for building. Councillor Newman objected to the corporation supplying services as rents are fixed at $25. per month and felt outlay was too expensive for income.

Ontario Housing Corporation agreed to purchase the lots for prevailing price of serviced lots in the corporation at this particular site.

In relation to another site chosen for 16 family units it was decided to get engineering estimates as to services costs and bring a report of available sites at the next meeting.

Councillor Newman and Reeve Locke were asked to attend a meeting in Cobourg on Jan. 14 which will be addressed by municipal planning consultants. In view of the fact that Regional government is anticipated in the next couple of years, Council members felt the matter of planning and zoning would be better under regional direction rather than special planning for the town of Campbellford at this time.

A resolution from Brighton Municipal Council asking that steps be taken to protect the bee industry from molestation by bears was received and filed.

Mrs. Vera Newman was appointed to the Campbellford Library Board.

Appreciation was received from Perry Wilks, secretary of Boy Scout group of Campbellford for the building of a foot path to insure a safe thoroughfare for Cubs and Scouts to their new building.

A complaint was received from Dr. Charlotte Horner of the County Board of Health re condition of the town dump. Pest control of rats has already been initiated and will continue on a monthly basis. The matter of the condition of the dump will be taken care of by the newly appointed property committee under Councillor Machesney.

The school property on Bridge St. was formally deeded to the corporation on condition that the town assume any outstanding debentures on any current amount claimed by the Department of Education. The building is to be left available for school use if necessary for five years and after that to become a park and playground.

As the administration of justice is now under the Department of Public Works, the Department asked that one rental agreement be made for two places to hold court, one place being the council chambers and the other the Masonic Temple which jurisdiction comes under the Masonic board of governors. Mayor Tanner suggested the Civic Arena but Chief of Police S. Baird said acoustics at the arena were not good enough. The matter was left to the next meeting for decision.

Councillor Carter will be authorized as representative to vote in the Lower Trent Region Conservation Authority in place of elected representative former Councillor D. Wilson who is away if Conservation Authority is agreeable.

Prepayment of taxes was agreed on with the rebate being 5 per cent of the total amount of taxes.

Constable James L. Dean of the Campbellford police department who has been on the required six months' probation has now been promoted to the permanent staff, retroactive to Nov. 18.

Golden Gates Industries which anticipated coming to Campbellford a couple of years ago were returned their deposit of $800 as their plans have now changed.

Councillor Newman reported cost of snow removal for ten days was well over $2,000.

Delegates to the Good Roads conference in Toronto Feb. 24, 25, 26 are the Road Commission, Councillors Newman Carter and Sharp.

Deputy Reeve Dunk who has been a counties appointee on the C.A.S. asked that 'free use be given of the council chambers to the county C.A.S. for one day a week.

In anticipation of regional government and changes in ambulance services which will come under the Department of Health it was decided to forward a letter to Campbellford Memorial Hospital Board requesting that they establish an ambulance service.

PM Calls English-language Press Behavior 'Pretty Crummy'

LONDON (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau Wednesday night accused the English-language press of "perfectly disgusting" and "pretty crummy" behavior in reporting his social activities in London.

This was not the case with the French-language press, which Trudeau congratulated for rarely meddling in his private life.

He told a news conference he objected to the English-language press pestering and annoying the people he had been seen with socially in public. He called such interference "pretty poor form."

Trudeau granted he is a public figure, to be photographed and followed, but he insisted his private life is not "public property."

In unemotional tones, he told the gathering:

"I know some of you have set yourselves up as guardians of public morality, but I think this is perhaps a very dangerous precedent, because if it means you are entitled to pry into my private affairs, I do not see why I would not be able to pry into yours.

"After all, you have some responsibility to the public, too. You are writing for the information of the public and you claim you have some role to play in the orientation of public affairs.

"Therefore, perhaps we had better have files on all of you, and perhaps it would be useful if the police could go and question some of the women you have been seen with. . . ."

Trudeau said the French-language press has been "very proper."

"I can hardly say as much for the English-language press, both here in England and in Canada. I think it has behaved in a perfectly disgusting manner and that it has been doing so for some months now by embarrassing people with whom I am seen in public."

Trudeau did not say so but made it clear he was talking about press interviews with Eva Rittinghausen, a 25-year-old divorcee he took to lunch Jan. 4, the day of his arrival here for the Commonwealth conference.

Trudeau said English actress Jennifer Hales had to move away from her flat for a few days after he dated her Jan. 6.

How to Buy A Home

Once you have decided to buy a home and know your price range, you will want to give attention to finding a house.

Of the three major areas — urban, suburban or rural — you will probably look to urban or suburban districts because of the conveniences offered. Which of the three major areas you choose will be determined by your preference for living conditions, desire for convenient facilities, and the amount you can spend.

Many areas consist of families with similar characteristics such as income, age and interests. In choosing a location select an area where most of the families have characteristics which are in common with your family. To be in an incongenial neighborhood can only lead to frustration and dissatisfaction.

When trying to find a home where should you begin? A common method is to read the classified advertisements in your local newspaper. It has been estimated that about 15 percent of the total houses available for sale are advertised in this manner.

Most people eventually turn to a real estate agent. A reliable, knowledgeable, real estate agent can be of invaluable assistance. For a real estate agent to be termed a "realtor" he must be a member of a real estate board. This real estate board must, in turn, be a member of the Canadian Association of Real Estate Boards. Not all real estate agents are realtors. Be sure yours is!

In most cities, there is a multiple listing service (MLS). This means that any house that is listed by one member of the MLS is also available to any other real estate agent who is also a member of the MLS. For this reason, most real estate agents have many houses at their disposal which they can show you.

Also, for this reason, there is no great advantage to contacting several real estate offices. It is possible they will show you almost the same houses. But it is important that you choose an agent that you can trust, who is interested in helping you and who is prepared to give you the service you deserve.

After you have selected a number of houses you like, do closer investigation. Check the cost of taxes and transportation, in particular the cost of commuting to work. Also check for objectionable factors such as excess noise, smoke or unpleasant odors.

Find out as much as you can about the area. Talk to your potential neighbors, visit the schools and stores, and drive around the surrounding areas. Watch for the condition of the houses and streets; the amount of traffic and the type of drainage. Spend time looking and comparing until you find a home that you like.

After finding a house that appeals to you, visit the municipal office for that area and find out exactly what the zoning laws are on the property and surrounding district. Investigate the future planned development for the area. Is the future development likely to increase the value of the property?

Of course, you cannot attempt to do this extensive investigation for every home in which you are interested. But after you have narrowed the search to two or three houses, careful examination is of primary importance. Remember you will live in it for a long time.

After you have decided to buy a particular house, contact your lawyer. Be certain he reads all contracts including your written offer. He is familiar with these transactions and can not only keep you out of trouble, but also give you good advice.

The time you spend in looking and comparing will insure more value for the dollars you invest in a house.

CBC Men Said Living In Poverty

OTTAWA (CP) — More than 1,000 CBC employees are living below the "poverty line" set by the Economic Council of Canada, the Association of Radio and Television Employees of Canada maintained today.

The association said in a brief to a federal conciliation board that 48 per cent of the 2,215 CBC announcers, office workers and soldiers it represents earn less than $4,842 a year.

The association is seeking a 20-per-cent wage increase for the CBC employees and a minimum increase of $1,000. The salary range for its membership now is $2,704-$10,938.

The Economic Council of Canada, a government-established body, had shown real concern about poverty in its annual report last September, the brief said.

"On the other hand, we have another agency of government, the CBC, paying rates which will continue to keep its employees below this poverty line."

The Economic Council said in its annual review that one non-farm Canadian family in five lives in poverty. It set as a "conservative" poverty line an income of less than $4,000 for a family of five.

Pelletier Declines To Order Probe

OTTAWA (CP)—Political fallout from the Judy LaMarsh memoirs descended on the Commons Wednesday as Conservatives called for investigation of statements about the CBC made by the former minister.

Led by Opposition Leader Robert Stanfield, the Conservatives pressed the government to look into statements about "kickbacks" received by CBC employees and about separatist control of Radio-Canada.

Miss LaMarsh's successor as state secretary, Gerard Pelletier, said investigations on the kickbacks will be made "if the accusations are made definite enough so they can be investigated."

But he added outside the House that he has the impression Miss LaMarsh was just reporting rumors of kickbacks.

"Between rumors and precise accusation, there is a vast difference."

Mr. Pelletier also made clear, both inside the outside the House, that he puts little stock in charges of separatist control of Radio-Canada, the French-language division of the publicly-owned CBC.

He told the House that in his opinion the suggestion that one section of the corporation is completely controlled by persons of certain political conviction is completely unfounded and would be difficult to prove.

He also quoted a statement made by Miss LaMarsh, when she reported to Parliament for the CBC, that political convictions of those hired by the corporation were not checked unless subversive or legal questions were involved.

Mr. Pelletier said he had not read the book, called Judy LaMarsh: Memoirs of a Bird in a Gilded Cage. But he had been assured that if complaints were made they would be investigated.

Airport Opposed At Whitby

WHITBY, Ont. (CP) — A suggestion by the town council offering this Toronto-area town as a site for a second international airport was opposed Wednesday night by most of 200 people attending a council meeting.

The meeting was called to hear the council outline its reasons for offering a site for the airport in this town of about 17,500 people.

One resident wondered how council would control problems arising from airport operation when it has trouble enforcing a dog control bylaw.

Strong Regimes Sought

OTTAWA (CP) — Primacy of the federal government versus constitutional equality of federal and provincial governments sparked conflict in the secret debate in the last year among representatives of the two governmental levels.

However, there was little debate on propositions that a new Canadian constitution provide for a strong central government representing and speaking for all Canadians.

Nor was there much talk about the idea that the constitution provide for strong provincial governments capable of dynamic development of human and natural potential within their jurisdictions.

These points emerge from reports of the continuing committee of officials established by the last constitutional conference of premiers and the prime minister.

The reports are to go before next month's resumption of the constitutional conference.

On the subjects of strong provincial and strong federal governments, the report notes that Canada seems to be faced with "a rather unique problem of federalism—the definition of a federal structure to accommodate a strong central government and strong provincial governments at the same time."

But the primacy-equality propositions were a different matter altogether in the as-yet-incomplete debates among officials. The reports says they do not seem to be compatible provisions and are subject to wide interpretation.

Founder of Unitarian Services

By LINDA GELDART

Editor's Note: This is the second article in a short series dealing with the Unitarian Service Committee. The following item deals in particular with the biography of its founder Dr. Lotta Hitschmanova, an executive director of her many travels throughout the world.

A roving ambassador, a practical humanitarian, an innovator, but most of all a "doer."

This is a thumbnail description of Dr. Lotta Hitschmanova, founder and executive director of the Unitarian Service Committee of Canada.

She came to Canada in 1945, as a refugee from Czechoslovakia, to found one of the best-known international aid organizations.

She began organizing the new USC of Canada to alleviate the plight of children in war-torn Europe. This problem concerned many Canadians, and the USC became the obvious channel through which to send food, clothing and medical aid.

Dr. Hitschmanova was well prepared for this job of helping others: in her own country, she had experienced at first hand the conditions war brings.

Her dream of an organization that would reach out and help, grew and expanded into a million dollar agency. She deals on the plane of high finance — keeping the agency's running costs to less than 10 per cent.

This is not a simple task to budget for such an organization. Keeping in mind the fact that every cent must be raised by public donation, at the same time realizing that thousands depend of these efforts.

Dr. Hitschmanova combines a passionate concern for his work, attention to detail, and almost infinite capacity for work. A good example is the four months she spends every year travelling across Canada, speaking for funds.

A further investigation of her near-impossible itinerary consists of a further four months spent inspecting USC projects in the Far East, the Middle East and Europe.

In addition to all this travel, she confers with her local USC staff, constantly checking accounts, evaluating programs, and visiting the children and families helped by Canadian dollars.

The balance of the year belongs to her Ottawa office, where she copes with an enormous amount of administrative details, from approving thousands of USC television announcements, writing speeches and answering thousand of letters.

Dr. Hitschmanova was born in Prague and graduated from the University of Prague and the Sorbonne in Paris, from which she received a Doctorate in Philosophy and diplomas in social science and journalism.

She worked in Ottawa as a postal censor, and spent some time with the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation agency in Washington.

On behalf of Canada and the Unitarian Service Committee, Dr. Hitschmanova has been honored on many occasions by countries receiving USC aid.

The Government of France made her a Chevalier of the Order of Public Health and awarded her the French medal of gratitude. The International Hellenic Red Cross Societies gave her the highest decorations and from Korea, came the country's most coveted award for humanitarian achievement: the Public Service Medal presented by President Park Chung Hee, personally.

The International Red Cross Day in May, 1967, she was the first to receive the Athena Messalora Gold Medal in Athens.

Dr. Hitschmanova is again a messenger on her annual autumn and winter fun raising tours across Canada, to speak to Canadians at meetings, in schools and churches, on radio and TV.

To avoid descending into an impersonal "rubber stamp" organization," as is often the case, executive director, Dr. Hitschmanova travels thousands of miles as a relief worker.

In her travels, she pinpoints the most urgent needs in each area, and decides how best they can be achieved. Her survey takes a great deal of time, thought and effort, but is the only effective means of keeping the USC's valued personal contact.

On her return to Canada, Dr. Hitschmanova submits her ideas for the next year's aid program to the USC Board of Directors. This year's program included a variety of feeding projects and a pioneering Home Placement Scheme for Korean teenage orphans in the agency's care.

Travelling abroad, she represents Canada, transmitting the message of Canadian goodwill and generosity to the thousands she meets. There is no doubt the USC has become, in the words of some, "Canada's best ambassador at the grass roots level."

Dr. Lotta Hitschmanova, executive director of the Unitarian Service Committee of Canada presents a layette to a Palestine refugee mother at the UNWRA clinic in Lebanon. While there she also met Amal Habib, a refugee nurse who is taking a post graduate course in public health with a scholarship from the Unitarian Service Committee.

Dr. R. T. Potter to Speak At WHA Annual Meet

Judy Gives Advice To Women

TORONTO (CP) — Judy LaMarsh, former Liberal cabinet minister, has some advice for women planning to enter politics — stay out if you want to remain ladies.

Miss LaMarsh, whose controversial book on Canadian politics went on sale this week, told the Women's Canadian Club of Toronto Wednesday that politics coarsens people.

"If you want to be a lady, stay out of politics," she said.

Asked if she is not a shame to all women because she had written her book, Judy LaMarsh: Memoirs of a Bird in a Gilded Cage, Miss LaMarsh replied:

"Maybe I am, but not because I wrote a book. I resent this lumping together of all women — that if one woman does something, all women suffer."

Eldorado Couple Wed 50 Years

Mr. and Mrs. Oscar Pigden of Eldorado were "At Home" recently to a large number of friends and relatives on the occasion of their 50th wedding anniversary.

The "bride" of 50 years is the daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Albert Rose, formerly of Millbridge and the "bridegroom" the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Herbert Pigden who resided in Madoc Township. At the marriage ceremony performed at the home of the bride in 1918, by the late Rev. A. Thompson, Mrs. Charles Pigden, sister of the bride and the late Charles Pigden, brother of the bridegroom were attendants.

The couple's immediate family including Helen of Deloro, Hilda of Peterborough, Thelma of Madoc, R.R. 1, Eugene of Madoc and Donald of Foxboro were all present for this happy event and presented their parents with a dinette suite.

During the day approximately 125 guests who called to express congratulations were received by Mr. and Mrs. Eugene Pigden.

Refreshments were served from an attractive tea table centred with a tiered anniversary cake flanked with candles and floral arrangements by Mrs. Harold Comerford and Mrs. Gerald Morrison. Presiding at the tea table were Mrs. Bruce Robinson, Mrs. Francis Tobin and Mrs. Harry Cotton.

A number of cards, telegrams, gifts and flowers was received from family and friends. A scroll was received from the Province of Ontario and telegrams of congratulations from various government officials.

Sweet 'n' Sour Chicken Especially Enticing Dish

By MARY MOORE

The children misbehaved but the dinner was good and the minister understood because he has two the same age.

Shirley wanted dinner to be perfect since this important guest came. The children were dressed in their Sunday best and acted their worst.

But Shirley's Chinese Sweet and Sour Chicken served from the gleaming chafing dish saved the day.

Incidentally Dave Houghland is a McMaster student, and has a two-point charge in and near Springford where my mother was born and I attended that same church many a Labor Day Sunday when I was a child.

CHINESE SWEET AND SOUR CHICKEN
(Serves 6 to 8)
Chicken Ingredients:

8 whole chicken legs, cut at joint (16 pieces in all)
¾ cup flour
1 tsp. salt
¼ tsp. pepper
½ cup butter
1 cup hot water.

Sauce:

½ cup (4 tbsps.) cornstarch
¼ cup (4 tbsps.) sugar
6 tbsps. vinegar
4 cups hot water
6 tbsps. catsup
3 tbsps. soy sauce

To prepare chicken mix flour, salt and pepper in strong paper bag and shake dried chicken pieces in them to coat. Melt butter in large shallow baking dish (or use two medium pans), add chicken pieces, turn each over to coat with butter, add hot water and bake at 350 deg. Fahr. 45 to 50 min., turning once.

To make Sauce, mix sauce ingredients together in order given in large saucepan and cook stirring until slightly thickened.

NOTES: 1) If this is to be served on a platter transfer meat from pan to platter and pour hot sauce over.

2) If this Sweet and Sour chicken is to be served for a guest dinner or buffet in a chafing dish pour sauce into top section of chafing dish, transfer chicken pieces to it and hold hot over boiling water over one of those new Ronson burners or Sterno.

This dish obviously should be served with fluffy boiled rice and is highly recommended especially for Chinese food devotees.

Argyll Chapter Plans Winter Fantasy Ball

The regular monthly meeting of the Argyll Chapter I.O.D.E. was held in the Officers' Mess in the Armories on Wednesday with a good attendance.

The Regent, Mrs. F. R. Allan, was in the chair and opened the meeting.

Mrs. B. Milroy read the minutes and Mrs. R. Hamill gave the treasurer's report. Thanks were extended by the Regent and Mrs. L. Smith to all who assisted at the civic reception and the Boxing Day Tea dance. A number of thank-you letters were read. A request from the Rotary Club for financial assistance in the promotion of their Music Festival in the form of awards was given recognition.

Reports were given by the various convenors. Good used clothing is acceptable for Biafra relief. A blood donor clinic will be held at Club Canara on January 23.

Mrs. A. Duffy read a thought provoking article by a New York correspondent in Saigon on the progress of the Vietnam war. Later as chairman of the nominating committee she read a proposed list of officers for 1969.

Plans were made for the Winter Fantasy Ball to be held in the Mess at the end of January. An executive meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Milroy, Jan. 14 to check over annual reports to be sent to Provincial Headquarters I.O.D.E.

The I.O.D.E. is continuing the Travel and Exchange project started in Centennial year. Starting in May two grade 11 girls from each Province, the Yukon and N.W. Territories will travel to Ottawa where an intensive program has been planned to help instill pride in their government and a greater understanding of their country and her people. Each branch has been asked to give financial support to this project.

The annual Provincial Conference will be held in Hamilton in April. Following an Journeret refreshments were served by Mrs. H. Campbell and her group.

BOOK ON DIVORCE

VANCOUVER (CP) — Vancouver lawyer J. D. Kowansky and assistant court registrar H. A. Stephens have written a book on rules pertaining to Canada's new Divorce Act which came into effect last July 2. Entitled Divorce Rules, the work is a supplement to their first volume which was titled The British Columbia Practice.

Ann Landers

Ten-year-old Son Still Cannot Read

ANN LANDERS

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Our middle son, age 10, is an unhappy child. This boy has always done poorly in school and we are at a loss to understand why. The teachers complain that he daydreams in class, doesn't pay attention, and misses at least half of what is going on. His grades show it.

Last week it came to my attention that the boy cannot read. I was shocked. How he managed to fool everyone is beyond me. His English teacher suggested that he might have dyslexia, which she described as a disorder of the brain that can be corrected. Do you know anything about this? Does this mean my child is retarded? Can you help me? — NEWSDAY READER.

DEAR READER: Children who have dyslexia are not retarded. In fact, they have normal or above average intelligence. No one is certain what causes this lag in visual and auditory development, but the problem is often discovered because the child has trouble reading. The experts agree dyslexia tends to run in families and could be triggered by a difficult birth or a psychological problem early in life.

I suggest you write to the Executive Director, The Secretary's (H.E.W.) National Advisory Committee on Dyslexia & Related Reading Disorders, Room 8AMC, N.I.H. Building 31, Bethesda, Maryland 20014. I recommend this organization with complete confidence because I know something about it.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I've been dating this fellow for almost a year. He is really groovy and I dig him the most, so please don't tell me to cut the connection. I couldn't do it.

The only thing wrong with Jake is he's a little bit cheap. Whenever we go with another couple, he manages to be away from the table when the checque comes, or he is so slow to find his pocket that the other guy gets it.

Lately we've been doubling with my best friend a lot. Yesterday she told me her steady refuses to double with us any more because Jake is such a sponge. I am so embarrassed I could take the gas pipe. How do I tell him? — BOISE BLUES.

DEAR BOISE: In plain English, and at once, unless he understands another language better.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: We are up to our necks in debt. Bruce is a good person but he loves to gamble and he lies to me constantly. He'll bet on whether or not Thanksgiving falls on a Thursday. Bruce swears he paid the rent and the utility bills and then I get three damning letters and somebody shows up in person. Last month the power company turned off the gas and the electricity.

Twice last year Bruce went to loan companies to keep from getting his wages garnisheed. My father lent us $600 because we were about to lose our car and furniture.

Gambling is as bad a sickness as alcoholism. Please, Ann, tell me what to do. I'm ready to pack and clear out. — NO DOUBLE.

DEAR NO: Have you ever heard of Gamblers Anonymous? This organization is patterned after A.A. and has helped a great many people. The National Headquarters address is: P.O. Box 17171, Los Angeles, California, or 25474 Pico Boulevard, Los Angeles, California. Write for literature and good luck to you, honey.

Enrolment of new Brownies was held recently in St. Michael's Church basement.

The following seven girls were enrolled: Lisa Krazewski, Carolyn Fiskle, Mary Lynn O'Brien, Gina Masera, Laura Lynch, Lenora Johnston and Diane Gerrie.

Commissioner D. Stewart conducted the enrolment. Also present were Brown Owl, Mrs. G. Decker; Tawny Owl, Mrs. H. O'Brien. Miss Patsy O'Brien was in charge of making tea and acting as replenisher for the ceremony.

PANASONIC

20" AN 78C The Woodstock

For people who couldn't care less about color TV-but want the best black and white money can buy.

So you're not going to buy color TV. Pity. All is not lost however. For us—as well as you. In addition to making the finest color sets on the market, Panasonic makes the best black and white TV your money can buy. And because most people want a portable, we play things your way by offering a complete line of portables. 12 different models in all.

The choice starts with The Woodstock, one of our deluxe 20" portables with a furniture-styled Walnut-finish cabinet and the kind of precision circuitry that's made Panasonic famous. All-Channel VHF/UHF tuning means The Woodstock will never become obsolete and "set-and-forget" fine tuning on VHF channels means once a station's tuned, it stays tuned.

If our big set is too big, Panasonic gives you eleven other choices. Like The 16" Porchester—weighs only 21 lbs. so, without feeling guilty, you can ask your wife, while she's up, to bring it out to the patio. Or The Valley View—our dandy, fully transistorized 9" portable with its own built-in battery. You can tote The Valley View anywhere. And overnight it'll automatically recharge itself on household current—ready for the beach, car or boat next day.

But rather than us tell you Panasonic makes the best TV set you can buy, see your local dealer. He's got the proof. In black and white.

Report Reveals Once Knot Is Tied, Good Sense Prevails

By DORIS CLARK

It says here that women who are more likely to marry are more submissive, friendlier, outgoing and agreeable than women who are less likely to marry. It says that men who are more likely to marry are more emotionally stable, objective and masculine than men who are less likely to marry.

What I am reading is a report from the Institute for Marriage and Friendship, also called the Scientific Introduction Centre, Toronto. A series of 56 questions were put to a group of 80 unattached men and women and 40 married couples.

The men were asked if having guests in their homes would prevent them from lending a hand in serving meals or keeping things orderly. The married ones said they would help; but the bachelors would bend over backwards to keep things in top shape.

Dr. E. R. Allen (of the Institute) implies a compulsion about neatness in the unmarrieds.

The ladies were asked if staying home with the children would be their duty rather than that of their husbands. The wives said no; the spinsters said yes.

The reason? Dr. Allen implies a compulsive desire to marry prompting unrealistic promises!

Might we also predict that once the knot is tied, wife is not nearly the sweetly yielding, submissive creature she appeared? And that after marriage a fellow has more on his hands than emptying the ashtrays!

I hope so. People are folks, and marriage can prove it.

Dear Doris: My one good health habit has paid me a very great dividend. Once a year I used to go for a check-up and have the Pap Test.

This year it was found that I had cancer of the womb. I was operated on (it was a major operation), came home and did exactly what the doctor told me to' do.

Miss Clark, I did not know it was possible to feel so good. No backache. It is heaven!

I am not writing to tell you of my operation; this is boring. But please tell your readers not to neglect this very important subject. I can be a wife and mother; and as far as my family is concerned, I cannot be replaced.

Now I'll get off my soap box and get on with my — Housemaking.

Dear Homemaking: O, fine! The medical profession recommends that yearly check - up for every woman. The test is simple and reliable. And life-saving.

Confidential to Troubled: Let's face it: He doesn't keep daises, flirts with other girls, has lied to you frequently. The kind of a guy who would stand you up at the altar. Don't let him. Stand him up first; and find yourself a male who'll prize loyalty and love.

DISTRICT WOMEN'S INSTITUTES

(QUEENSBORO WI)

Mrs. John Thompson was hostess for the January meeting of the Queensboro Women's Institute, with president, Mrs. Harry Declair in charge.

There was a short business discussion. It was decided to send a donation to the McDonald University. Thank you notes were received from the McQuigge family and from the Rauws Nursing Home.

It was decided to quilt a quilt as soon as possible There was an exhibit of food labels and showing of place of origin. One member had more than 40 different labels. The motto was read by Mrs. Roy Rollins.

The Institute had an auction sale of baking and other goods. The auctioneer was Miss Roberta Sager.

It was decided to ask a guest speaker for the February meeting. The meeting closed and a social time was enjoyed by everyone.

(MOUNTAIN VIEW WI)

Mrs. Clifford Barber of Belleville opened her home for the January meeting of the Mountain View WI, with approximately 30 women in attendance.

A number of the women thanked the Institute for the plants sent them at Christmas. The business was taken care of, and Mrs. Bob Barber spoke briefly on the subject of the Tweedsmuir Book.

The topic for the evening was' Citizenship and Education. Convener Mrs. Clifford Barber read a paper on the definition of a Canadian woman today. Mrs. Barber was assisted by Mrs. Ed Hall and Mrs. Bob Barber also gave papers pertaining to the topic.

Mrs. Seymour Hamilton thanked the hostess, and the meeting was closed. Lunch was served by the hostess, Mrs. Ed Hall, and the lunch committee, Mrs. Harold Motley and Mrs. George Stinson. A social time was later enjoyed.

Points for Parents

By MARY BRYSON

Mother: "Oh, dear, that's the second tray of food you've spilled. I'll be glad when you can come to the table."

Child: "I didn't mean to Siggie it."

A "tray-table" made from a carton and covered with plastic coated paper will be handy for games, coloring books, jigsaw puzzles and such — as well as for meals in bed.

Make a small table out of a cardboard box for a child who is sick in bed. Simply cut out arches, front and back, to make space for her legs.

PARLORS IN PRISON

ROME (AP) — A Brazilian beautician is trying to get parlors for women convicts. Alcina Campos said women inmates he has trained in the state prison in Guarbira have regained confidence and in improving their appearance, have learned a trade to practise when they are released.

Resident Marks 97th Birthday

TWEED — On Saturday evening, Jan. 11, the children and relatives as well as friends travelled to the home of Mr. Roy Young, in Marlbank, to celebrate the 97th birthday of his father, Mr. James Young.

Mr. Young Senior was 97 Jan. 13 but it seemed better to all concerned that the party in his honor be held on the Saturday. Mrs. Bernard Rashotte of Tweed is one of Mr. Young's daughters, where her father has been residing and just recently when he went to the residence of his son, Roy.

They celebrated with Mr. Young's favorite dish, an oyster supper, as they did last year on his 96th birthday.

Mr. Young's wife, the former Annie Tate passed away in 1955, so he is mostly at some of the children's homes from then on.

Eddie Young, who was on the staff of the Department of Lands and Forests in Tweed, and was later transferred to White River with the department, along with his wife, flew from White River to be at the birthday celebration of his grandfather in Marlbank.

After the supper of oysters, and fun, all went to the old schoolhouse, now owned by Roy Young, where the celebration broke out.

Mr. Young, the 97-year-old honored guest, was in the Kingston General Hospital from Wednesday, Jan. 8 but was allowed to come home for the annual celebration. He will return to the Kingston Hospital for further treatment this week.

THE PICK OF Punch

ANAF News

Despite the inclement weather and the rough travelling there was one of the best turnouts ever for the recent election of officers when approximately 70 per cent of the members voted.

Dominion President J. C. Lundberg conducted the election and installation of the 1969 executive officers.

Following is the list of members elected and their positions: president, R. Burns; first vice president, J. Browning; second vice-president, W. Ford; secretary, P. A. Kelly; treasurer, R. Foran; Dwarugs, R. Baker; house, W. Sherna; entertainment, T. DeDels; sports, G. Ackerman; membership, A. Jordan; sick, D. Andrews and publicity, A. S. Hobbs.

This week the executive will have their first meeting and committees will be organized. It is hoped that all members asked to serve on the various committees will cheerfully accept.

The president, R. G. Burns, thanked the members for the trust and confidence they have shown in electing the executive to look after the affairs of the club for the coming year.

He said he has a good executive and, with the cooperation of the general body, is looking forward to a very successful and constructive year.

Strictly Personal

Reflection Can Confuse

By SYDNEY J. HARRIS

Thoughts at Large:

The cynic who insists that everything in life is done for a selfish reason is closer to the truth than the sentimentalist who denies it; but the cynic is short-sighted in not realizing that the problematic aspect of life lies in knowing the true needs of the authentic self, and when we act in accord with these needs, our "selfishness" is also benevolent.

• • •

Long reflection can confuse the mind just as often as it can clarify it; I have seen minutes before playing the wrong card, who might have played the right one after a moment's thought.

• • •

The respectable world looks down its nose at those who are judged guilty of sins of commission — but a good case could be made out that our major woes are caused by the sins of omission perpetrated en masse by the very people who feel smug and virtuous for having broken no laws.

• • •

The real trouble with slogans like "law and order" was expressed by Goethe nearly two centuries a g o, when he warned: "The phrases men are accustomed to repeat incessantly end by becoming convictions, and thus easily the organs of intelligence.

• • •

It's a pity that such old-fashioned words as "flibbertigibbet" have disappeared and have not been replaced by any modern equivalents.

If you have to make a long story short, it couldn't have been much of a story to begin with.

• • •

What too many solicitous mothers fail to realise is the deep emotional truth in the old Talmudic saying: "Better is she who shows a smiling countenance than she who offers milk to drink."

A lower-class domicile is, to me, a place where they have six beer-can openers and no corkscrews.

• • •

Defenders of a good cause become its worst enemies when they use tenuous half-truths to promote the cause with those too ignorant to refute the argument.

Colleges' Growth Called Haphazard

OTTAWA (CP) — Community colleges in Ontario seem to be developing in a "very haphazard and method," Prof. T. J. Scanlon of Carleton University told the commission on the relationship between universities and governments which held its first hearing Wednesday at Carleton University.

Prof. Scanlon, director of the university's school of journalism, was commenting on a brief presented by the executive of the Carleton University Academic Staff Association. He is its president.

In the brief, the executive placed the blame for such a situation squarely on the province.

"It is Queen's Park that is financing the new colleges and it is Queen's Park that has failed to control their growth. It is also Queen's Park that is gradually tightening the control over university development."

Concern about waste, duplication and standards led the executive to believe that a careful review of developments in the post-secondary education field is badly needed.

Another concern was the province's "apparent" decision that it would be better if education of primary school teachers is left to universities. It seemed clear, though, that the province wanted to keep its hand in this area of education in a way it had never done in the education of other professionals.

Working Force Declines

OTTAWA (CP) — The Canadian labor force and employment showed larger-than-seasonal declines between November and December while unemployment increased only seasonally by 36,000 to 373,000, a government report showed today.

There were 338,000 unemployed in November and 353,000 in December, 1967.

The joint report by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics and the manpower department said the labor force declined by 75,000 to 7,940,000 in the month, and employment by 110,000 to 7,567,000. Compared with December, 1967, the labor force was up by 242,000, employment by 222,000 and unemployment by 20,000.

Soviets Still Say 'Nyet' to Tour

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

The acting president of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association has made a last-minute attempt to coax the reluctant Russian national team to tour Canada.

Earl Dawson sent a telegram to the Russians assuring them that their competition during the tour would be only from Canada's two national teams.

The telegram also invited the Russians to bring any complaints along with them.

The Russians stunned the CAHA Tuesday by announcing they were backing out of two Canadian tours. One was to have started Friday and finished at the end of the month while the other involved the Moscow Selects, the Soviet B team, and was to have run from Feb. 24 to March 7.

Numerous international moves have been made since the Russians said they would not come to Canada. Dawson's telegram was in response to an earlier one from the Russians in which they claimed they did not know what teams would provide the competition in Canada and the financial arrangements were not satisfactory.

Dawson said in the telegram that Canada's Eastern national team arrived home from a European tour Tuesday and would be available for games.

The Russians said Canada's Eastern National team was still in Europe and they were afraid the Soviet team would have to play 'inferior' teams.

Another complaint was that Russian teams have played 29 games in Canada between 1965 and 1968 while Canadian teams have played only three games in Russia during that period.

Wings Get Rare Win in Forum

Leaf Rally Keeps Bruins Within Two Points of Pack

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Detroit Red Wings of the National Hockey League and their goaltender Roy Edwards celebrated a couple of firsts Wednesday night at the expense of Montreal Canadiens.

The Red Wings won their first game in Montreal in almost three years and Edwards posted the first shutout of his NHL career as Detroit blanked the Canadiens 4-0.

It was the first triumph in Montreal for the Red Wings since the Stanley Cup finals of May, 1966. Edwards, 31, failed to gain a shutout in 36 1-3 games with Detroit last season and in 12 appearances this season.

He kicked out 36 shots while rookie Tony Esposito in the Montreal goal made 28 saves. Scoring for Detroit were Frank Mahovlich, Alex Delvecchio, Paul Popiel and Nick Libett.

The victory moved the Red Wings into fifth place in the Eastern Division, one point ahead of the idle New York Rangers. The loss left the Canadiens in second place in the Eastern Division, two points back of Boston Bruins.

In other games Wednesday night, the Bruins and Toronto Maple Leafs played to a 5-5 tie, St. Louis Blues edged Philadelphia Flyers 4-3, Pittsburgh Penguins downed Minnesota North Stars 3-1 and Oakland Seals nipped Chicago Black Hawks 4-3.

Detroit coach Bill Gadsby, delighted to be out of the cellar at last, praised Edwards and his Red Wings.

"I thought Edwards played a terrific game for us," he said, "but so did our defence.

"You have to get top performance from the defencemen in order to get a shutout in this league."

Gadsby also paid tribute to Frank Mahovlich, who has scored 26 goals this season.

"Mahovlich played a whale of a game," said Gadsby. "He is working and shooting the puck, and his goal total reflects it."

Goals by Murray Oliver and Tim Horton, the 100th of his NHL career, in the last six minutes enabled Toronto to tie Boston.

Oliver scored on his own rebound at 14:47 of the final period and Horton connected on a slap shot from the right point at 17:05.

Mike Walton scored two goals for Toronto and George Armstrong one. Phil Esposito picked up a goal and an assist for Boston to move into the lead in NHL scoring with 61 points, one more than Bobby Hull of Chicago. The other Boston goals went to Ron Murphy, Ken Hodge, Johnny McKenzie and Jim Harrison, his first in the NHL.

The Toronto comeback thwarted a Boston attempt to win its first game at Maple Leaf Gardens since Nov. 27, 1965. In 21 games since then, Boston has five ties and 16 losses.

Toronto manager-coach Punch Imlach charged after the game that Boston's final goal, scored by McKenzie, came on an offside play. Coach Harry Sinden of Boston said referee John Ashley accidentally blocked a Bruin pass to help set up Horton's tying goal.

Defenceman Carol Vadnais scored two goals to help Oakland win its 15th game of the season—the same number the team won all of last season.

Other Oakland goals came from Gary Jarrett and Ted Hampson while Chicago goals were recorded by Jim Pappin, Ken Wharram and Bob Schmautz.

The win left Oakland in second place in the Western Division, 16 points behind St. Louis. Chicago is tied for third in the Eastern Division with Toronto.

Two goals by Ron Schock helped St. Louis to its victory. Tim Ecclestone and Frank St. Marseille scored the other Blues' goals while Leon Rochefort, Jim Johnson and Garry Peters scored for Philadelphia.

It was the 16th straight game without a defeat for the Blues against Western Division opposition.

St. Louis snapped a 3-2 tie in the third period on goals by Schock and Ecclestone. Peters later scored for the Flyers.

Pittsburgh broke a tie with Minnesota for fifth place in the Western Division by defeating the North Stars.

Scoring for the Penguins were Earl Ingarfield, Billy Dea and Lou Angotti. Claude Larose had the Minnesota goal.

The loss was the 12th in a row for the North Stars, now two points behind Pittsburgh. Minnesota has won only six of 22 home games this season.

Coaches have been known to go so far as refuse to change underwear in their determining to keep Lady Luck grinning on their team's lot.

But the lengths gone to alter reversals in sporting fortunes can be almost as far-fetched.

Some, like Punch Imlach — the holding target of Gardens-goers' jibes — fill their pockets with enough rabbits' feet to put them on a Lands and Forests' blacklist.

Faltering golfers begin using battered, hickory-shafted putters that all seem to have once belonged to Bobby Jones.

We like the novel approach used by Francis Ennis, coach of North Carolina's Pfeiffer College Falcons varsity basketball team.

When he and his hoopsters found themselves faced with a dismal 1-3 record in their first four Carolinas' Conference sorties, Coach Ennis was at a loss for a remedy for Pfeiffer's losing streak.

Then it struck him.

"I thought if they carried a basketball around for awhile they would be reminded they were supposed to be basketball players," the brainstormed coach grinned.

And carry basketballs they did . . . to class, meals, and even to bed.

The Falcons were the brunt of no end of classmates' jokes, but they followed coaching instructions until their next game, two days after the ball-toting therapy had begun.

Just like in Hollywood, a four-game winning streak ensued.

It's an interesting theory, but we'd hate to see a thoroughbred owner try the same approach with losing jockeys.

As the annual Minor Hockey Week literature keeps piling up in advance of this year's Jan. 25 starting date, one sheet stands out above all the rest — partly because it's the fine yellow offering in a sea of white carbon copies, and partly because it poses some soul-searching questions to the coach of every minor hockey team.

"What are you trying to do?" the open letter queries, suggesting that minor coaches ask themselves the following questions as a constant reminder that motives are sound:

"Am I really teaching my boys the fundamentals of good sportsmanship?

Am I giving every boy an equal chance to play hockey?

Am I trying to see that the boys HAVE FUN playing hockey?

OR

Am I trying to win games to bolster my own ego?"

"Play" and "Game" mean having fun stresses the bulletin. When the lessons of sportsmanship have been taught, then there's time for further teaching of the fundamentals of hockey.

Spell that "FUN-damentals."

They Have A Point

TORONTO (CP) — Did Russian coach Anatoly Tarasov have a point when he said recently that Soviet teams were tired of meeting second-rate opposition on their hockey tours of Canada?

The record would seem to bear him out.

In 11 years, Russian teams have made seven tours and have won 44 games, losing 15 and tying two.

The No. 1 national team has visited Canada five times, winning 33, losing seven and tying two. The Russian B team, Moscow Selects, made two tours, winning 11 and losing eight.

The first Russian team arrived in 1957, lost 7-2 to Whitby Dunlops, tied 5-5 with Windsor Bulldogs, then lost 4-2 to Kitchener-Waterloo Dutchmen. They won five in a row before leaving for home.

Both teams toured Canada during 1967. The No. 1 squad lost the Centennial Tournament to Canada in the final game but won six, lost one and tied one during their Canadian stay.

The selects won five and lost four.

League Leaders

Phil Esposito of Boston Bruins took over the lead in National Hockey League scoring Wednesday night when he picked up a goal and an assist.

The two points, coming in a 5-5 tie against Toronto Maple Leafs, gave Esposito 61 on 26 goals and 35 assists and moved him one point ahead of Bobby Hull of Chicago Black Hawks.

Commons Speaker Referees MP Hockey Bout

OTTAWA (CP) — Commons Speaker Lucien Lamoureux outskated two hot-stove questioners Wednesday and suggested two Alberta MPs might like to join up some evening for Hockey Night in the House of Commons.

The MPs were Steve Paproski (PC—Edmonton Centre and Pat Mahoney (L—Calgary South), president of the Calgary Stampeders football team.

Mr. Paproski started it off with a slap-shot at the National Hockey League's player draft system. He called it "athletic peonage" and asked the government whether it intends to put an end to the draft. He started to describe how the system affects young athletes but was cut off by the Speaker, who suggested he raise the matter at a Commons adjournment debate.

Mr. Mahoney came off the bench a few minutes later, wanting to know the government's attitude to the refusal of Soviet Russia's national hockey team to fulfil "its obligation" to play an eight-game series in Canada.

Male Jockeys Threaten Boycott To Thwart Barbara's Bid for History

MIAMI, Fla. (AP) — "I'm going to ride and ride and ride and I'll make it someday," Barbara Jo Rubin said.

But she was disappointed Wednesday.

Male jockeys thwarted her effort to become the first girl rider in American thoroughbred racing history. Now the petite 18-year-old brunette says she's determined to carry on her fight, to take it to court if necessary.

Dressed in the gold and red slacks she had hoped to wear in the fourth race at Tropical Park Wednesday, Barbara Jo told newspaper men:

"I didn't expect this at all. I was all ready to go. The male jockeys were so nice to me this morning."

Fighting back tears, she added:

"I think there were just a few of them who seemed to be against me. But I'm going to try and I hope I'll be the first woman to race some day."

About 100 male jockeys threatened a mass boycott at Tropical if the former exercise girl were allowed to ride a horse named Stoneland in the fourth race.

After a stormy meeting in the jockey room, the 11 jockeys in the third race refused to come out unless Barbara Jo was removed from her horse.

Trainer Bryan Webb bowed to the pressure and broke the news to Barbara Jo.

Attorney Robert H. Burns of the American Civil Liberties Union talked with Barbara Jo and her father, a Miami tavern owner, and said he would go to court charging interference with the right of contract.

Burns said he would name each jockey in the third and fourth races and the Jockeys Guild as a group if collusion could be proved. He said he also will consider federal action if it could be proved that anti-trust laws had been violated.

Saul Silberman, owner of Tropical Park, said it was useless to argue after the male jockeys took their action.

"The jockeys felt there were two problems," Silberman said. "Danger to life and danger to their livelihood. A lot of the boys don't get too many mounts. The more riders, the less chance there is of making a living."

Trotting Delegates Decide to Retain Ban

TORONTO (CP) — A 10-year-old rule that prohibits licensing of women drivers should stand, delegates to the annual meeting of the Canadian Trotting Association decided Wednesday.

The delegates voted 64 to 54 against a motion to rescind the rule.

Hector Cloutier of Pembroke, who introduced the motion, said he was not pleased with the support it received.

"The rule is pure discrimination," said Cloutier, owner of Northwood Stables. "Our character is with the federal government which does not allow discrimination. I'm sure the CTA rule wouldn't stand up in a civil court."

CTA solicitor John Johnston of Toronto admitted that women might be required to be licensed if the matter went to court.

Secretary-treasurer Gord Findlay of Toronto said the rule was adopted in 1958 because many members felt women lacked the strength to control most horses.

Some women, who obtained their licences before 1958, have competed regularly at Ontario tracks. They include Retta Herrington of Brighton, Ont., Mildred Williams of Ottawa and Bobbe Hurstress of Gouverneur, N.Y.

Track 'Messengers' Off to Flying Start

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — London Pari-Mutuel Brokers, the city's first race track messenger service, went into operation Wednesday and within an hour had orders to place $32 in bets on night races at Windsor Raceway.

The opening came a day after two Toronto men registered a similar company in Toronto city hall. Joseph Zammit and William Nummally said Pari-Mutuel Messenger Service 1969 may be in operation by Monday.

Formation of the new companies follows an Ontario Court of Appeal decision Jan. 8 that such messenger services are legal providing all the money is wagered through pari-mutuel windows at race tracks.

Several other companies are expected to be formed in the province as a result of the ruling.

The messenger services—the bets are taken to the track by car—have announced identical fee scales of 10 per cent of the amount bet with a minimum charge of 50 cents. In other words, a $10 bet will cost $1.

The trend appears to have been set by Robert Gruhl who used that scale when he operated a bet-running office in Welland. The office closed when he was arrested 18 months ago on a bookmaking charge, but he says he plans to reopen the business soon on an expanded basis.

Mr. Gruhl was acquitted of the charge, a decision upheld last week by the Appeal Court which ruled that as long as the off-track bets were taken to the track and wagered, the scheme was not illegal.

Thus, the track would get its share of nine cents on each betting dollar, the provincial government its seven cents and the federal government one-half of one per cent.

In Toronto, Mr. Zammit said present plans involve only one track, Greenwood. His establishment would have a central clearing house as well as "sub agents" throughout Metropolitan Toronto.

"We have good backing," he said, "and our books will be open for anyone's inspection."

Keon Draws Praise

TORONTO (CP) — Members of the Seibu hockey club of Tokyo, on a tour of Canada, were impressed Wednesday night with the play of Dave Keon of Toronto Maple Leafs and Bobby Orr of Boston Bruins.

The team saw the National Hockey League game between Boston and Toronto which ended in a 5-5 tie. The players were surprised at the rough style of NHL play.

"You don't see this type of thing at home," said Mel Wakabayashi, a Canadian-born centre on the team. "There rarely are any fights in Japan."

Wakabayashi was born in Slocan City, B.C., and grew up in Chatham, Ont. He was an all-America hockey player at the University of Michigan.

Balding Quits Club Jobs For U.S. Tour

TORONTO (CP) — Al Balding of Toronto has resigned from two golf club jobs to play full time in the U.S. professional tour.

Balding, 44, said in an interview Wednesday that he has resigned as professional at Markland Wood in Toronto and as winter pro at Crystal River, Fla.

"I want to devote all my time to the tournament trail," he said. "If I don't do it now, I'll always be sorry. I want to give it my best effort."

Balding will leave soon for California to compete in the Bing Crosby invitational tournament.

"After that it's the San Diego Open. I was 10th there last year so I don't have to qualify. Then I hope to get an invitation to the Bob Hope tournament."

Balding has been professional at Markland Wood since the course opened in 1965 and was named golf director of the Crystal River club in 1968.

"My conscience bothered me last year. I had said I would play about eight to 10 tournaments a year, but last summer I went away for a couple of weeks and stayed for five, playing consecutive tournaments. I just kept winning money."

Stanky Back On Infield

MOBILE, Ala. (AP) — Former league manager Eddie Stanky will be on the infield again this season—in the college ranks at the University of South Alabama in Mobile.

Stanky accepted the position of head baseball coach at the school Wednesday.

Stanky, who was fired last season as manager of Chicago White Sox, turned down offers from Chicago Cubs at St. Louis Cardinals along with another one to manage in the new International Global League.

It's Jog Time Again

Workout Weather

Winter Is Sulky Time

By MALCOLM JOHNSTON
Staff Sportswriter

The work and training are done primarily in the winter months, but the results are not known until the summer season in the world of harness racing.

That is the case for George Thomas and Cliff Howie of Belleville who are the proprietors of the Quinte Tack Shop, and follow up their interest in the horse field by running a few horses every summer at the Belleville and Kingston meets.

George and Cliff are currently starting daily training sessions for their two harness horses, J. J. Frost, a six-year-old mare, and J. J. Dale, a four-year-old gelding.

George said "People who just come to the races in the summer months don't realize the work put into training a horse before he ever races."

George and Cliff jog each horse about 300 miles counterclockwise around the track in the winter months to condition the animal and build up his leg muscles for the summer races.

Then the horse runs "work miles" clockwise around the track, starting with a three minute mile, and working down to a 2 minute, 25 second mile, with a mile of jogging interspaced between each "work mile".

The horse is then ready to race, and it is hoped that in actual competition he will knock ten or more seconds off his best time for the "work mile."

George and Cliff raced two horses in Kingston and Belleville last season, and one of them J. J. Frost, a six year old mare, won eight of 21 starts during the year.

Leo Law, their best horse last year, was lost in a claims race in Toronto, and so George and Cliff have leased J. J Dale for the coming season.

George, a race-goer for thirty years, stresses that blood lines and past performances are the best criterion when judging or buying a harness horse.

George and Cliff pursue their hobby constantly, and rent stables at the Belleville Fairgrounds the year round.

Mo-Hawks Seek to Extend Three-game Home Win String

STAFF — Playoff time is just around the corner and the Belleville Mo-Hawks will be out to collect some scalps Friday night when they seek their fourth straight home ice win in a game with the second place Galt Hornets.

The Mo-Hawks will be seeking two valuable points and retribution for the 12-3 drubbing administered by the Hornets in Galt last Saturday night.

Belleville's string of home ice victories includes a 6-1 win over Kingston, a 2-1 triumph over Oakville and Sunday's 8-1 drubbing of Collingwood.

The eight goals against the Kings Sunday represent the Mo-Hawks highest total of the season and it was also the locals first win over the fourth place Kings.

Another sign of the Mo-Hawk resurgence was the 2-1 win over Oakville, which was Belleville's first victory over the Oaks this season. Belleville plays both Oakville and Collingwood once in their ten remaining games and the players should be buoyed by the knowledge that if they play up to their ability they can beat either club.

The Mo-Hawks currently trail sixth - place Kingston Aces by five points in the race for the sixth and last playoff spot in the eight team OHA Senior "A" league, but they play Kingston twice more in their 10 remaining games and a pair of wins for the locals might tip the playoff race balance in their favor.

Belleville's total of 91 goals scored in 29 games is the lowest in the league, but the club's goals-against total of 140 is fifth best in the league and regular netminder Larry Holmes sports a respectable 4.00 goals against average.

"We need a little bit of pride out there Friday night after that 12-3 loss in Galt," says playing-coach Davey Jones. "We need the same desire we had against Collingwood the rest of the way, and we'll have to win our five remaining home games and a couple on the road to insure a playoff spot."

Jones felt that veteran Eddie Marinescu, who picked up three assists in the Mo-Hawks 8-1 win over Collingwood played his best game of the season Sunday, and that everybody would have to start scoring in the stretch run for the playoffs.

The Mo-Hawks will need some goals Sunday, when they travel to Barrie to take on the high-scoring league-leaders, who are battling to stay ahead of Galt in the race for first place.

Hildebrand in Oldtimers' Game

STAFF — Reverend Art Appleton of Trenton will be doing some soul searching tonight at the Trenton Community Gardens. He has the unenviable task of lending out for the "Flying Fathers" when they take on the NHL Oldtimers tonight at 8 p.m. at the Trenton Community Gardens.

The "Flying Fathers" are a group of Roman Catholic priests from across the province who play exhibition hockey games for worthwhile causes. Proceeds from tonight's game will go towards the Trenton Rotary Club's youth work.

The names of many of the NHL Oldtimers will bring back memories to local hockey fans. Players such as Harry Watson, who scored 226 goals during his NHL career with Toronto, Detroit and the old New York Americans, and Joe Hildebrand, who starred in the NHL with the Toronto Maple Leafs, and was later playing coach for the World and Allan Cup champion Belleville MacFarlands in the late fifties, will both be in the lineup.

Bob Armstrong, Cal Gardner, Garry Edmundson, Bob Goldham, Pete Conacher and Danny Lewicki will also be there to oppose the "Flying Fathers" and show local hockey fans that age has not dulled the skills which made them stars in the best hockey league in the world.

The "Flying Fathers" are led by former Maple Leaf Les Costello.

Tonight's game will be the first encounter between the two teams, and it is also the first time either team has played in this area. A rematch is scheduled for Richmond Hill next month.

The NHL Oldtimers will dress: Goal - Ivan Walmsley, Bob Goldham, Ivan Irwin, Bob Robertson, Murray Henderson, Bob Hunter, Pete Conacher, Ike Hildebrand, Barry Cullen, Ron Hurst, Jack Hamilton, Harry Pidhersny, Cal Gardner, Harry Watson, Bob Armstrong, Danny Lewicki. The manager is Brian McFarland, the bench manager Murray Eszard, and the trainer John Lanasa.

Centennial Junior Win Only Bright Spot In Face of Trenton Hoopsters' Onslaught

STAFF — Centennial Junior Chargers eked out a 56-55 win over Trenton Tigers last night and strengthened their hold on fourth place in the Boys' Class "AA" Basketball League with a record of two wins and two losses.

The junior win was the only bright spot for Centennial, as Trenton seniors won a 47-35 defensive battle for their initial win of the year, and Trenton bantams dumped Centennial 29-25 to move into first place with a record of three wins and no losses.

Trenton juniors, who had been badly beaten in two exhibition games with the Chargers, used a sagging zone defence and almost pulled off a major upset when they rallied in the fourth quarter to tie the game, but the Chargers pulled ahead again and Trenton could not beat Centennial's man - to - man press often enough to swing the game in their favor.

Mike Thompson hooped 16 points for the Chargers, while Frank Johnston netted 11, Mike Semark nine and Glen Mallory eight.

Jim Ransom topped the Tiger scorers with 12 points and Sandy McDonald added nine for the losers while Duncan Campbell, Kendal Biche and Bob Canuel netted eight points each.

The senior Tigers employed a 2-3 zone defence which allowed centre Andy Fesar to control the defensive backboards as Trenton picked holes in Centennial's 2-1-2 zone in a battle of winless senior teams.

Les Nicholson hooped 14 points for Trenton to lead the game's scorers. Andy Fesar added ten points for the winners while Doug Coward threw in four.

Larry Wannamaker and Dennis Neron each netted seven points for the senior Chargers, while John Koch added six points and Bob Henderson five.

DESIGNED TO FILL THE EMPTY DAYS!

In 1890, James Naismith was trying to figure out a game to fill the physical education curriculum between the football and baseball seasons. Basketball was the result of his invention . . . and it's the only competitive sport of purely American origin!

There's a wonderful invention used all over the world to sell no longer needed basketballs or almost anything . . . here we call it an Intelligencer Ad . . . and you get it by dialing 962-9171.

Toronto Stocks

TORONTO (CP) — The Toronto stock market, posted small gains in mid-morning trading today. Volume was moderate.

Most of the major industrial groups were slightly higher, and the industrial index was up 30 to 188.80. Gains outnumbered losses by a wide margin.

Massey-Ferguson rose 2 to 24, Maher Shoes ½ to 13½, Canadian Imp. Industrial Gas ½ to 25¾. Auto Electric ½ to 22 and Consolidated Bathurst ¼ to 22¾.

Among the most active industrials, Manoir Industries gained 15 cents to $3.15 and Oshawa A ¼ to 37¼.

On the downside, Welbond fell 2 to 25½, Moore Corp. 1 to 31¾ and OSF Industries ¼ to 25¾.

International Utilities advanced ½ to 45. The company has made an offer to take over a New York insurance broker-age firm.

Algonquin Building Credits lost ½ to 6. The firm recently announced plans to reorganize its capital and debt structure.

Mines were strong, and the base metal index reached an all-time high for the third day in the succession. Denison rose 1½ to 74½, Hudson Bay Mining ½ to 78 and Kerr Addison ¾ to 18¾.

Golds were slightly lower, following the trend on the free market where the price of bullion declined. Dome Mines fell 1¾ to 82 and Giant Yellowknife ¼ to 14¼.

Among oils, Asamera rose 1 to 25½ and Husky ¼ to 25.

On index, base metals were up .68 to 116.93 and western oils 2.31 to 242.57. Golds fell 3.16 to 250.19.

Volume by 11 a.m. was 1,206,000 shares compared with 1,204,000 at the same time Wednesday.

The Toronto market posted its fifth consecutive advance Wednesday, and most groups closed with firm gains. Volume was active.

The western oil index rose 2.94 to 241.26 and the industrial index .96 to 188.56. The market has recovered about two-thirds of its losses during the sharp decline early last week.

Prices have been helped over the past two days by the rising trend in New York.

Golds continued to edge up in the wake of the rising price of gold bullion on the free market. However, trading Yellowknife T to 14¾.

The gold index closed at 252.31, up 2.50. The index reached a record at 269 during the international monetary crisis last March.

Mining stocks listed in the base section also continued to rise, and the base metal index touched an all-time high for the second successive day.

Denison Mines gained 2¼ to 73, Pine Point Mines ¼ to 45¼, Roman Corp. 1¼ to 23¾ and Stanrock 60 cents to $3.75.

In the industrial list, now less than two per cent below its record early this month, Hand Chemical A rose 1¼ to 26¾, Canadian Goldale 1¼ to 32½, Dylex Diversified 1¼ to 25, B.C. Forest 1 to 19¾ and International Utilities ¾ to 44½.

Among the heavy traders, Imperial Oil was up ¾ to 21¾ and Algoma Central ¼ to 10¾.

Welbwood gained 2¾ to 27¾ after the company said prospects to report considerably higher earning.

Trading in Hardee Farms was halted at the company's request before the market opened. Hardee said a statement will be issued later this week. The stock closed Tuesday at $1.65, up 40 cents on the day.

Bahamas-Caribbean, the most active industrial, advanced 10 cents to $1.05. The company said it is planning a capital reorganization and a rights issue.

On index, base metals rose .36 to 118.23. Volume was 1,207,000 shares compared with 5,765,099 Tuesday. Gains out-numbered losses by 252 to 250.

Bacteria Make Re-freezing Dangerous

By Dr. George C. Thesteson

Dear Dr. Thosteson: We often hear that meats which have been hard frozen should not be refrozen. Is what way may such meats be injurious to health? Is it safe to re-freeze meat that has partially thawed but is still cool? — M. M.

Dear Doctor: I know several people who will not cook or even buy meat that has been frozen. This seems to be such a wasted convenience. — Mrs. T. S.

It is a matter of bacterial growth — in the matter of re-freezing, that is.

There is no reason in the world for avoiding meat that has been frozen, so long as it has been properly handled. Foods in a deep freeze can be kept safely for long periods of time.

Thawing and freezing is another matter. Foodstuffs in general can be expected to contain bacteria. That is why foods spoil, why milk sours, fat turns rancid, other types of foods ferment.

Not all of these bacteria are necessarily harmful to us, but sometimes "unfriendly" bacteria also are present, various types of the salmonella germ being one of the commonest that can cause "food poisoning."

When meat is put in a deep freeze, the bacteria — harmful or otherwise — do not multiply, but neither do they disappear. They are dormant and can revive.

Therefore with each period of thawing, such bacteria are present begin to multiply. Although they multiply most rapidly when quite warm (like picnic foods in the August sun) they will still multiply at lower temperatures. As you know, foods spoil, although more slowly, in an ordinary refrigerator. To prevent bacterial from proliferating (and food spoiling) foods must be kept at a colder temperature — that is, in the "deep freeze".

As deep-frozen meat thaws, the bacteria begin multiplying, even while the meat is still "cool." Refreezing stops the process, but not instantly. Remember that it takes quite a bit of time for even an efficient freezer to freeze meat solidly all the way through.

It is possible, of course, to thaw meat, then refreeze it, and get away with it unharmed. But sooner or later you will with diarrhea, cramps or oth-or some more savage type of bacteria will be present, and the family will come down with diarrhea, cramps or oth-"food poisoning" distress.

Food inspectors soon get so they can spot refrozen meat on a glance. A sort of "tired" appearance on the surface, particularly with poultry, is the tipoff.

The best rule, the safe rule, is to wrap and freeze food as soon as possible and keep it hard frozen until you are ready to thaw and eat it.

* * *

Dear Dr. Thosteson: What causes underactive thyroid glands? My daughter, 22, has gained 15 pounds in three months. What can she do to get her normal weight back? — Mrs. M. R.

Do you know that this is a case of underactive thyroid or are you just guessing? It is not usual for a thyroid condition to develop so suddenly. I can't give you any advice except to urge you to have a physician check her thyroid activity. If that is the cause of her trouble, it can be readily treated.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I have Meniere's disease and would like to know if I can stand a plane trip across the Atlantic.

I am 74, and am taking Dramamine, nicotinic acid, and Vitamin A. — R. L. I.

With the medications you are taking, the plane trip should not bother you.

Wet Grain Poses Threat to Economy

VANCOUVER (CP) — An armada of 20 deep-sea ships was berthed Wednesday in Vancouver harbor waiting to be loaded with grain.

On shore, a few hundred yards away, stood elevators bulging with tough, wet grain that couldn't be loaded aboard.

The situation poses a threat to the economy of the western farmer and the west coast shipping industry, say shipping officials.

In an attempt to cope with the crisis, a special committee has been formed, consisting of representatives from the railways, grain handling terminals and the Canadian Wheat Board.

Premier Walter Weir of Manitoba sent J. Douglas Watt, his agriculture minister, to Vancouver to study the "serious holdup in grain shipments."

Mr. Weir also sent telegrams to the Canadian Wheat Board and Jean-Luc Pepin, federal trade minister, expressing concern.

Some of the grain ships have been in port more than a month, running up demurrage expenses at the rate of about $2,500 a day each, most of which must be paid by the prairie farmers.

Premier Weir said Wednesday there is no shortage of dgrades of No. 2 and No. 3 wheat in Western Canada.

The dry grain exists, but most of it is still on the prairies, while elevators here are clogged with the damp or tough grain that was shipped to the coast for drying.

A. V. Stone, assistant manager of the Vancouver Grain Exchange, estimated Wednesday Vancouver elevators held 13,-500,000 bushels of all grains.

W. H. Rowland, assistant manager of the Canadian Wheat Board office in Vancouver, estimated 5,000,000 bushels of No. 2 grain in local elevators would be in the wet classification. And there is still an estimated 80,-000,000 bushels of wet grain on the prairies, he added.

Canada will not permit shipment of wet grain to its markets because it affects the milling process, degrading the flour, said Mr. Rowland.

"It would spoil our reputation if poor quality could be added."

Reg Alda, regional manager of the Board of Grain Commissioners, said that at the eight elevators in the Vancouver area are working around the clock, the maximum capacity is about 125,000 bushels aday.

Some carriers, such as the Canadian Sandefjord, which has been waiting in the harbor more than a month, have a capacity of 1,000,000 bushels.

Alberta farmers have been complaining of the delay by their marketing organization, the Alberta Wheat Pool, which states in its newsletter:

"It is time for organized action and every grain producer and every owner of a grain dryer is urged to take the situation seriously."

In addition to grain ships, other vessels are finding it difficult to find berths in the harbor, thus hampering shipments of other commodities.

C. M. Morris, manager of the Vancouver Board of Trade said:

"It is extremely unfortunate that once again the reputation of this port is being endangered by a situation which has thrown the schedule of shipments considerably out of line.

"We are deeply concerned not only about the effect which this may have on the port of Vancouver in the future, but on the effect which it may have on Canada's ability to market grain products competitively if better service can be secured from other countries."

Plastic Car Designed

Formacar, the first all-plastic car designed for production at a cost equal to or lower than that of a steel bodied model, will be displayed by Borg-Warner Corporation at the Society of Automotive Engineers exposition in Detroit in January. The car body, formed of sheets of Dermoplastic, has 20 plastic parts compared with 150 for a conventional steel-bodied car.

Import Duty

Industry Complains to Board

OTTAWA (CP) — The $300,000,000 Canadian electrical wire and cable industry complained to the tariff board Wednesday about a proposed increase in the import duty on polyethylene plastics that might cost it $200,000 a year.

The Canadian Electrical Manufacturers Association said the board should not recommend the increase in tariffs to 10 per cent from the current rate of 7½ per cent of landed value sought by four big foreign-owned chemical firms.

Some confusion entered the board's hearing in its third day when the association's spokesman, F. W. Perkins of Toronto, said his brief was drawn up in the belief that all 12 wire and cable manufacturers would be affected. In fact, only one will be, and he did not identify it.

The proposed tariff increase would apply to imports of polyethylene in its almost pure state, without additives. Polyethylene containing additives now comes into Canada with a 10-per-cent duty. Polyethylene compounds also bear a higher rate of duty.

John F. Holbrook of Cryovac Ltd., Mississauga, Ont., a subsidiary of W. R. Grace of the United States, said this confusion should be ended. He said there may be importers of polyethylene who get the benefit of the cheap 7½-per-cent rate and because customs officers are unable to detect additives in the plastic they import.

Mr. Perkins said the $200,000 additional cost of higher duties on polyethylene might be inconsequential for an industry that has annual sales totalling $300,-000,000. But without the tariff increase, the money could be spent on wire and cable research and development.

Contemporary Music Hits A Low Note in Great Britain

EDITOR'S NOTE: Staff reporter Barry Grills has just returned from a three-week visit in London, England, where he surveyed the contemporary scene. The following is the first of a series on music and youth in the Mod capital of the world.

* * *

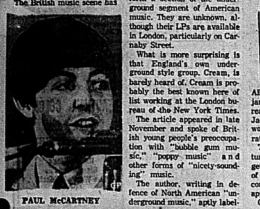
BY BARRY GRILLS
Staff Reporter

The British music scene has been defined as lacking character by an American journalist tunes from the United Kingdom.

The majority of English teenagers and young adults have never heard of Big Brother and the Holding Company, the Grateful Dead, the Iron Butterfly, Moby Grape, Stepenwolf, Canned Heat and Country Joe and the Fish.

These particular groups form a section of the underground segment of American music. They are unknown, although their LPs are available in London, particularly on Carnaby Street.

What is more surprising is that England's own underground style group, Cream, is barely heard of. Cream is probably the best known here of list working at the London bureau of the New York Times.



The article appeared in late November and spoke of British young people's preoccupation with "bubble gum music," "poppy music" and other forms of "nicety-sounding" music.

The author, writing in defence of North American "underground music," aptly labelled the bands in this category.

The average English lass or mod, when asked what he or she thinks of Cream, will look puzzled and say "I've never heard of them."

However, things aren't totally dismal for the group that has been labelled the greatest in the world.

Cream's farewell concert in

PAUL McCARTNEY

Youth Parade

Albert Hall in London was jammed with mourners who realized that Eric Clapton, Jack Bruce and Ginger Baker would soon be going their separate ways.

The BBC was on hand to capture the concert and put it together with an analysis of Cream's contribution to the contemporary music scene. It appeared Jan. 5.

Comments and opinions afterwards were close to unanimous in declaring Cream "horrible," "disgusting," "dreadful" and "absolutely awful."

Many English pop people feigned headaches to describe their reaction to the music and style of Cream.

Reaction to the Cream's concert exemplified the New York Times reporter disappointment in the British pop music taste and the unhappy docility of the Beatles and the Rolling Stones.

Yet, since the advent of the Beatles, Britain has been the trend-setter in style. Anyone interested in future musical fads and styles look with interest to what's happening in the mod capital of the world.

Rock 'n' roll of the old days is undergoing a tremendous revival and bubble gum music (remember Yummy Yummy and Simon says) continues to gain popularity.

On top of that there is the adult styling pat forth by Tom Jones and Englebert Humperdink.

After, three hours of radio listening in Britain, any North American music lover notices the intense commercialism of mod music.

The most popular style of music in Britain has not yet been named, but could be described as "pub rock" a singalong type of rock 'n' roll.

About two weeks ago the number one group in England was the Marmalade, a Scottish group complete with kilts who recorded the Lennon and McCartney tune, Oh Di Li Oh Di La.

That song could easily fall into the classification of "pub rock". So could the song the Marmalade dethroned — Lily the Pink.

The group that recorded Lily the Pink is the Scaffold, a band led by Mike McGear (actually Mike McCartney, brother of Paul).

Those were the Days My Friends, recorded by Mary Hopkins, is another example —almost a 1968 version of the Beer Barrel Polka.

Mary Hopkins was discovered on a weekly television program when Twiggy spotted her and called Paul McCartney.

Probably the latest stylish group to appear in England, besides the Beatles themselves and the Rolling Stones is Grapefruit, who record for Apple, the Beatles' company.

Stymied by the famous four's lack of interest in them Grapefruit has resorted to wearing yellow suits and singing golden goodies that are in the opinion of most music experts, done badly.

"But what of American influence in Britain?

It's all Motown music. The most popular group must be Diana Ross and the Supremes followed in a close second with the Four Tops.

This is the music that monopolizes activity at British parties.

"Then there are the Beatles, who, having made their fortune, are content to turn out anything from polkas to Sunday - concert - in - the - park tunes. Paul McCartney has written a tune predicted to replace 76 Trombones.

The Rolling Stones have resorted to fighting drug charges and their musical output is almost nil.

If it looks dismal, we North Americans had better be prepared. It may be only a short length of time until commercial pop monopolizes our music, too.

Basketball Wins Highlight Week at Nicholson

BY JUDY SCHREIDER

Sports highlighted the week at Nicholson Catholic College.

Thursday night the Nicholson basketball teams scored a triple win against Tweed with scores of 68-25, 62-24 and 27-16. If the outcome of these games bears any indication of results of future meets the boys' basketball teams are well on their way to another successful season. Of course, they will merely be following the path already set for them by their female counterparts.

Girls' basketball season ended last Saturday with the bantam tournament which was held at Moira. Nicholson's team fought on in the great Irish tradition only to suffer defeat in the play-offs by a four-point margin. Congratulations to Miss Gist and the girls for all their wins of the past season.

Whether it be the Hong Kong flu or an early case of spring fever, students and faculty alike have been struck by the current bout of sickness.

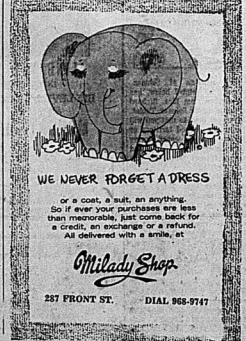
The outbreak could be easily explained if examinations were only a week away; fever would result from high tension, aches and pains would be attributed to lack of sleep. So much for psychological sickness. The illness at Nicholson is real and the germ is spreading. So beware — the fighting Irish are under the weather.

Actress Heather Young guards her skin against the ravages of winter with an application of baby powder. The powder prevents clamminess and the resulting chapping and chafing in cold weather.

Baby Powder Pampers Winter-worn Skin

By REBA AND BONNIE CHURCHILL

Is complexion your hang-up? Then, you'll never make the winter scene, giving in to windburn and chapping. Battle those beauty killers with a defensive skin care program.



Any climate-fighters wear a weather - formulated foundation base that screens off chill and glare. They continue their protective guard even during snooze-time by massaging face in pure baby oil (either warmed or at room temperature). Excess lubricant is buffed off with tissue or cloth, so a silky film remains to battle dryness as you sleep.

And, for those moments between get-going and get-slowing, experts advise a few minutes for beauty-saving measures. For instance, increase cosmetics' staying power by powdering between each application of rouge, eyeliner and stick. As actress Heather Young, seen in the 20th-TV series, Land of the Giants, discovered, talc sets make-up. For final dusting, fold puff in half and employ a steady, tapping action — especially at sides of nose and corners of mouth. The slipple movement causes powder to cling to skin, rather than to surface complexion.

Weather-guard the rest of your body against chapping and reddening. Sprinkle baby powder in your winter wardrobe when pulling on hose, boots and gloves. Powder comforts skin and keeps hands from beaming clammy. Then, if you must remove gloves outdors, a blast of wind seldom turns fresh rough and red. With a little precaution, notice how winter skin soon becomes summer smooth, even though you are constantly joggling from steamy indoors to crisp outdoors.

The department of national health and welfare says a drug taken without a doctor's knowledge may make it more difficult for him to diagnose an ailment.

A minute ago, she smiled, kissed you good bye, and said have a nice trip, dear.

Didn't you know that two could fly as cheaply as 1 and 3/4?

She was hoping you'd take her with you this time.
Sure, it's a business trip, but she wouldn't have been in the way, really. While you were being business-like all day, she would have been perfectly content to window-shop those nice stores, maybe get her hair done, go to a matinee, then meet you later for dinner and a little night life.

Deep down, don't you think it might be nicer than coming home to a pout? We do, so we'll let you take your wife with you next time for 75% of your fare: to any Air Canada destination in North America.

Readers in 30 Countries Follow Andy Capp's Antics

By PAUL DEAN
Arizona Republic Staff

Andy Capp is alive and drinking nicely in a fourth floor walkup over a Greek barbershop in grubby Grape Street, London, W.C.2.

He stands six hands tall to a brass rail and the barmaid's bosom. Most nights he's across the street at The Crown sipping the suds and flicking darts with his left hand.

Andy Capp is lazy, snoozes on the sofa in his socks, ducks the vicar and gets a weekly allowance from his wife because he refuses the responsibility attached to cashing cheques—mainly because he never learned to feel comfortable in banks "around all that brass."

You find Andy by lingering at the doorbell of Flat 7, Queen Alexandra Mansions, creaking up three twilight flights in an elevator left over fr om a Count Dracula movie, then walking the rest.

"Well, c'mon in lad . . ." wife's got the tea made but I'll have a brown ale, got to keep in character y'know," grins the man with vowels rich as the north country ale of his native Yorkshire.

Then the image fades. Can this be Andy Capp? The man wearing a gold watch, cuff links and pinky ring. All are rich complements to a navy blue shirt and aloaca-knit tie beneath a hound's tooth suit that was created from my dad, wore his 11-room apartment is magnificence in velvet and gilt; the fine splendor from blue, clamshell wash basins, Wedgwood thingumybobs and lith century silk wallpaper.

"So you can see Andy has been real good to me," Reg Smyths affable R e g Smythe, creator, artist and self-inspiration for Publishers-Hall Syndicate's Andy Capp, the clothhatted hero-cum-heavy of a comic strip now appearing in 30 countries and 500 newspapers.

In the English - speaking world he remains Andy Capp, a name chosen from offerings of Charlie, Fred and Andy Capp, because it plays with handicap," a role this character fills admirably for his cartoon wife Flo.

To the Germans, he's Willie Wacker. To Swedish he's Hans Kasket Karl. And in Italy he becomes Angelo Capello.

But to the world Andy Capp remains the little guy who is some part of all men: arguimentative and stubborn to the point of childishness, an apparent wife hater because he thinks adoration is a weakness, full of quirks that make him ordinary, one of us; and we, if we could only see ourselves, are very, very funny.

Smythe, who went from a $14-a-week temporary postal clerk, Class 3 ("and they don't come any lower than that") to a $120,000-a-year cartoonist, "and I can't earn any more without losing it and more in income tax . . . and I'm forced to live in Switzerland!") is not quite so analytical about Andy Capp.

"He's a horrible little man really, and I've always a little ashamed at the things he gets up to," he frowned. "But still, I must say, he's a lot better now than when I first started drawing him 10 years ago."

In those early hungry days Smythe often had Andy actually knocking his wife to the ground — the ground being a tatty, hall, cheek grazes and all.

"And he'd be standing over her saying something like, 'I'm a man of few pleasures but this is one of them,' which was really terrific," confessed Smythe.

"So now I only draw a fight cloud and maybe leave the impression that Andy has kicked Florrie in the backside . . . but you never actually see him thump her," he added.

Despite Andy's obvious character failings, Smythe is free to admit that Andy is an extension of his creator's subconscious — except for the innumerous of wife beating and adultery. Andy Capp and Flo are childless because Andy just couldn't get away with the things he does if there were children in the house." Smythe and Vee, short for Vera, his handsome wife of 18 years, have no children.

Andy is a bug for Saturday afternoon soccer games and pub snooker — so is Reg. Andy was a Tommy in North Africa during World War II — as was Reg. Andy hangs filterless cigarettes in his lower lip until they are ¼-inch away from scorching — so does Reg, a hangover habit from the days when happiness was half a Woodbine.

That stitle of A n d y Capp's appearance and personality doesn't come from Smythe. Letters from people close to the couple.

"Florrie is actually the name of my mother in Hunslet, pool, near Newcastle, right down to the shape of her eyebrows and hairline," grins Smythe. "Not that me mother minds: she's a big wheel in Hunslet now — busy running around telling everybody she's Andy Capp's mother.

"Andy's cloth cap and muffler came from my dad, were 'em all the time; and there's a man who could really kick a foo'ball, smash, just like that, straight as an arrow," he said with pride.

"And if you look closely at Chalky, the vicar and the rentman, they are really all duplicates of Andy — without the cap," Smythe continued. "That's only because I first did have any drawing ability, still don't, and everything I see is flat with no perspective."

Smythe paused — only to toss up his tiger bone to the kitchen for another beer.

He returned to report the creation of Reg and Andy.

After World War II, Smythe became a postal clerk who challenged his superiors to a branch office drama group. As is always the misguided way, a friend suggested he should start drawing for a living. Smythe became a trainee artist with a commercial a r t firm.

"My instructor once told me that if I wanted to draw for me own amusement then that would be fine, but I'd never be good enough to do it for a living," grinned the Van Gogh-bearded Smythe. "Just think, I did that for a living with me as an agent he would now be getting 25 percent of $120,000."

But Smythe persisted despite the advice, accepted a challenge to draw for a living as a do-or-go broke effort, and astounded himself (and his income tax . . . and his two draw-ings — at $7 each.

Smythe was still only a ripple on the surface of the cartooning world when he went to work for the London Daily Herald in the early after his 1950 marriage.

He labored at hand-lettered headlines, captions for already established artists and two comic strips for the Mirror Group before publications, "although they didn't go at all well."

In 1957, to answer a Mirror call for a Yorkshire-brogued character to boost the paper's flagging north country circulation, Reg invented Andy.

PUBLICITY GUIDELINES

Since then, creator and created have gone far, but always inside rigid guidelines imposed by Smythe on them both.

He shuns personal publicity and interviews, prefers not to be seen at the fashionable places, and this year chose to spend some of his new fortune on taking his in-laws on a European vacation rather than buy his wife a new diamond ring.

Smythe has resisted constant appeals to visit the United States "because it's just not worth going all that way to promote something I don't feel is very good." He last appeared on television five years ago, owing to terror of a longdisappeared speech impediment, a violent stutter that had Smythe stamping his foot to stop the flow of s's.

He proves the integrity of Reg and Andy by not allowing other artists to assist with either ideas or basic artwork "on my little bloke."

"Right now Andy is 50 years old, just like him and he's beginning to show a bit, isn't he?" he said. "So when Reg dies, so does Andy."

Unlike American cartoonists, Smythe, in fear of overexposure, has shunned plea'z to allow the marketing of Andy Capp hats, dolls and T-shirts.

"But I've decided maybe it is time to relax a little now," he said. "Recently I had lunch with a chap and I've agreed to an idea to introduce 500 Andy Capp fish 'n' chips shops across America."

Success has also brought a little confusion to Smythe's uncluttered comprehension and expression.

"Some years ago an interviewer asked me deep psychological questions about Andy — and I just didn't have the answers," he explained. "So I started working hard at Andy, but I still can't understand or really explain him.

"Oh, I now know he's a good giggle in the morning when the world gets up; but sometimes I worry about his behavior, the example he's setting." frowned the artist imp from behind his tortoiseshell-rimmed glasses.

Smythe's confusion is one reason why readers around the world will never see Andy Capp without his eye-blocking cloth cap.

"Draw Andy without his cap? Blimey, I wouldn't dare — because I'm not at all sure what he looks like under neath," he said.

Parliament's Work Is Speeded

OTTAWA (CP)—The score after two days was impressive. Parliament, in a spirit of co-operation aided by a new set of rules, got past the second-reading stage of seven bills—four Tuesday, and three Wednesday—and the Opposition even was saying nice things about the Liberal ministry.

Latter finished four farm bills to the standing committee on agriculture for detailed study. The Commons Wednesday gave second reading to proposed changes in the Farm Machinery Syndicates Credit Act and to legislation providing Canada's ratification of a new system whereby the International Monetary Fund could issue a new form of international paper currency known as Special Drawing Rights.

This system could be used by member governments to bolster currency reserves against trade and payment deficits. The legislation was referred to the finance committee for detailed study.

There was quick second reading, too, for a measure to regulate the marking of articles containing precious metals.

That speaks for the mood of co-operation.

As for the compliments, Conservative Thomas M. Bell, member for Saint John-Lancaster, made Transport Minister Paul Hellyer's day. Mr. Bell had asked a question about Maritime freight rates and he was so obviously pleased by Mr. Hellyer's reply that he rose a second time to say "things look good for the new year so far as his ministry is concerned."

And all Mr. Hellyer had to promise to earn that vote of confidence was that he hoped to be in a position soon to present the government's policy on transportation problems in the Atlantic provinces.

Agriculture Minister H. A. Olson after two days eased his farm machinery legislation into committee stage. He said legislation permitting loans to farm syndicates for the purchase of machinery would be extended to brothers on reserves and Indian bands and he did not get a whoop of real opposition.

Jean Dixon's Horoscope

For January 17

Your birthday today: Make your own choices this year, and take full responsibility. Profound meditation is essential; curb the surging impatience that arises over any minor hindrance. Care is needed to protect cherished relationships. Today's natives tend to enjoy fads, sports. They may suffer from passing periods of temper.

ARIES (Mar. 21 — Apr. 19): Your own needs interfere with your work if you push too hard. Cater to what energy you have available, and seek some assistance to cover the rest of the project. Plan ahead for a fest-break. Get competent medical advice where necessary.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 — May 20): Do something about long-range career plans. Cognitive work is favored strongly. Some long forgotten incident is brought back, or somebody you had lost track of.

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): You surprise yourself with your tact in coping with tense, older people today. Your group affairs can be furthered with just a little effort.

CANCER (June 21 — July 22): Strive for an extrovert mode, stay in the highest humor. Your loved ones will respond readily to honest feelings. Keep your words simple allowing consideration of every point you make.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22): Temporary pressure comes up in your work; something has to be done sooner than planned, and change of direction is involved. If you are in charge, be sure you have the whole revision in mind then move at once.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 — Sept. 22): Purely creative inclinations vigorously. Worry over money is pointless. It defeats your purpose and blunts your intuitive powers.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 — Oct. 22): Today may reveal an opportunity long unnoticed. Dress your smartest and go forth in blithe spirits. Correspondence can be profitable. Shopping brings some unexpected bargains. It is not too soon to think about vacation.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23—Nov. 21): Your energy is up, and so is your competition in all areas. Money matters need to be checked. Round up your work thoroughly so as to have a clear weekend.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): Quick decisions turn out to be as valid as any, according to how free of worry you happen to be. The afternoon and evening hours are slow and can be enjoyed more leisurely with social and romantic conversations.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 — Jan. 19): This is an average day, with a little heavier burden than usual. Family conditions are at some concern, but should not intrude on your work.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb. 18): Relatives and their welfare may present some complications. There are important (to you) individuals who are in accord and understand your point of view but who will vouchsafe nothing unless there is a crisis.

PISCES (Feb. 19 — Mar. 20): Your relationships with other people are changing your situation subtly. The personal touch pays off today in your work.

Three Spacemen Land, Fourth Still in Orbit

Way Is Paved For Sky Base

MOSCOW (Reuters) — The Soviet spaceship Soyuz 4 soft-landed safely in central Asia today, carrying the two cosmonauts who Thursday made the world's first space transfer, and the craft's commander, Soyuz 4, which took part in the world's first docking of two manned spaceships, was brought down in a pre-set region 25 miles northwest of Karaganda in the Kazhkstan Steppes about 350 miles from the cosmodrome at Baikonur, where it was launched Tuesday.

Its crew of Lt.-Col. Vladimir Shatalov, 41, and cosmonauts Yevgeny Khrunov and Alexei Yeliseyev, who made Thurs-

Benson Defends Estate Tax

LONDON, Ont. (CP) — The federal government's new estates tax plan is not an undue burden on the transfer of family farms or businesses between generations, Finance Minister E. J. Benson said Thursday.

He said in a speech to the London West Liberal Association that the forced sales of a farm or business to meet inheritance taxes has seldom occurred. Usually, a farm or business is sold because the deceased's family does not want to carry on.

Mr. Benson has been criticized in the Commons and the Liberal caucus for the tax plan he introduced in his Oct. 22 budget.

It frees estates from taxation when passed directly from a man to his widow, but doubles the rate on other inheritances to make up for the loss of federal revenues on direct widows' inheritances. Critics say this hits severely those who inherit a family farm or business.

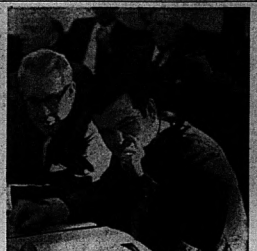
day's walk in space, were reported Wednesday.

Shatalov had been up in space for about 72 hours, the other two 48 hours.

Soyuz 5, the sister ship involved in the docking Thursday, was continuing its flight with Lt.-Col. Boris Volynov still on board.

A communique issued by the Soviet news agency Tass said the three cosmonauts who landed today first entered the landing capsule of their two-compartment-vehicle before a braking engine was fired and the entire ship went into a descent trajectory.

After the braking engine was switched off, the descent capsule separated from the service module and glided down over the landing area.



A parachute was opened and retrorockets were fired to effect the soft touchdown in a zone where a recovery crew, scientists and reporters were waiting.

While the landing was taking place, Soviet scientists were assessing the almost dizzying prospects opened up by the docking and walk in space.

The docking was seen as the forerunner to the construction of a giant orbiting space station to be used as a staging and launching point for trips to the moon and the planets.

But there were indications that the Russians were still far from laying the cornerstone of a permanent space station.

Observers noted that Soyuz 4 had to detach itself completely first from Soyuz 5 and then from its service module before docking. Apparently it could not leave in space the working compartment with which it went aloft and which, in the future, is to be a component of space stations.

Welfare Chiefs Horse-trading

OTTAWA (CP) — Welfare ministers settled down today to claim horse-trading on social services after an almost ritual renewal Thursday of Quebec's demand that the federal government vacate the family allowance field.

The federal government offered Thursday to share the costs of rehabilitative care of juvenile delinquents and pressed the provinces to extend welfare services to Indians under existing cost-sharing arrangements.

Nova Scotia, Newfoundland and Saskatchewan reaped immediate benefit from the juvenile delinquents offer. They have already passed necessary legislation to put juvenile offenders under welfare officers' care rather than in the usual correctional institutions.

For such juveniles, Ottawa will pay half the maintenance costs. Other provinces can get the same benefits by bringing section 21 of the Juvenile Delinquents Act into force.

Saskatchewan, which took this step in September, 1967, would get payments retroactive to that time but the amount has yet to be determined in discussion with federal authorities.

Extension of welfare services to Indians proved the most contentious question of the opening day of the closed conference, federal Health Minister John Munro told reporters Thursday.

While the provinces agreed to negotiate such a move, they wanted Ottawa to pay the full cost, rather than use the cost-sharing formula of the Canada Assistance Plan which would cover between 85 and 97 per cent.

The four western provinces were the ones mainly interested in this proposal. Ontario has already taken the step.

Federation of Agriculture For Single Sales Agency

TORONTO (CP) — A special committee on farm income in Ontario Thursday weathered a slashing criticism of its proposal for a single agency to market all farm produce in the province and got the support of the powerful Ontario Federation of Agriculture on its recommendation for one general farm organization.

There was applause from 350 delegates to the Ontario Conference on Agriculture as Charles Munro, OFA president, gave its promise to "work actively to develop a new general farm organization and to assist in a certification vote to establish it so we will know if the farmers in Ontario want it."

There was no word on the attitude of the Ontario Farmers' Union, the second major agriculture organization in the province, frequently at odds with the OFA.

The conference is examining the report of the income committee which proposed a sweeping reform not only in the organization of the agricultural community but in rural life in general.

The committee, established by Agriculture Minister William Stewart at the request of farmers in 1966, has proposed a comprehensive food production and marketing system under the direction of a Food Supply Agency.

It also has called for a General Farm Organization which would act as official spokesman in dealing with government, consumers, industry and other segments of society.

Tradeau Returns

OTTAWA (CP) — Prime Minister Trudeau returned to Canada early today after a 13-day European trip during which he attended the Commonwealth prime ministers' conference, had a private audience with Pope Paul, and ticked off the press for its "crummy behavior."

Mr. Trudeau's chartered Air Canada jet arrived here at 3:20 a.m. EST after a non-stop flight from Rome. The prime minister stepped from the aircraft and went directly to his waiting limousine.

Surgeons Operate After Two Months' Study

PEKING (AFP) — Chairman Mao Tse-tung's educational theories are being put into operation in China, which plans to fill universities with workers and peasants after sending masses of students to factories and fields.

Peking newspapers gave a whole front-page Thursday to the first results of this experiment in Shanghai, where 11 workers were sent to a hospital Nov. 6 to be taught medicine and surgery.

The worker-students studied at patients' bedsides instead of delving into books. The report of an investigation shows optimism about the results.

For example, those learning surgery could take out an appendix after two months, it was stated. Those who are learning general medicine treated the usual illnesses and specialists gave urgent treatment for fractures.

Pearson Named As Chancellor

OTTAWA (CP) — Carleton University announced Thursday the appointment of former prime minister Lester B. Pearson as chancellor, succeeding Dr. C. J. Mackenzie.

Mr. Pearson, 71, already is a member of the Carleton faculty. He was named a professor of international affairs after his retirement as prime minister last April.

In recent months he has been on leave most of the time as chairman of the World Bank's commission on international development.

High Schools Close June 13 - - - Davis

TORONTO (CP) — Education Minister William Davis Thursday re-affirmed his decision to extend the high school teaching year to June 13 and declared the matter settled.

Mr. Davis said his department have been enrolled with students and teachers since last November when it was announced that the academic year in high schools would be 184 days.

Mr. Davis said the ruling added five days to the school year term in effect last year, but students and teachers claim it added 10 days since classes last year ended June 3.

Soviet Feat Hailed

Americans Will Be Small Fry In Space in Mid-70s--Lovell

LONDON (AP) — Europe today hailed the Soviet space station achievement and some newspapers said it put the Russians back neck and neck or even ahead of the United States in the space race.

Air correspondents pointed out the military advantages of a permanently manned Soviet space station orbiting the earth.

Sir Bernard Lovell, director of Britain's radio astronomy station, said:

"In a short, time, we can expect to witness the build up of a permanent space station in earth orbit. This would determine the trend of Russian space activities for a long time ahead.

"It will certainly be used for important astronomical and geophysical investigations and probably with a shuttle service of Russian scientists from earth."

Lovell added: "Though it still seems unlikely that the Russians can be in competition with the Apollo program for a lunar landing, it will undoubtedly give them great flexibility for lunar and planetary exploration in the 1970s."

He claimed the Russian achievement gives them a four-year lead over the United States in techniques of assembling space equipment in orbit.

Lovell said that if all went well with the Soviet program "my guess is that the Americans will be looking rather small fry by the middle 70s."

British Labor Government Plans Curb on Wildcat Strikes

LONDON (AP) — The Labor government outlined today a politically dangerous plan to curb wildcat strikes and reorganize Britain's union structure. It includes provisions for a cooling-off period and fines.

The program was contained in a government white paper the main provisions of which already had been leaked through discussions with business and union leaders. Both objected vigorously—the unions because they felt it too strong management because it wanted tougher sanctions against strikes.

Productivity Minister Barbara Castle took the program through the cabinet over opposition from some of its union-oriented members.

Staking her political reputation on it, she began appealing for support within her party before the white paper was published. She called a meeting to explain the proposals to 135 Labor members of Parliament who are backed by unions. They were summoned to London before Parliament reassembles Monday after its Christmas recess.

Final details of the proposed new labor law were not given in the white paper. But they are not expected to be enacted at least until fall—and then only if labor MPs can be held in line.

The white paper seeks in on wildcat strikes—Britain's "tea break" strikes over petty grievances which usually reflect revolts against union leadership or management and account for 95 per cent of all stoppages.

Most are short and sudden, but can immobilize the economy. Statistics in the white paper showed them concentrated in strategic export industries—the docks, the motor industry, shipbuilding and the coal mines.

The government's program is based on the argument that many such strikes are the result of failure to use regular grievance machinery, or the lack of such channels to thrash out disputes.

It proposed a 28-day cooling-off period—called a "conciliation pause"—to force unions and employers to the conference table. The government, in the meantime, would issue a back-to-work order. It also could include an order to management to withdraw a disputed work practice until it was discussed. If either side refused, it could be fined by a special industrial board. Union funds could be attached to collect the money.

But the white paper added that the 28-day period could be applied only once. It said that if strikes "take place after the exhaustion of an agreed disputes procedure, society can have no complaint."

The government also proposed setting up a commission on industrial relations to investigate union organization and jurisdictional disputes. If the government accepted the commission's recommendations, it would order them into effect. Unions or managements which refused to comply could be fined.

Competition for Design Announced in Trenton

TRENTON — Work on Trenton's proposed three million dollar air force memorial was given the go ahead today as the architectural contest to determine the design of the building was officially announced this morning.

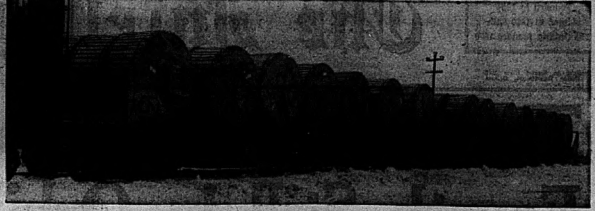
The competition, which is open to the over 1,000 members of the Royal Architectural Institute of Canada, was officially announced today by advisor for the project, Eric Arthur.

The contest, which will consist of two stages of judging will allow work to start by Sept. 71 is estimated that the cost of the proposed memorial will be displayed across Canada.

Judges for the competition include Dr. Charles Moore, head of the school of Art and Architecture at Yale University, Charles Elliott Trudeau, brother of Canada's Prime Minister and Brig. Gen. D. R. Adamson, chairman of the board of directors for the project.

Maj. Norman Cairns, chairman of the publicity committee, said today, "we've been waiting for the go ahead. Now that we've got it we can really get moving."

Although the design of the building is not known, the architects will have certain standards to work by. The unit is to take up 30,000 square feet on a 35-acre site northwest of the 6RD road. The land has been donated by the federal government.



The building will contain an interdenominational chapel which will seat 700 to 1,000 people along with two sub - chapels.

A convension hall, the size of which still remains indefinite, will make up a major portion of the building. The size of the actual display area will depend on the final plan.

Capt. Tony Leicester, international co-ordinator for the project, remarked that the architect chosen for the job will design the interior as well as the exterior and will also landscape the area. This, it is believed, will give the area an atmosphere of uniformity.

"The funds which will be used to construct the unit," stated Capt. Leicester, "will come entirely from public donations."

He said the fund would be divided into four avenues of operation — the air element, air cadets, the Air Force Association, and members of the industrial community.

Examinations Start at Quinte, Moira Schools

Students at Quinte and Moira Secondary Schools began writing mid-winter examinations today. They continue for most of next week.

The two high schools are experimenting with a system of only two sets of examinations during the year.

Some students will write only one set. Those who obtain a 60 per cent average on their year's work will be exempts from the June examinations.

At Quinte, students will receive one-half their marks from their term work and the other half from their examination scores.

At Centennial and BCI, two sets of examinations are held during the year — at Christmas and in the spring. A third set is written in June by those not exempted for high standings on the year's work.

Mid - winter examinations are part of the new trend in education. The aim is to cut down the time spent preparing, writing and marking examinations.

Extension of the school year by 10 days has resulted in the loss of some of the time required to evaluate each student's work at the end of the year. Lowering the per-cent age required for exam exemption from 66 to 60 will result in fewer papers to mark, and hopefully gain more time for evaluation conferences.

Trenton Memorial

Laser Flame Unique

TORONTO (CP) — A Toronto architect says an eternal flame at an RCAF memorial to be built at the Canadian Forces Base in Trenton, Ont., could be the first of its kind in the world.

Eric Arthur, professional adviser to a country-wide competition for design of the $2,700,000 memorial, said plans call for the flame to be operated by a laser beam.

Judging begins May 26 and the four finalists will receive $6,500 each. The winner of the second stage in August will receive an additional $23,500 when the contract is signed, he said.

Davis Suggests 12 Month Year

TORONTO (CP) — Officials of school boards and teachers' organizations in other centres have praised Education Minister William Davis' proposal for summer school credit courses but warned it could be expensive.

Mr. Davis said at a news conference Thursday he was prepared to discuss provincial aid to any school board that wanted to offer credit courses during the summer.

Education subsidies now are given only to school boards operating in summer school making up courses for students who have failed a course during the regular September - to - June session.

Barry Lowes, chairman of the Metropolitan Toronto school board, called the suggestion an "educational breakthrough," but said it could be expensive.

Nora Hodgins, executive secretary of the Ontario Teachers' Federation, called it "definitely a good idea." She warned that teachers would have to be paid for extra service, outdoor programs would require transportation and classrooms would have to be air-conditioned.

Mr. Davis said in an interview it "would be premature" to estimate costs of the government offer because few boards would be in a position to begin regular credit classes this summer.

He suggested department aid be only for operating costs probably on the same basis as during the traditional school year.

Little Reaction From Chairman

Education minister William Davis' suggestion that school boards offer extra - credit high school courses in the summer caused little reaction in Belleville.

"It was obvious this was coming," said Hastings County Board of Education chairman James Clarke this morning.

"When the department of education discontinued summer school supplementary courses to enable students to make up lost credits, we realized we would have to take over."

For several years the department has conducted summer school in Kingston for students who failed one or two courses during the year.

"However, we are in a state of flux at the moment, awaiting the arrival of our new director Feb. 1," he added. "We have no idea now of the program we are going to offer this summer, but decisions will have to be made after the director is well - in - line."

Mr. Clarke said he is unable to envision the schools being in use for a full 12 month period. Time is required for marking of final examinations and graduation of students. A month is required to accomplish necessary maintenance work and the schools must be empty at the time.

"Teachers vacations would occupy another month," added the chairman. "At the moment, a full 10-month operation is the optimum we can expect."

Mr. Clarke also expressed concern for teachers up-grading and professional development courses.

"Some time must be allowed during the summer for teachers to take the necessary courses," he said.

Other trustees in the Belleville area were unavailable for comment. No official directive on the subject has been received at the Hastings County Board office.

IN MEMORIAM

CONNORS — In loving memory of our mother Lottie Connors who passed away Jan. 17, 1961. Today we are thinking of some-one

Who was patient, loving and true, Whose smile was as dear as the sunshine.

Dear Mother that someone was you.

To her we took to love her.
Both for family and friends,
And the sweetness of her memory,
Time can neither dim nor end.
The stillness said we'd miss her,
Sorrow words have proved too true,
We miss our best and dearest friend.
Dear Mother when we bid you
—Too dearly loved to ever be forgotten by daughter Florence and son-in-law Leo.

DUNCAN, John — In memory of our dear father and grandfather who died two years ago today.

Time moves on, but our shock We little thought his death so near,
We little thought we'd have to bear,
Without a parting without
The love
The farewell.
—Always remembered by daughter Ruth and family.

CONNORS — In loving memory of my mother Lottie Connors who went to rest on Jan. 17, 1961.

There's a face that haunts us ever,
There's a form we can't forget,
There's a heart we'll remember forever,
Though we've gone for years, and yet
There's a sad but sweet remembrance,
There's a memory fond and true,
There's a heart that beats for you.
And God will keep you safe.
—Always remembered by daughter Ruth, Mac and Sue.

Mrs. Ross Burtt

City Woman Heads Commission

The Belleville Transit Commission has a woman chairman for 1969.

She is Marylea Burtt, wife of Belleville chiropractor Ross R. Burtt, who considers her new position in the way of a challenge.

The challenge is to coax more people into riding buses and to at least hold the present deficit position of the city-owned bus line.

"I realize that we cannot hope to make money or even break even in the bus operation," she admits.

Already a busy wife and mother of two school children, Mrs. Burtt works three days a week in her husband's office but still feels that she needs an outside interest to keep her mind busy.

"I didn't want any role without a challenge and the Transit Commission certainly presents a challenge," she said.

Mrs. Burtt was named to the Commission in 1966 and succeeds Jack Ireland as Commission chairman.

In addition to her position as commission chairman and her role as wife and mother, Mrs. Burtt also takes an active interest in the Canadian Federation of University Women and has been named convenor for their regional conference to be held in Belleville next Oct.

One of her big aims as chairman of the Transit Commission will be to encourage more even to leave their cars at home and ride the city buses.

"Parking in Belleville is not the best and it costs only 30 cents to ride the bus" she points out.

* * *

Costs Increase More Than Revenue

The Belleville Transit Commission carried more passengers last year than in 1967, but operational costs are increasing faster than revenue.

In a report of last year's activities presented at the inaugural meeting of the Commission this week, it was shown that Belleville buses carried 897,886 passengers last year as compared with 894,367 in 1967. This is an increase of .3 per cent.

Chairman elect Mrs. Marylea Burtt says the commission is trying to improve bus service in the city which she claims already compares favorably with other bus operations across the country.

No point inside the city limits is more than five minutes walk from a bus stop, Mrs. Burtt says.

The city owned bus line purchased one new bus last year and hopes to add another this year.

But finances are the big problem with municipal bus operations and Belleville is no exception. No municipal bus line in Canada operates without a deficit, Mrs. Burtt says, and last year's tab for the city was budgeted at $44,000.

"The only way which we can hold the deficit without increasing fares is to increase the number of passengers," says Mrs. Burtt. "But it is a tough problem — our costs are increasing faster than our revenue."

It's Corby Library Again

The name of the late Senator Henry Corby, one of the city's better known benefactors, has again appeared on the Pinnacle Street library building. The name "Corby" is in recognition of the man mainly responsible for setting up the original library.

Chamber Moves on Carnival

The Belleville Chamber of Commerce is taking steps toward the sponsorship of a winter carnival this winter. Details were discussed yesterday at a meeting of the chamber directors.

The chamber has selected a chairman to head a committee to investigate and make recommendations regarding the sponsorship of the proposed carnival.

Yesterday "the directors voted to back the committee with a sum of money should it be needed to assist the project.

Chamber directors also discussed the taxation situation on pollution reducing equipment required by industries.

According to F. H. Bellstedt, one of the directors, sales tax on pollution reduction equipment should be waived — it being a federal and provincial government ordered requirement.

It was decided that Mr. Bellstedt would be able to offer support to the Ontario Chamber of Commerce which is also dissatisfied with the sales tax requirement.

In other action, the directors were informed of last minute details of the annual Belleville chamber meeting to be held on Jan. 27. Frederick Hellsten, a professor of economic geometry at Trent University, will be the guest speaker.

New chamber directors and an executive were also elected at yesterday's meeting.

President for 1969 will be Jack Ireland. Harry Fast and J. R. Belanger were elected to first and second vice presidents respectively.

Other directors for 1969 will be C. H. Buckley, J. R. Ellis, Donald Finkle, F. C. Murray, F. H. Bellsteit, R. P. U. Icely, D. J. Joss, W. Joyce, J. G. Mosley and Zdenek Kvarda.

Fire Protection A Problem

PICTON — The sparks of controversy are flying by a feared federal shutdown of Camp Picton may have ignited another slow-burning issue.

For years, the camp — home of a Canadian Guards battalion — has meant more than a direct economic boost-er.

For four surrounding townships it also has been fire protection — courtesy the camp's fire brigade.

If the camp closes it means these rural municipalities must find alternative fire-fighting service.

Involved are the townships of Hallowell, South Marysburg, Sophiasburg and Athol.

Camp fire chief Barney Walsh notes that over the years his brigade has been of considerable help in combatting fires in the neighborhood.

The nearest municipal service is the Picton fire department — but no agreement so far exists between the town and its rural neighbors.

One solution proposed has been the formation of a single department serving all 10 municipalities as Prince Edward County.

But the idea of a county fire department has met little response so far. As late as last Sept. county council rejected such a scheme.

Picton fire chief Duayne Foster estimates it could cost about $200,000 to create a county-wide system plus an additional annual outlay of $106,400.

One benefit would be the reduction of insurance charges — about $15 per premium on a $10,000 home.

'Shoots Up Home'

Man Charged in Incident

A 25-year-old unemployed man was being held for medical examination today after he shot up his home for more than eight hours last night.

Harry Grills, RR 6 Belleville, was charged with threatening after he gave himself up to police outside his home on Thurlow township's second concession.

Provincial police staked out the house — on a country road about a mile east of the city — through the night, but made no effort to force Grills' surrender.

"No attempt was made to get him out of the house," an OPP spokesman said. "We didn't feel he was endangering anybody's life."

Grills lives with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Clinton Grills, and arrived home about 8 p.m.

His twin cousins — Carol and Caroline Clapp, 17, were in the house at the time.

Police said the girls became alarmed when the man picked up a .303 rifle.

But Grills "told them he wouldn't hurt them," said the police official.

Nonetheless, they left and hurried to the nearby home of a relative.

From there, they telephoned Grills' parents, who were shopping at Towers Discount Department Stores west of Belleville.

The elder Mr. Grills immediately called provincial police.

Meantime, Grills had begun shooting the rifle inside the house.

In all, 11 shots were fired during the night.

Provincial police sent two cruisers to the scene — but refused any dramatic gestures.

Officers stayed down the road — halting motorists to ascertain if they were visitors to the Grills' home. They were cautioned to keep on going by the house.

Convinced there was no hazard to life if the situation were played cautiously, police settled down to wait out the armed man.

The vigil ended at 4.30 a.m. At that time, say police, they received a phone call from Grills at OPP district headquarters.

"He requested an officer to meet him — and said he would come out without a gun," said the OPP official.

Grills was told to come out unarmed. He obeyed — and walked toward waiting police.

He was taken to OPP headquarters and lodged in the cells where he was later charged.

This morning, Crown Attorney John Pringle was investigating facts of the case to decide what legal action would be taken.

Apps to Speak At UCS Meeting

C. J. Syl Apps, member of Provincial Parliament for Kingston and the Islands, will speak here on Wednesday, Jan. 29.

The well-known hockey star who was first selected to the House in 1963 will address the annual general meeting of United Community Services of Belleville and district. Open to members, contributors and the general public, the meeting will have a special emphasis on youth. Representatives of various youth groups who benefit from contributions to the United Community Fund will be in attendance.

Mr. Apps has been chairman of the Legislature's Select Committee on Youth for several years, and will speak on the work of his committee. The meeting will be held at the Sun Valley Motor Hotel. The reception is at 6.15 p.m. in the Charles Dickens Room, followed by dinner at 7.15 p.m., in the Gold Room. Tickets are $3 and are obtainable from United Community Services.

For those who are unable to attend the dinner, provision has been made for them to attend the speaker and business meeting at approximately eight p.m. .

Horse Killed

MADOC — A local man escaped injury when his car struck and killed a horse near here early Monday.

The accident occurred on the Queensboro county road about three miles north of here.

Damage to the car, driven by James Mouck, of Queensboro, was estimated at $300.

The horse, owned by Alexius Walsh, Madoc, was killed instantly.

Donors Needed Desperately: Lewis

Quinte district citizens donate only 41 per cent of the blood used in Belleville General Hospital.

The figure was given by Archie S. Lewis, chairman of the blood donor service of the Belleville Branch of the Canadian Red Cross.

"Even though the hospital is in an excellent position with regard to blood supplies, the Red Cross is in desperate need of donors," Mr. Lewis said.

"The reason," he said, "is that the Belleville hospital is drawing on blood donated in other communities to maintain the quota it needs."

"The hospital drew 3,741 units of blood from the central bank in Toronto last year," he said. "This blood was supplied to 700 patients in the hospital."

"Against these 3,741 units supplied to the hospital, only 1,316 were donated at the four clinics held in the city during the year, and 50 were donated by emergency donors.

"The figure would have been much lower without the support of students at Loyalist College, Moira Secondary School and Belleville Collegiate and Vocational Institute. In 1968 they gave a total of 250 pints."

"Our hospital is able to obtain an adequate supply of blood because other areas served by the Toronto depot give more than their quota. The extra blood we draw between 1962 and 1964, about 1,719 bottles of blood were donated annually. The amount was down to 1,516 in 1968.

"In peacetime, people forget about the desperate need for blood," said Mr. Lewis. "Yet modern surgical techniques require larger supplies of blood than ever before. Hospitals in the Toronto area, that in large quantities of blood from the central bank They need a large quantity of blood to prime the apparatus used for every open heart operation."

No blood is wasted, Mr. Lewis explained. If not used within 21 days, the blood is processed to obtain by-products needed in the treatment of many illnesses. As many as four different by-products can be extracted from blood.

Some citizens are frequent contributors of blood. The local Red Cross has 186 regular donors, all of whom have given over 20 times. One has given over 150 times, one has given over 100 times, 13 have given over 50 times, 29 have given over 25 times and 151 have given over 20 times.

Mr. Lewis is hopeful that donors will turn out in larger numbers than ever for the next clinic on Jan. 23 at Club Canara.

"If the number of blood donors continues to decline, while modern medical techniques continue to create a rising demand, the situation will become critical," he said. "After all, there is only one source of human blood."

All the funds spent to collect blood locally comes from money donated by citizens through the United Community Fund.

P.M. And The Press

Prime Minister Trudeau has been having his times with the Press. For one thing he has angered British observers at his apparent indifference to the fate of Anthony Grey, a Reuters reporter who has been under house arrest in Peking for the past 18 months.

Asked to comment, the prime minister replied briefly that he had not even studied the case. He conferred for a moment with External Affairs Minister Mitchell Sharp who said he did not know about it either.

One would think that both Mr. Trudeau and Mr. Sharp would have heard of the plight of Mr. Grey and of the effort to obtain his release. This is not just a matter of one man in custody, but rather an act of retaliation by the Chinese for the arrest of Chinese communist agitators following the riots in Hong Kong nearly two years ago.

To the British, this negative Canadian reaction is all the more suspect in view of Ottawa's repeated statements that it would like to establish diplomatic relations with communist China. In other words, was Mr. Trudeau non-committal because he did not wish to offend Peking?

Mr. Trudeau for his part has complained about the intrusion of both Canadian and overseas press men into his private life while attending the Commonwealth conference. Some sections of the British press are notorious for their emphasis on gossip, sensationalism and the private lives of celebrities. Even their political comment is tinged more with empty rhetoric than with any profundity of thought. It can also border on the offensive as when The Daily Telegraph (an establishment newspaper, incidentally) called Mr. Trudeau a "Trendy prig."

The prime minister was accused of indecision — and this at a conference where decision-making is of less consequence than the closer understanding that is reached through discussion of Commonwealth affairs. If Mr. Trudeau offered no new initiatives, neither did any of the other ministers. The prime minister knows that change, in politics, as in any sphere of life, comes more through natural evolution than through dogma or cut-and-dried decisions.

One other matter Mr. Trudeau may have pondered on his flight back to Canada was the indifference in Paris to his presence across the English Channel. The prime minister was reported disappointed not to have received an invitation to meet President de Gaulle. But is this any loss? The French president may be a friend of Quebec, but he is no friend of Canada. This country will survive very well without the aid of France.

University Scribes

One sure sign of the so-called "generation gap" is the immaturity displayed by the younger generation when it comes to the type of literature they turn out in student publications.

Consider The Carillon, organ of the Regina campus of the University of Saskatchewan. The December 6 issue of this magazine featured what has been described as a "sexually graphic illustration of a woman giving birth to a child while Ho Chi Minh (president of communist North Vietnam), flanked by sexual symbols, looked on."

The University board of governors, not surprisingly, took exception to such aberrations and has told the students it will no longer collect fees from the students which go toward publication of The Carillon.

Student Union President Dave Sheard claims that "if we pay for the thing, write the thing and distribute the thing, we should have control over it."

Yes, they should have control over it — but that is precisely what is lacking in this and similar childish meanderings from university scribes around the world. If there were control, and not a policy of complete freedom of expression, there would be nothing of The Carillon-style content in such publications.

This is not to imply support for censorship. Only a plea for more responsibility, more exercise of good taste on the part of student writers. But then, neither responsibility nor good taste seem very much in vogue among university students these days.

Five Turbulent Years

Grudging Praise for LBJ in Last Days of Presidency

By ARCH MacKENZIE

WASHINGTON (CP) President Johnson, a proud man whose days in high power have dwindled down to a precious few, had offered the epitaph he hopes will endure for his reign of five years and nine months.

"I believe that at least it will be said that we tried," he told the United States Tuesday night with uncharacteristic understatement.

"Trying" was what Lyndon Baines Johnson perhaps did best, even critics agree, and few Americans tried harder on more fronts. History seems certain to record that few presidents before him had more problems to grapple with.

His were turbulent years.

Monday, at mid-day, he hands over to Republican Richard Nixon and heads for his Texas ranch, with 250,000 photos of his days in office and at least 36,000,000 pieces of minutely-detailed documents so he can tell it like he thinks it was.

Washington takes its flavor from the presidency and it will not be the same at all without the lowering, restless, complex grained and sometimes devious Texas, such a contrast to the figure of caution, middle-class values and calculated inscrutability preferred by Mr. Nixon so far.

Already historians are trying to measure Johnson and his period but analysis will have to wait. But neither the man nor the era will be ignored, says Richard Neustadt, an academic with White House connections.

"This is not because historians will like LBJ in the way they liked Franklin Delano Roosevelt or Kennedy. . . . Rather I think it is because historians will find his personality and operating style compelling and baffling, hence interesting, like them or not."

Johnson's critics sometimes saw him as one large wart and he leaves with his personal popularity at a low ebb—lower certainly than his period of grandeur after slaying Barry Goldwater in the 1964 presidential election but higher than it had become when Vietnam was still a military impasse.

The American public tends to prefer its leaders on the blander side unless their name is Kennedy.

This is indicated by the fact that Dwight D. Eisenhower still is the most popular public figure living in the country, although his eight years as president were to many observers a do-nothing period that in fact spawned problems, including Vietnam, that eventually forced Johnson to abandon plans for another four years.

News week magazine has polled 10 prominent historians for their instant reading of Johnson's record.

Nine gave him B-plus or A ratings on domestic affairs—the 10th casts a B—but his highest marks in foreign affairs is B-plus and there are two Ds and two Cs, reflecting the Vietnam dissent.

Gross-all, he draws pretty good marks.

"His highly-promising Great Society program became a casualty of his increasing obsession with the ghastly and futile war in Vietnam," says historian Arthur Schlesinger Jr., who has opposed the war all along.

But even those who support it tend to blame it for Johnson's decline and fall.

In the end, the man who pulled beagle ears to draw a yelp and offended delicate sensibilities by baring the scar of an operation will probably do all right in the history books.

Even in Vietnam, he may prove to have been right, or if not right successful, although that account ing will take months and years more. The greatest blow to his record would be if Vietnam turns out to have been treacherous and unnecessary to the march of Asian events.

The New York Times, torn like many over the man, put it this way:

"He had failures of understanding but never of intent or effort. He has no reason to fear history's judgment."

Cornwall Standard - Freeholder

Internal Dissension Jeopardizing Cause of Indians

The department of Indian affairs may well be up to its ears in attempting to produce an equitable solution to the St. Regis Indians' protest over abrogation of their treaty rights. This could be the reason why no high-ranking official of the department has as much sel foot in Cornwall since Dec. 16 when resentment boiled over into a mass protest and mass arrests.

This could be, but we doubt it. We suspect that Indian affairs is simply lying low and hoping that (a) the whole uproar will simply blow over or (b) the Indians themselves will be driven by sheer frustration to steps which will serve to completely bedoud the basic issue at stake. And we lean heavily to the latter theory.

The St. Regis band themselves are desperately trying to organize their resistance on a non-violent basis, going through whatever channels are open to them in trying to keep their case before the public. That they have to keep their case alive, few of them doubt; they have had the benefit of many years experience in dealing with forked tongues on Parliament Hill. They feel — and The Standard-Freeholder shares the opinion— that if they don't keep the Jay Treaty dispute in the spotlight, it will simply be swept under the rug, once the public outcry against off iaidom has died down.

In the process of seeking a solution, the two rival factions on the reserve — the traditional Longhouse council and the elected council — have joined forces for the first time in 69 years.

There is not yet complete unanimity among the Indians, however. Kahn-Tineta Horn, the fiery Indian rights leader from Caughnawaga, has made clear she does not believe the St. Regis band is going about things in the most efficient way. She has vehemently denounced Ernest Benedict, who acts as a spokesman for the St. Regis reserve, for, she claims, leading the Indians down false paths. And she has a following on Cornwall island, although how large a following is almost anyone's guess.

Whatever the merits of either Miss Horn's or Mr. Benedict's assertions or arguments, one plain fact emerges: the Indian cause is being harmed by Indian infighting which can only bring joy to the hearts of people who'd like to see all the fuss forgotten as quickly as possible. Side issues galore are being introduced — and the history of Indian - governmental relations in Canada is a frightmarish tale which will take years to unravel.

By sticking to one clear-cut issue at a time, the Indian has a chance to win one fight and then go on to the next. By a shotgun approach to the whole question of treaty rights, he is laying his cause wide open to indefinite procrastination on Ottawa's part.

Nothing would please us more than to see an impartial Royal Commission appointed to study the whole question of Indian treaties — and report back within a set time limit. That is most unlikely to happen as long as the bully-boys in Ottawa feel they can keep the Indians themselves divided. It could happen, though, if the Indians can forget their differences and unite to show Indian affairs they can act in common cause for their own good, with one spokesman speaking for all.

Hijack Menace

Hamilton Spectator

A Delta Airlines stewardess is being praised for slamming the door of the pilot's cabin in the face of a shotgun-wielding man who wanted the plane to be flown to Cuba. Her action effectively thwarted the hi-jacker.

Think, however, if the hi-jacker had been a really dangerous nut. With a shotgun in his hands he could have shot a few people in an effort to convince the pilot that he meant business. Then how would the stewardess have felt?

Appalling as it is to have to accept it, and damnable as is the hi-jacking threat, the only course when a hi-jacker appears is to follow his instructions to the letter. That's what all airlines have been doing up to now. The safety of passengers comes first.

Wilson Backing Down?

African Nations Bitter Over Rhodesian Impasse

By HAROLD MORRISON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

The invisible man at the Commonwealth prime ministers' conference was Ian Smith, Rhodesian white-minority leader who may have got more out of the meeting than some black delegates.

At least that is the bitter view that persists among disappointed Africans as the conference winds up on a note that doesn't hold out much hope for the majority blacks in Rhodesia.

Prime Minister Wilson hasn't won conference endorsement to engage in fresh bargaining with Smith on more modified terms for recognition of the Independence Smith seized from Britain three years ago rather than submit to demands for eventual black-majority rule.

But Wilson has made his own position clear, including the warning that he no longer will seek full entrenchment for the blacks before providing Smith with recognized independence, if Smith will agree to other terms.

Wilson's argument that he is still working towards black-rule falls on deaf ears in the conference. The view that previous among most delegates is that Wilson is trying to get rid of the problem, on the best terms possible. There is a strong suspicion among the Africans that once Smith gets full recognition, he will go back on any word he has given and Wilson won't do anything about it.

In the three years of Smith's self-led independence, the British government accused him of everything including treason and Wilson accused at first reluctant even to engage in negotiations with him. Sanctions were slapped on, accompanied by Wilson predictions that Smith's seized independence would soon be over.

But in all this period Smith didn't give an inch. He dangled before the British government the possibility of an acceptable compromise and, just when Wilson felt this was within his grasp, suddenly danced in any casting abuse on the British leader followed by fresh promises.

The Rhodesia issue threatened to blow the Commonwealth apart in 1965. This may have bothered Wilson but it didn't bother Smith who felt the Commonwealth was useless anyway.

Now as the conference winds up, some officials who attended previous meetings reflected that the Rhodesian dispute this time was not as bitter as in 1966 and there no longer is a threat of a Commonwealth collapse even though Wilson had backpedalled on a promise.

Some authorities suggested this reflects realism among Africans that the Commonwealth has its limitations and that there is need to keep it going despite its weaknesses. It is unlikely, however, that this waning will endear Wilson to the Africans, nor eliminate African views that one day the "wind of change" may sweep remaining white rule from their homelands.

'Personality of Year' To Be Selected

The search is on for Belleville's outstanding personality of the year.

The city's Jaycees today launched their sixth annual drive to discover the citizen of the year.

Being sought is the man or woman who has made a noteworthy contribution to community affairs in the past 12 months. (Present titleholder is former mayor Jack Ellis.)

The selection has the proportions of a public campaign.

Bellevillians are being encouraged to submit their nominations for the award. The objectives are to recognize local achievements and encourage community leadership and participation.

A panel of five judges, representative of various sections of the community, will survey all nominations which must be submitted by Feb. 3. Their final decision will be announced two days later.

Highlight of the project will come Feb. 12 at a testimonial dinner-dance at Club Canara when the citizen-of-the-year award will be formally awarded.

All nominations should be addressed to Belleville Jaycees, PO Box 374.

Behind the Glass

Playoffs will be in order in several rinks during the week-end according to Bill Gault, Curling Association.

The main event will be the Consols playoffs at the Quinte Curling Club, which starts Sunday morning and continues until Monday. This is a double knockout draw with the winner entering the district playoffs, which will lead to a berth in the Ontario finals. The Belleville rink entered in this competition will be skipped by Gordon Pinder with Paul Henderson as lead, Doug Graham as second and Melville Burroughs as vice skip.

Rinks from the Trenton Curling Club, CFB, Belleville, Napanee, Tweed, Colborne, Cobourg and Picton will take part and the favorite at the present time is the Bob McInnis rink of CFB but anything can happen in a curling contest. When a rink has lost two games it is out of competition and some interesting matches are anticipated.

The ice at the local rink has been planed and reflooded and many of the runs have been taken out. The mild weather should have the effect of making the ice run true on all kinds of shots.

On Saturday starting at 4.30 at the CFB rink, Trenton, the playoffs for the Rose Bowl district title will be decided. This is a knockout draw as only four rinks are entered which includes Trenton, CFB, Napanee and Belleville.

The Belleville rink will be skipped by Dave Brown with his wife Cathy playing vice and Marlene and Bill Henderson on the front end.

Again on Sunday morning at the Trenton Curling Club rink, six rinks, Napanee, Belleville, Brighton, Picton, Trenton and Cobourg will square off in the playoff for senior curlers. This will be a straight knockout draw and the winning rink will have to play three games to win the district title.

The Belleville rink will be skipped by Bob Bastable with Dr. Frank McCue as lead, Dawson Boyd, second, and Phil Dyble as vice.

J. Sharpe Marks 86th Birthday

DESERONTO — Last Wednesday, James Sharpe, Sr., celebrated his 86th birthday, with neighbors and other friends calling during the day to offer congratulations. He received many gifts, among them a purse of money. The best gift of all was two days late, however, when his grandaughter, Mrs. Bernard Johnston, presented him with his first great - grandchild, a five-pound - fourteen - ounce girl.

During the day Mr. Sharpe received greetings from his relatives at a distance; his sister, Mrs. Irene Mills, and brother Nelson, both of Detroit; and nieces in Cleveland, Ohio.

The climax of the day came at 6.30 when all the Deseronto relatives assembled for a buffet supper at the home of his son, Mayor James M. Sharpe. They were, his son and Mrs. Sharpe and their children at home along with a number of other relatives and friends.

Although he is lame, Mr. Sharpe is in good health, and his mind is as keen as ever. Especially during the winter, he spends much time reading and watching television. He is an outdoor man, however, and during the summer loves to be on the water, especially when fishing.

Mr. Sharpe was born in Deseronto and, except for a few years in Toronto, has lived there for his lifetime.

The Experts Say

A Degree in Art Is Not Necessarily A Factor in Success

TORONTO (CP) — Not all artists starve in garrets.

Many earn good livings in insurance companies, department stores, industrial plants, newspaper offices. A small but increasing number are even finding that painting can be a reliable source of income.

In any one area the number of opportunities may be small, but the opportunity to build a career on artistic ability now exists in a number of fields in Canada.

Artist Hugh Mackenzie has taught in technical schools in London, Ont., and Ottawa and now is teaching part-time at the Ontario College of Art. He has held several sellout shows at a Toronto gallery and recently painted the official portrait of former prime minister Lester Pearson.

He says a degree in art is not necessarily a factor in success—that he knows of vocational school art students doing well in an assortment of jobs.

"In the graphic arts industry, paper qualifications count for little. What you can do is what really counts. Can you turn out a job and turn it out on time? That's what employers care about."

Mr. Mackenzie says the decision to take art should be made carefully.

"For girls coming into the course it is often a choice between taking a commercial course or art; for boys a choice between drafting and printing or art.

"You can almost guarantee a reasonably intelligent kid a job in drafting. You certainly can't in art. Art is not as secure as office work, but it has the advantage of being more interesting, and if it works — there is considerably more money."

He says he thinks most art teachers and other people in the field would take the time to advise a student on whether his talent is worth training and what sort of jobs are available that might suit his particular bent.

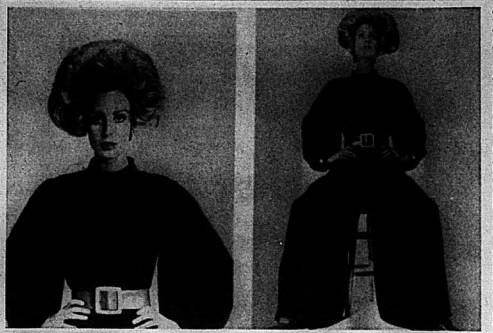
After you have graduated, whether from technical school or art college, then, what?

"Some go into television graphics, which means they do the lettering and little cartoons as opposed to scenery. Some go into the paint shop where they carry out set designs.

"They do advertising layout in department stores and newspaper offices, or do advertising sketches. The girls often gravitate to that kind of job.

"Some go into display, starting with windows. The good ones go into display services."

He says a graduate interested in commercial work in an art studio probably would have to live in Montreal or Toronto. Wherever he works, he should expect to start in unglamorous jobs, such as cutting mats, doing paste-ups, even carrying coffee.



There are industrial designers, package designers, technical illustrators. A handful may find work doing posters, book and magazine illustration, designing ceramics and jewelry. Large firms hire artists to design their company magazines, brochures, annual reports. There are a small number of jobs in galleries and museums, though most of them require specialized training.

Qualifications for teaching vary, of course, with the type of teaching and province.

There is a demand for part-time teachers for evening and Saturday art classes for adults and children. Mr. Mackenzie says you would be unlikely to be able to make a career of that type of teaching, though he and others have done it to provide some income while they use the rest of their time to paint.

"There are always a small but significant number of graduates who go on into fine arts and who do well. All the artists don't come from arts colleges.

"I think both the economic and social climates now exist in Canada in which an artist can survive, given a few breaks and what he does for himself."

FASHION REVOLUTION — Designer Bill Blass got his inspiration from the Asian Steppes for this deeply pleated tunic and culotte costume in navy blue. The wild hairdo, supported by two wiglets, has a turn-of-the-century currentness and is by Helene Curtis. The outfit was shown at New York. (CP Photo)

CLUB ACTIVITIES

PRINCE EDWARD BELLEVILLE LADIES' CLUB

The Prince Edward-Belleville Ladies' Club held their first meeting of 1969 on Jan. 8, at the Recreation Centre, with an attendance of 28.

The meeting was opened by president, Mrs. F. Henderson, who thanked the executive for their help during the year. Minutes of the December meeting, and a report of the highlights of the year's meetings were read by secretary, Mrs. A. Mitchell. The treasurer, Mrs. L. Fox gave the financial report from December and also for the year 1968.

Mrs. O. White read many letters of thanks from members received during the year. Mrs. C. Cunningham was appointed leader of Group 4. Mrs. Jewell and Mrs. L. Sharpe were appointed as co-leaders of Group 1, with Mrs. F. Bedell.

The February meeting will be the 20th anniversary of the club.

Mrs. F. Way has charge of the program. She spoke of the new year with the sense of adventure and new opportunity. Readings were given by Mrs. R. Jose; Mrs. P. Faithment; Mrs. J. Derrow and Mrs. F. Way. There was a time of community singing, with accompaniment provided by Mrs. M. Doyle.

Mrs. F. Henderson thanked Mrs. F. Way and closed the meeting in the usual manner. Mrs. F. Way and members of Group 4 served lunch.

Pay is Good Says Travelling Burlesque Performer

ST. JOHN'S, Nfld. (CP) — Travelling as a burlesque performer to clubs across Canada is a good way to make money, says Mary Uschak of Toronto.

Miss Uschak, billed as "Miss Misty Dawn, burlesque star of burlesque halls and clubs across Canada," says she makes up to $300 a week plus tips on the road.

"In Toronto we get just $150 a week and that's plus tips for 12 to 14 hours a day, so you can see why we want to travel," she said here in an interview.

Last February Miss Uschak left her job with the national revenue department because, without Canadian citizenship, she was not entitled to permanent employment. She entered an amateur contest at the suggestion of a girl friend.

The contest at Toronto's Victory Theatre, Canada's only burlesque theatre, was "quite a horrifying experience."

"I looked so easy from the theatre. I made my costume and came up with a routine with the help of my girl friend, but when the moment came I had to be shoved out on the stage."

She placed fourth and won a contract to perform at the Victory.

Miss Uschak, a bright, talkative, humorous girl who left Germany during the war and has lived most of her life in the United States, said she has developed her own routine.

Her act has three numbers of 10 minutes each performed to the music of a local band.

"The first is just dancing, then I remove my gown and by the third number I'm down to as much as the bylaws of the province permit."

She turned down a contract for a topless tour of the West Indies "because I just don't have the bust for topless shows."

Miss Uschak says there is keen competition among burlesque performers and she is kept busy designing new costumes and acts.

Her colleagues in the burlesque business are "mainly women who are separated, divorced or who have experienced bad marriages."

She said they often have children to support and are usually good businesswomen. The brighter ones were clever enough to know it's a short career and wise enough to invest their money in stocks, bonds and real estate.

Miss Uschak and her boy friend, who have been saving for a year, now have enough capital to buy a 100-acre farm outside Toronto.

They plan to settle there, raise a family and breed horses and cattle.

Would she miss the world of burlesque?

"No, indeed; but I would return for a week or so if ever I needed the money."

Parish Guild A.C.W. Elects New Officers

Members of Christ Church Parish Guild A.C.W. met on Tuesday afternoon for the first meeting of 1969 with a good attendance.

Reports of the various conveners showed that 1968 had been a busy year for the Guild with a varied program of events and projects. Financially, the Guild was able to aid in the reduction of the Parish debt, supply donations for Camp Hyanto, the Mental Health Association, the Christmas Cheer baskets and gifts for shut-ins and take care of various expenses in connection with the rectory.

Guild activities included a blossom tea, a china show, rummage sales and auctions and the catering for a number of wedding receptions and dinners. The Guild "Cent-a-Meal" project was most successful under the chairmanship of Mrs. M. Boyd who reported that 54 contributors were included in this effort.

Reports for the rectory committee, the vestry committee and the kitchen were given by Mmes. Bishop, Hickey and Vesterfelt.

Retiring president, Mrs. G. Livingston, thanked members for their co-operation and encouragement during her two years in office.

Mrs. Jordan, for the nominating committee presented the following slate of officers for 1969: past-president, Mrs. D. G. Livingston; president, Mrs. Fred Lazier; vice-president, Mrs. W. J. Reed; secretary, Mrs. J. M. Cousins; treasurer, Mrs. Ridley Wallbridge. These officers will be installed at the Feb. meeting.

A vote of thanks was tendered to retiring president, Mrs. Livingston and to secretary, Mrs. Claude Tucker.

It was decided that the Guild Corporate Communion will be held on Feb. 12 and members were urged to attend. A wedding reception will be catered for at the end of June with Mrs. Lazier convening and the Guild will look after refreshments for the annual vestry meeting on Jan. 27.

Following the business portion of the meeting, members enjoyed a social time with Mrs. Gordon Nix and Mrs. F. A. Beeby as hostesses.

Keystone Chapter 2072 Installs New Officers

STIRLING — The installation and investiture of the principals and officers of the Keystone Chapter 2072 took place recently in the Masonic temple. John L. Good was in charge of the installation ceremony with Lyle R. Hagerman, Grand Superintendent of the Prince Edward District assisting.

The officers elected for 1969 are: first principal, Alan A. Fook; Immediate Past, David Hollinger; treasurer, Burton Woodcock; Scribe, E. John L. Good; Scribe N., Harold Hagerman.

Other officers installed were: H. Lindsay Sills; J, David Fargey; treasurer, Burton Woodcock; director of ceremonies, Douglas Pyear.

The Principal Sojourner, Harry Vandervoort; Senior Sojourner, Robert Mansell; Junior Sojourner, Russell West; Master, 4th Veil, Ivan Caldwell; Master, 3rd Veil, Stanley Irven; Master, 2nd Veil, Gordon W. Bailey; Master, 1st Veil, James Johnston; Outer Guard, Ray Mallory.

At the close of the ceremony, several spoke briefly. Later, refreshments were served, and a social time was spent.

Gipsy Look Predicted

LONDON (Reuters) — A Gipsy look is in the offering of Hardy Amies to swinging youth for the summer of '69.

These gipsies are the happy Triganes of Andalusia, clad in bright reds, yellows and greens, with flaring skirts breathing the spirit of the Flamenco.

Some of the Amies's Gipsy girls will be wearing long dresses in gaily-printed chiffon with full, flared skirts and a Vshaped yoke made of multi-colored red, yellow, green, brown and beige painted wooden beads fitting high round the neck.

Others will wear pant suits with wide flared pants legs which look like skirts. For evening wear these culottes come in printed silk or chiffon featuring designs in circles, stripes or diamonds and a variety of color ranging from black on white to grey combined with yellow or pink.

Amies, a royal dress maker, opened his new spring and summer collection at his London salon Tuesday.

What Can One Do About the Generation Gap?

By DORIS CLARK

What is this so-called generation gap? One youngster expressed it in this sentence: "But you can't possibly understand, Mother. You were never a teen-ager."

Says Dr. J. B. Mays, social scientist: "The youth problem is essentially a matter of adjustment between the age groups and the generations. The rising generation, while no longer defined as children, are yet barred from the full responsibilities of adult citizenship.

"They are considered hostile and socially disruptive." So the adults are anxious and the youth uncertain. "Earlier physical maturation (for which there is some recent medical evidence) may also have contributed to the precocity of some young people's behavior and so further alienated the youthful from the middle-aged."

It seems our kids have better education, more money to spend and things to spend it on. They have more self-assurance to think with and, at least, to talk back with.

Looks as if our schools, churches, ourselves, are going to have to come to terms with the restless, inquiring young people we have reared.

* * *

Dear Doris: My problem is an extremely silly one but I am constantly teased about my ears that stick out horribly!

I wear my hair short since it suits me best but it makes my ears so noticeable. Have you ever heard about anything that can make ears flatten out? — Pitcher Handles.

Dear Handles: Yes, — an operation. Has to be done by a plastic surgeon; but it can indeed be done. Ask your family doctor.

Meanwhile, a good hair stylist would design a bouffant hairdo to help conceal your ears. Hair wouldn't have to be long, but long enough to do a job for you.

Boys are the ones who usually worry about projecting ears, since they can't easily conceal them. Except for the Long Hairs.

* * *

To Mother of Poor Reader: There is a series of four little books about "A Lot of Things" which could be the very thing to intrigue your boy into reconsidering. The opposite illustration shows father seated on his wheelbarrow, shovel in hand, and wiping his brow. Details of author and publisher are yours in exchange for stamped envelope showing where to send them.

* * *

Confidential to I Treat Her Too Good: I can't think of one good reason why you should give your wife large sums of money only to have them deposited in her personal bank account. Could it be she was very poor earlier, and has developed a sort of squirrel instinct for setting something aside?

Better also ask yourself whether you have noticed the increase in the cost of living. Money really does vanish dismayingly — and seemingly without enough in return — nowadays.

* * *

(Do you wonder why the people you care about act as they do? Let Doris shed light on your particular human problem. And remember that stamped envelope!)

Kitchen Tested Recipes

A Good Recipe for Brownies

By MARY MOORE

LETTER: I am enclosing a brownie recipe which I make all the time as it makes a big one. Hope you like it. — Mrs. Pearl D.

ANSWER: Shirley, my secretary, tried your recipe for a large pan of brownies because she liked the beater bowl method and had guests coming for the evening. They were the testers and said, "Anytime you need guinea pigs again, send for us." She brought me a generous sample and I can add my recommendation for the sake of our readers who have hungry mouths to fill.

BROWNIES (large 13 x 9 x 2" pan; courtesy Mrs. Pearl D.).

1¼ cups sifted all purpose flour
1 teaspoon salt
2 cups granulated sugar
½ cup (8 tablespoons) cocoa
2 teaspoons vanilla
1 cup oil
4 eggs
¼ cup cold water
½ cup (or more) chopped walnuts

If you want a Rich Chocolate Frosting here is the famous one that is used on my Chocolate Nut Diamonds.

RICH CHOCOLATE ICING: Melt two squares unsweetened chocolate in top of double boiler, and stir into it one cup icing sugar, one egg, beaten, two tablespoons butter, one teaspoon vanilla. Remove from heat at once and stir and cool a little before spreading on brownies.

Put all ingredients in beater bowl in order given and beat on low speed or by hand until smooth. Do not beat too long.

Butter a large 13 x 9 x 2" pan and turn in batter and push into corners and smooth top. Bake at 350 deg. Fahr. 30 minutes — no longer.

Mrs. D. adds two notes: 1) If you use a glass pan bake at 325 deg. Fahr. for 30 minutes. 2) If desired when brownies are cool in pan they may be iced with chocolate frosting and sprinkled with chopped walnuts.

ST. MICHAEL'S PARISH COUNCIL

The Jan. 13 meeting of St. Michael's Parish Council opened with a dessert party and gift exchange.

During the business session a letter was read from the Canadian Mental Health Association thanking members for a warm response to their Christmas gift appeal.

The Social Welfare convener reported that approximately 30 Christmas hampers were delivered to families in December. Six members worked at the Cancer Clinic in November.

St. Michael's Council is looking after the "Meals on Wheels" program for the month of Jan. Convener (Mrs. H. Brown) asked for volunteers to assist with the meals and transportation.

A report was given on the Diocesan council meeting held in Kingston on Jan. 8. The adoption year program was a main topic of discussion.

The president announced that conveners for the annual Valentine ball were: dance, Mrs. A. Kreutsch and Mrs. M. Heisz; tickets, Mrs. A. Black, and smorgasbord, Mrs. J. Morey.

After the meeting the members enjoyed a return to Expo 67 through the excellent slides and commentary by D. Duminie.

Ann Landers

Sophomore Told To Stand By Convictions

ANN LANDERS

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I was brought up by old-fashioned parents and I guess you'd be justified in calling me square. I'm a college sophomore, and the only girl on the floor of this dorm who is a virgin. I grew up believing I should save myself for the man I marry, but these past few weeks have caused me to reconsider.

The big question, now that I have fallen in love, is this: Is it unrealistic to expect a young man to suffer the anxieties of frustration because his fiancee happens to believe as I do? Furthermore, will my rigidity cost me a wonderful husband?

Jack says the divorce rate scares him to death. He says he loves me but he's afraid we might not be sexually compatible. He feels we should find out before we marry. He has also suggested that I might be frigid. Last night he added another barb when he said, "A girl who teases is sadistic and immature."

You seem to have an answer to everything. Please tell me how to say no to a sex salesman with whom I happen to be in love. — NEED YOU.

* * *

DEAR NEED: Here's your answer: "My body belongs to me and I don't owe you experimental privileges of an undress rehearsal."

What happens to your body is your responsibility and it is also your problem if something unplanned should occur. Jack's theory that it is smart to jump out to see if they work before you "buy" is rubbish. A salesman once sold me a vacuum cleaner that worked beautifully during the 30-day trial. For some mysterious reason it fell apart two days after I bought it.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Yesterday the couple next door had a terrific argument. We could hear them screaming at each other although our houses are two lots apart. My husband and I went to the front door to investigate.

Quick as a flash, their 3-year-old boy came dashing out the front door and ran into the street, directly in the path of an oncoming car. Fortunately, the driver was alert and stopped in time.

The child's father didn't say one word to him. Instead he yelled some obscenities at the driver. (He should have blessed him!) The driver just shook his head as the father shouted, "You rotten ——, a child always has the right-of-way."

Last year a trailer hit my car. I was driving slowly and carefully. According to the police, I had the right-of-way. But our little girl is dead, and she was all we had. That neighbor's boy could have been dead, too, yet he babbles about "right-of-way."

Every day pre-schoolers who should not be out alone are killed by cars. They don't know anything about "right-of-way." Where are parents' values? What could be more important than the life of a child? Please print this for parents whose children are still alive. — GRIEVING MOTHER.

DEAR MOTHER: I appreciate your letter and know it will cause thousands of parents to pause for a moment and think in terms of the safety of their own pre-schoolers. You will never know the good you have done by writing. Thank you.

Bertie Clark

cognizing words. The print is big; a page holds one sentence with an illustration opposite.

One page reads: "Father has a lot of things in the garden."

Friend: "Is this little Barbie? My goodness, how she has grown."

Mother: "She is awfully tall for her age. She's the tallest child in her class."

It's embarrassing to a teen-ager to be discussed as if she isn't there. Parents can help by steering the conversation into less personal, and more interesting, channels.

Doctor and Druggist Clash Over Drug Bill

OTTAWA (CP)—The Commons agreed to trolling speed Thursday in moving a fresh-water fish bill to committee stage but shrugged off its tranquility late in the day with a spirited exchange between a doctor and a druggist over a bill designed to cut the price of prescription drugs.

Otto Lang, minister without portfolio, described a proposal to set up a Crown corporation to deal with interprovincial and export marketing of fresh-water fish and debate kept the subject alive most of the day.

The Commons gave it second reading and sent it to the standing committee on forestry and fisheries so late in the evening that only three members had time to speak as debate resumed on a bill to amend the Patent Act, the Trade Marks Act and the Food and Drugs Act.

The pace of the House was away off that of Tuesday and Wednesday, when seven bills were sent to committees for study in detail.

Dr. Paul Yewchuk (PC—Athabasca) and pharmacist David Orlikow (N.D.P.—Winnipeg North) crossed swords over the drug bill, designed to increase competition in the industry.

Both supported safe and cheaper drugs, but their agreement ended there.

Dr. Yewchuk said Canadians will have to be given better assurances than they have in the past that cheaper drugs that may be imported under the proposed legislation will meet safety standards.

Mr. Orlikow suggested Dr. Yewchuk was following the line of drug companies, which have strenuously fought the legislation since it was first introduced late in 1957.

"If that speech was not written by the representatives of the Pharmaceutical Manufacturers Association it could well have been," he said.

The government bill, as reintroduced last fall, adds some features designed to meet fears that safety standards would be lowered with imports of more drugs. It includes an amendment to the Food and Drugs Act giving the government specific authority to make regulations "governing, regulating or prohibiting" imports of drugs or their distribution and sale in Canada.

Bruins Remain Step Ahead of Habs

Punch' Imlach is a Pisces.

And that astrological musicker is possibly one of the kindest of the many epithets flung in the Maple Leaf mentor's direction.

But the purpose of this exercise is not to tackle the pros and cons of the much-maligned Mr. Imlach.

What you and I and your neighborhood ticket scalper want to know, as the National Hockey League entries head into the last lap, in which coach will contract Lord Stanley's champagne hangover.

A computer will just spit out "Montreal Canadiens," as you these days, but we were looking for, a less-statistical, more human discussion of the $64 question.

That's where Omar Zeus comes in.

Assuming that is his real name, Mr. Zeus is one of the contributors to a horoscope guide guaranteed to brief you on everything from your love life to good stock market gambles.

For half a buck. It seemed an economic, if not entirely unbeatable means of predicting the fortunes of the men leading their teams in Stanley Cup quests.

And if we're to put any faith at all in Omar, fellow Leafland, we may as well pack up our sadlacs right now.

Punch "Pisces" Imlach's purpose in life, according to Zeus, will be "to nurse, doctor, solace, counsel, and sympathize . . . when the sun is going down on an impossibly unhappy and defeat-ridden day."

Hmmmm. Doesn't exactly conjure up images of a dressing-room victory hask, does it?

For a pair of league "Leos" — Chicago's Billy Reay and Detroit's Bill Gadsby — Omar predicts "spreading goodwill across as much of the land as possible."

Sounds like a team trade shakeup from this side of the ouija board!

Boom-Boom "Aquarius" Geoffrion, at the New York Rangers' helm, will be "spreading sunshine" wherever he goes, but rather than winning playoff games, he apparently is destined to "pioneer new social and humanitarian legislation."

At this point in my research, I began to think Mr. Zeus was spreading a little something himself, until I got to the analysis of the established favorites in the Stanley Cup sweepstakes.

Montreal, Claude Ruel and Harry Sinden — as contrasting a pair of Virgos as you'll ever find, will "garner wealth from their initiative." If the stars keep twinkling in the same patterns as they are now.

The Boston and Montreal coaches share this prognostication with the pilot of the only expansion team in contention — the St. Louis Blues' Scotty Bowman.

So it looks like a battle between the league's September babies, and, incidentally, the three youngest coaches.

Meanwhile, back in less-ethereal climes, we're afraid the front-running Bruins and Canadiens will just have to play out the rest of the schedule, content in the knowledge that the fates favor them.

Wonder, what Anatoly Tarasov's horoscope looks like?

Esposito's Goal Creates Tie In Scoring Race

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

It may be about time that right winger Ken Hodge gets more credit for the success of the Boston Bruins in the National Hockey League this season.

Opposing coaches attribute the Bruins good fortune to the prolific scoring of centre Phil Esposito. But Hodge has made a significant contribution as well.

Hodge scored two goals last night to pace the Bruins to a 5-1 victory against the Minnesota North Stars in Boston. It enabled the Bruins to preserve their two-point margin over the runner-up Montreal Canadiens in the Eastern Division.

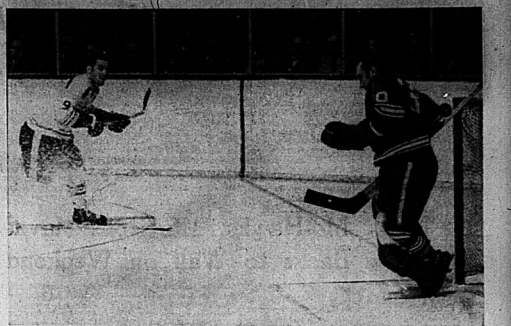
In other games, Montreal blanked the Philadelphia Flyers 4-0 at Philadelphia. The Detroit Red Wings edged the Pittsburgh Penguins 3-2 in Detroit, and the Los Angeles shaded the Chicago Black Hawks 3-2 in Los Angeles.

In Boston, Hodge's two goals raised his season total to 20. Ed Westfall, Phil Esposito and Johnny Bucyk had the other Boston goals. Ray Cullen was the Minnesota marksman.

Esposito's goal tied him at 61 points in the league's scoring leadership with Chicago's Bobby Hull, who added up two assists in the Hawks' loss.

Bobby Rousseau scored two goals and assisted on another to help Montreal end a 3-game losing streak. Yvan Cournoyer and John Ferguson collected the other Montreal goals.

It was the third time this season that the Canadiens have shut out the Philadelphia Flyers — each time with a different goaltender. Rogatien Vachon, turning away 25 shots gained his second shutout of the season for Montreal.



The Detroit Red Wings, given little chance a few weeks ago to make the Eastern Division playoffs, moved to within one point of third-place Chicago and Toronto last night.

Alex Delvecchio, Gordie Howe and Pete Stemkowski scored for Detroit. The Pittsburgh goal came from Paul Andrea and Val Fonteyne. Stemkowski's goal at 2:44 of the second period proved decisive. Howe's goal marked the 20th consecutive season the big right-winger has reached the 20-goal plateau.

In Los Angeles, a goal by Howie Hughes at 9:30 of the final period secured the victory for the Kings. Lowell MacDonald and Hughes scored the other Los Angeles goals.

Ken Wharrran and Dennis Hull scored for Chicago. The loss was the second in two nights against expansion teams for the Black Hawks, who dropped a 4-3 decision to the Oakland Seals on Wednesday.

Only one NHL game is scheduled for tonight when the New York Rangers meet the Oakland Seals at Oakland.

TOO CLOSE FOR COMFORT—Ice flies around Boston Bruins' left winger John 'Bucyk as he streaks in on the Toronto Maple Leafs' goal after blasting a shot at goalie Bruce Gamble. The puck managed to get past Gamble — here it balances on his right elbow — but somehow missed the open net behind. The action took place in the first period of a 5-5 NHL game in Toronto Wednesday night.

Molson Plays Diplomatic Role In Persuading Soviets to Renew Tour

(SPECIAL) — The most publicized delay in hockey history will run out the clock in Montreal tomorrow afternoon.

The tour of Canada by Russian hockey teams will proceed as it always had been planned, except that the first game against Canada's national team will be played at Montreal Forum 18 hours late.

Instead of an 8 o'clock starting time tonight, the tour-opener will begin at 2 o'clock tomorrow afternoon. The same teams will meet in Toronto's Maple Leaf Gardens Sunday evening at 7.

Cancellation of the night-game tour by the Russian Nationals and a subsequent eight-game tour by Moscow Selects (Russia's No. 2 team) in late February and early March, had been announced by the Russians three days ago.

Excuses for the cancellation were flimsy. The Russians complained about financial arrangements and objected to meeting second-rate opponents. Yet they had agreed to terms and opponents long ago.

The Russians noted that one-half of Canada's national conference was playing in Europe and would mean that a weakened Canadian team would provide the opposition. But the touring Canadians returned this week — a fact the Russians could have easily determined.

David Molson, president of the National Hockey League Montreal Canadiens, played a major role in preserving the tour, or resurrecting it. Molson said he spent about 25 hours on the telephone in three days trying to influence the Russians to reinstate the tour.

The world amateur hockey champions are expected to arrive in Montreal via Air France at 1 p.m. today.

"They want 24 hours of rest," said Molson. Originally the Russians wanted to play the Montreal game at the end of the tour, but the owner of the Habs suggested they take 25 hours rest and play Saturday afternoon. This was arranged.

The on-again, off-again aspects of the tour left some scars. The CAHA asked the International Ice Hockey Federation to suspend Russia from international competition if the tour was cancelled.

The Russians charged right back that a suspension would be unjustified and they were backed by Sweden's Rudolf Ekloew, vice-president of the IIHF, who said any disciplinary measures could be taken only at a meeting in July.

Canadian officials said cancellation of the 16 games would cost them $200,000, which would, presumably, an expected profit the CAHA would forgo.

Bunny Ahearne, president of the European branch of the IIHF has no great love for Canadian hockey types, but he admires the profit picture. He appealed to the Russians to carry out their tours.

At a press conference in Montreal to announce that the Russian tour would proceed, Molson said he would "like something in writing" before he would book the Russians into his Forum again. The Russian-CAHA agreement was oral.

Molson also admitted the Russians had done themselves "considerable harm" in their bid to get a game against National Hockey League team. Molson said the Russians cancelled the tour earlier because they were either afraid of losing, or they hoped to enlist Canadian public opinion to force a confrontation with the NHL.

U.K. Soccer Coaches Lead Hazardous Lives

LONDON (CP) — If a baseball manager's job isn't your idea of social security, consider the British soccer manager.

As one of them put it on looking over the current mortality rate in the trade, it's "more dangerous than being a suicide pilot."

Since the Second World War, more than 600 managers have been fired or have packed it in on their own. That was at the last count — which is changing rapidly.

Last season the professional bosses were getting the chop on an average of one a fortnight. This year the life expectancy has shortened, and the average is one a week.

Some weeks are tougher than others. Eleven were shown the door in a recent four-week period.

Owner philosophy runs along remarkably parallel lines on opposite sides of the Atlantic.

Alec Stock, a prominent figure in the British game, wrote a guide for managers last year in which he said:

"The law in soccer is that if your team loses, you change it. If you cannot afford to change the team, you change the manager."

Alec was then manager of Queen's Park Rangers. Did someone ask what's happened to him since?

Well, he pushed the London squad from the Third Division two years ago into the First Division this year. When QPR stayed around the foot in that section, Alec got a severe reminder of that unwritten rule of the losing manager, plus a handshake, and in came Tommy Docherty.

Docherty, one of the best in the business, threw up his job with Third Division Rotherham to take on Rangers. He lasted just 28 days, leaving under his own steam after a dispute with the club over buying players.

By British standards, the job is highly paid—a First Division manager can earn between £5,000 and £10,000 a season—but it's among sport's most unpredictable. Few managers have long-term contracts and many have none at all.

Players' Strike Would Hurt Tigers' Hopes

DETROIT (AP) — Outfielder Jim Northrup said Thursday a possible players strike would diminish Detroit Tigers' chances of winning the American League pennant this year.

"What I'm really afraid of is that a players' strike will hurt the Tigers' chances to repeat as American League champions this year," he said.

"Say even four or five key players hold out with the players association. What if Mickey Lolich, Al Kaline, Bill Freehan and myself, for instance, don't go to spring training? That could foul things up pretty good, right?"

Lolich, Freehan and Willie Horton say they won't go to Florida until the pension dispute is settled. The major league players association agreed to a boycott early this winter to back up demands that club owners contribute more money to its pension fund.

Oldtimers Outclass Flying Fathers

TRENTON — NHL Oldtimers cavorted their way to a 6-3 win over the Flying Fathers at Trenton Community Gardens last night and in doing so displayed their enthusiasm for the game and the skills which carried them to hockey's big time, the National Hockey League.

Twenty-one retired hockey fans sat on the edges of their seats as Oldtimers such as Harry Watson, Jack Hamilton, Harry Pidherney, Cal Gardner, Bob Armstrong and Ike Hildebrand outclassed the Flying Fathers — a team comprised of Roman Catholic priests from Ontario parishes.

The Oldtimers tested Trenton's Rev. Art Appleton in the Flying Fathers' goal repeatedly as they controlled the play and seldom took a shot from more than 25 feet out.

Bill Murphy of Kingston played a strong game in front of Appleton while linemates Bill Scanlon and former Maple Leaf Les Costello provided much of the Flying Fathers' offensive firepower.

The Oldtimers drew first blood at 8:07 of the opening period when defenceman Bob Goldham converted Ike Hildebrand's pass, scoring on a low drive on which Appleton had no chance.

Pete Conacher made it 2-0 at 10:20 when he scored from the edge of the goal crease to complete a two-man rush with Ike Hildebrand.

Bill Scanlon got that one back for the Flying Fathers at 1:10 of the second period when he took Bud Woodcroft's passout from behind the net and beat Oldtimer netminder Ivan Walmsley with a low backhand drive.

Bob Hunter restored the Oldtimers' two-goal margin just 55 seconds later when he finished off a passing play with Pete Conacher.

The Flying Fathers came back and both Costello and Scanlan tested Walmsley with hard shots from close range, but the Oldtimers held the fort and the period ended with the Oldtimers leading 3-1.

Ike Hildebrand, who played in the NHL with New York Rangers and Chicago, and later was playing coach with the world and Allan Cup champion Belleville MacFarlands, got into the scoring act at 1:20 of the final period to give the Oldtimers a 4-1 lead.

Dennis Aubing countered Hildebrand's goal with one of his own at 7:01, but the Oldtimers took charge after the goal, and added two quick goals to make the count 6-2.

The goals were only 59 seconds apart, with Bob Armstrong notching the first one at 7:45 and Bob Hunter the second at 8:44.

Bill Scanlon's second goal of the night at 14:34 narrowed the final margin to three goals.

The Trenton Rotary Club's youth work benefitted greatly from the exhibition game between the two travelling teams. The Flying Fathers have now won five of eight games to date, while the NHL Oldtimers have 12 wins without a loss this year, and sport an eight year record of 179 wins, three losses and six ties.

Gordie Howe's HOCKEY

Something that pleases me around Detroit is that there hasn't been any talk lately of moving me back on defence. That was a subject that would crop up periodically and my thoughts, which I must confess I kept to myself, were "Forget it."

When Sid Abel was doing double duty as manager and coach, he did send me back from time to time. I can't say I was thrilled. The drawback, of course, is that I have so darn much to learn on defence. To me, it's the toughest position in hockey to learn and you have only to look around the league to verify that. The best defencemen are the older ones.

On one occasion when I played defence, (back in 1966 I believe), I still get sweaty hands when I think about it. The game was in New York and I wound up on defence because Bob McCord, who was then with the Detroit Red Wings, had a fight with Jim Neilson and drew a game misconduct.

It was a freakish type game and I had a freakish thing happen to me in that one, too. In the last period, I had my best scoring chance of the night, but the shaft of my stick broke right up between my hands. That's an unusual place for a stick to break and I was afraid I had myself a penalty for playing with a broken stick because I took my shot before I threw the stick away. Fortunately, my gloves were covering the break.

While I've taken turns on defence under protest, the one position that's out is goal. It's not for me.

Since playing in the NHL I remember a game against the Toronto Maple Leafs in which I made a heck of a save on Frank Mahovlich. It was the year he scored 36 goals (1962-63) and we were trailing by a goal so we pulled our netminder in the final minute. Mahovlich got loose and I got back in the net just in time to catch his shot on the elbow.

Stinson's Upset Stars

Stinson's Construction continued their upsurge in the Quinte Hockey League last night, defeating the league-leading Aluminum Stars 2-1 and moving to within two points of the first-place Stars in the four team league.

In the night's other game Central Taxi took a first place tie with Belvedere Hotel by edging the Hotelmen 3-2.

Rich Denard and Dennis Day scored single goals to lead the Construction men to victory over the Stars. Tom Post replied for the Stars.

Central Taxi gained sole possession of third place with eight points in ten games, while the loss relegated the Hotelmen to the bottom cellar with six.

Court Bradley, Albert Lentini and Doug Bolte tallied for the winners while Doug Moreau and Jack Lloyd replied for Belvedere Hotel.

Mo-Hawks, Morrisons Have Backs to Wall on Weekend

Playoff time is just around the corner and Belleville's two major hockey clubs, the Senior "A" Mo-Hawks and the Junior "B" Morrisons, have their backs to the wall as they prepare for important weekend games.

The seventh place Mo-Hawks who trail sixth place Kingston Aces by five points in the race for the sixth and last playoff spot in the eight team OHA Senior "A", will be out to extend their three games homeice winning streak tonight when they play host to the second place Galt Hornets in a nine o'clock game at the Belleville Arena.

The local seniors will try out to avenge last Saturday's 12-3 drubbing in Galt, and also to atone for their 5-4 overtime loss here in Belleville shortly before Christmas.

Sunday the Mo-Hawks travel to Barrie for an afternoon encounter with the league-leading Flyers. The Mo-Hawks have only ten games left in which to catch Kingston and a pair of wins this weekend against the circuit's two top clubs would put them in excellent position to catch Kingston.

The cellar-dwelling Morrisons will be seeking their initial win of the season over the second place Peterborough Don Byes Sunday afternoon at the Belleville Arena. The Morrisons, with nine points in 22 games, trail Kingston and Cobourg, who tied for the fourth and last playoff spot in the six team Junior "B" league, by nine points and have only eight games left in which to catch a playoff berth.

Mulroneys Shade Mustangs

Mulroney's Sunoco edged the second place Mustangs 4-3 last night for their ninth consecutive victory in Gas House Hockey League play, while the Wings vacated the league cellar and moved past Marysville into third place by whitewashing Marysville 5-0.

Mulroney's are far in front of the league with 18 points; Mustangs second place with nine points, while the Wings now have five points and Marysville brings up the rear with four points.

Broadway Star Ray Bolger Returning to His Old Stand

Ray Bolger, the star of "Slaughter on Tenth Avenue" in "On Your Toes"), the memorable Scarecrow in "The Wizard of Oz," the man who made "Once In Love With Amy" an international valentine in "Where's Charley?" is returning to Broadway . . . via Toronto and points east.

The happy occasion is a new musical called 'Come Summer,' which will have its world premiere on O'Keefe Centre's stage on Jan. 27 and will continue thereafter for two weeks. Particularly noteworthy is the fact that for the first time in his long career, Mr. Bolger (who proudly admits to having just celebrated his 65th birthday) will combine his talents with those of the distinguished director-choreographer, Agnes de Mille.

Come Summer deals with the colorful band of broadside sellers, Hinergal balmers and free-wheeling podlars who travelled around New England in the 19th century and brought romance and excitement — and danger, too — to the towns they visited. Perhaps no one is more qualified to deal with the special magic of America than the woman who will direct and choreograph Miss de Mille, whose dances for "Oklahoma!" and "Carousel" brought about a whole new look in theatre and whose ballets like "Fall River Legend" and "Rodeo" captured parts of the past on the stage. It will also be recalled that Miss de Mille created special works for the Royal Winnipeg Ballet.

The scenic production is by Oliver Smith, which automatically guarantees spectacle and the costumes have been designed by Stanley Simmons. Song titles include "Feather in My Shoe," "Back Spring," "Let Me Be," "How Far is Far Away" — and one simply called "No." Source material for the musical is a novel by Esther Forbes, "Rainbow on the Road."

"Come Summer" will undergo its final phase of rehearsals at O'Keefe Centre during the week of Jan. 20. After its official opening on Jan. 27 it will be seen each evening (except Sunday) at 8:30 p.m., with matinees on Wednesdays and Saturdays at 2 p.m.

Speed Vital In All-Star Tilt

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Speed may be the key if the West is to outscore the East in Sunday's National Football League All-Star game in Memorial Coliseum.

West coach George Allen of Los Angeles Rams worked with his team Friday as did East coach Tom Landry of Dallas Cowboys.

"We have great speed in the receiving positions, more so than last year, and nothing is more important than speed in an All-Star game," Allen observed.

He singled out Clifton McNeil of San Francisco 49ers, the NFL's leading pass receiver with 71 passes for 995 yards and seven touchdowns.

Allen has only to go back to the 49er-Ram exhibition game last season when McNeil sparked his team with a 94-yard touchdown run on a flip from John Brodie.

The names of Carroll Dale of Green, Bay Packers and Willie Richardson of Baltimore Colts also were ticked off by the coach.

Also mentioned with admiration was Baltimore's John Mackey, who for his 224 pounds is fast.

Allen confirmed that Baltimore's Earl Morrall will start at quarterback.

"There are two reasons why I want Earl in there," he said. "First, he's the Player of the Year in the National Football League. If we don't get an honor like that without earning it.

"Second, of all the quarterbacks I've defenced, nobody does a better job of mixing up plays. Earl had a very good sense for the mix—by which I mean runs, passes, draws and screens. He also throws the ball well."

The Rams' Roman Gabriel will alternate with Morrall.

Snell Not Picked

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — A wide open affair with football filling the air was the forecast for Sunday's American Football League all-star game matching the East against the West in the Gator Bowl.

With the exception of Matt Snell, New York Jets' running star in last Sunday's Super Bowl victory, coaches Hank Stram of Kansas City and Wally Lemm of Houston have all their command the leading ground gainers of the season. Snell didn't receive a vote for the all-star team.

Twenty-two players, 11 offensive and 11 defensive were selected by the league's 10 coaches. The other 11 players on each squad were picked by Stram of the West and Lemm of the East.

But one need only look at the quarterbacks and pass receivers to realize that the story of this game will be written in the air.

Joe Namath, who directed the Jets to their Super Bowl victory over Baltimore Colts of the National League, will share the helm of the East with Bob Griese of Miami Dolphins.

Three of Hadl's pass catching teammates—Lance Alworth, Gary Garrison and Jacques MacKinnon—will be at Stram's beck and call.

Aces Get Jump

The Belleville Aces journeyed to Picton Wednesday night and thrashed winless Picton 96-67 to move within two points of first place Belleville Teachers in the league's Day of Quinte Men's Basketball League.

Six foot five inch John Chalmers was the big gun for the Aces with 40 points, and the former BCI star is leading the league in scoring in his rookie year, after moving up from high school ball.

Tom Lornie and Gary Swan each netted 17 points for the winners while Don McCornick added 12 points.

Mcwoit with 22 points and Litchford with 18 topped the Picton scorers.

Olympic Prexy Satisfied

MONTREAL (CP) — Howard Radford, president of the Canadian Olympic association, on Thursday refused to find fault with the difference in amounts alloted his organization to take Canada's athletes to the summer Olympics in Mexico last October and the amount spent by the Canadian Broadcasting Corp. in covering the event.

Figures labled in the House of Commons Wednesday showed that Olympic coverage by the publicly-owned CBC ended with a net cost of $889,000.

Radford, Canada's chef de mission to the Oct. 10-27 Games, took 144 athletes and 34 officials to Mexico for a sum "in the neighborhood of $150,000."

"Unlike us, the CBC had to pay a lot for the rights to be there," Radford said. "We got approximately half of our expenses from the government, but I don't think the two are entirely related."

DESIGNED TO FILL THE EMPTY DAYS!

In 1890, James Naismith was trying to figure out a game to fill the physical education curriculum between the football and baseball seasons. Basketball was the name of his invention . . . and it's the only competitive sport of purely American origin!

There's a wonderful invention used all over the world to sell and rent things . . . almost or almost anything . . . here we are talking about it . . . here it is, and you get it by dialing 962-2242.

3 OFFICES FOR RENT, HEATED, two rooms up-to-date, private entrance, parking, 962-6655. Available February 1st. Also one hundred square feet of storage space available. 962-6655. Ja14-21

NERO PLAYED THE BAGPIPES?

Although we think of the bagpipes as being a Scottish instrument, it is very popular in almost India and the Roman Empire here's how it had one, too. Made of a leather bag and reed pipes, the bagpipes was a popular folk and military instrument in Scotland and Ireland.

Whether you wish to sell a good set of bagpipes or any other no longer used musical instruments at your house, rely on a fast-acting Intelligencer ad to do it for you! Call 962-9171 for information.

IF WE GAVE THE USUAL CAR GUARANTEE WE'D HAVE TO CHANGE OUR GUARANTEE

The usual used car Guarantee goes something like this: "If anything goes wrong, you pay half of the repairs and we'll pay half."

OURS GOES LIKE THIS:

"We Guarantee the Free Repair or replacement of every major working part for 30 days or 1,000 miles. Whichever comes first."

We call it the VW 100 PERCENT GUARANTEE. And, for the record, we aren't about to change it.

It covers all of the cars Listed Below.

1966 CHEV. Impala. Lic. 344-160, full power ..... $1995.
1965 PLYMOUTH Belvedere. Lic. L24377, A-1 condition .. $995.
1961 CHEVY. Bel-Air. Lic. L40033 ..... $495.
1961 COMET, Lic. L40503 ..... $495.

TORONTO STOCKS

TORONTO (CP) — The Toronto stock market was slightly lower in moderate trading today. Price changes in all sections were small.

Gains outnumbered losses by a narrow margin. Volume was lighter than usual.

Brokers say the market is still in a strong position after an unbroken string of six successive gains. About three-quarters of last week's losses have been recovered.

In industrials, Tonecraft rose 10 to 27, Westeel ¼ to 16, Dominion Stores ¼ to 37, E-L Financial ¼ to 114¼, Canada Cement ¼ to 34¾ and Texaco ¼ to 27.

Trading resumed in Hardee Farms, which dropped 10 cents to $1.50 in heavy turnover. Trading was halted Wednesday pending the announcement that Hardee has agreed to sell control to Cecil H. Franklin of Toronto.

Canada Steamship Lines fell ½ to 23. Keeprite Products ½ to 30¼ and Massey-Ferguson ¼ to 22¾.

Great West Saddlery advanced ¼ to 15¼ after reporting annual earnings of 34 cents a share compared with 9 cents last year.

Among mines, Denison rose ¼ to 73¼. Annual profits also were substantially higher.

Hollinger gained 65 cents to 19.65 and Merrill Island 25 cents to 14.75.

In the western oil list, Banff was up 1¼ to 15¼, Pacific Petroleum ¼ to 25¼ and National Petro 20 cents to $9.20.

On index, industrials gained 0.61 to 189.71, golds .10 to 248.79, base metals .47 to 117.00 and western oils .57 to 244.32. Volume by 11 a.m. was 477,000 shares compared with 1,206,000 at the same time Thursday.

Prices have risen steadily for the last six trading sessions after the market's sharp slump early last week. About three-quarters of the original losses have been wiped out.

The recovery was boosted by another good day in New York.

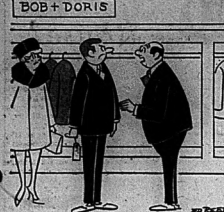
The Industrial Index advanced one point to 189.50, less than two points below its record. The base metal Index touched an all-time high for the third successive day.

Trading volume was slightly lower. A total of 4,775,000 shares changed hands compared with 5,062,000 Wednesday.

Keeprite Products rose 3 to 30¼ and Massey-Ferguson ¼ to 22¾. Famous Players 1¼ to 70, Consolidated Bathurst 1¼ to 22 and Great Northern Capital 1 to 15¾.

Imperial Oil, one of the heaviest traders, advanced ¾ to 22¼ after launching a record 1,400,000 copper, aluminum, lead and zinc.

Hudson Bay Mining was up to 78 after announcing an increase in its price for zinc.



Golds were generally lower following the trend on the free market where the price of bullion declined. Dome Mines lost to $4.00.

On index, western oils advanced 2.49 to 243.75 and base metals .26 to 161.53. Golds fell 3.62 to 248.69. Gains outnumbered losses by 224 to 251.

Prague Student Burns Self To Protest Soviet Occupation

PRAGUE (AP) — Reports swept through Prague today that more self-immolations were planned after a Czechoslovak student poured gasoline over his body and set himself on fire Thursday in Wenceslas Square to protest Soviet occupation of Czechoslovakia.

Jan Palach, 21, a student at Charles University, was in critical condition from burns over 85 per cent of his body.

There were unconfirmed reports that more students were willing to burn themselves and that Palach carried a letter saying the next such incident would take place within 10 days and continue until the Russians leave.

Czechoslovakia's Communist party central committee, meanwhile, scheduled another meeting today after recessing a session that had been scheduled to approve decisions already made. An official announcement said it would have heard Thursday and that 18 more are scheduled.

It was considered possible the central committee's timing was thrown off by the suicide attempt.

The government showed its concern by sending Evsen Erbaev, chairman of the National Front, and Stanislav Rail, premier of the Czech national government, to meet with student leaders at a university building on Gorky Square.

Many students said Palach's immolation was bound to stir up students who already are in the forefront of protest against abandonment of some reforms and loss of freedoms because of the presence of Soviet troops.

The trade union newspaper Prace said: "It is said four or five young people want to follow his example" and added that his action was intended to "protest the occupation of Czechoslovakia by foreign armies."

Jean Dixon's Horoscope

For Tuesday 18

Your birthday today: Following a slow start in the first two months, the year promises material reward. Those following professions or self-employment are especially favored. Today's natives tend to develop great leadership in maturity. Many have achieved great power in industry and politics.

ARIES (Mar. 21 — Apr. 19): New contacts are available all around but are not to be handled roughly or taken for granted. Graciousness can spoil an opportunity. Be satisfied with very brief introductions; development of the relationship comes later.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 — May 20): Activities can be smooth, but associates require real tact from you. Co-operation now has quite a high tag on it. Any contest of opinions escalates into quarrels.

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): People from faraway places have some influence favoring your skills and education now. Your temptation is toward impatient criticism; there are better ways.

CANCER (June 21 — July 22): Hobbies, entertainment crowd out other interests today. Start early, while the enthusiasm flows. Retire early, for tomorrow has just as much claim on your energies.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22): Today is lucky in terms of social activity, emotional impressions, formation of new connections for future exploration. Take your mate with you; if unattached, a love might blossom momentarily.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 — Sept. 22): If possible change is to go it alone today. If you can't, then resolve to stay out of the bickering and to refrain from offering any response.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 — Oct. 22): Think young, choose companions of diverse tastes, go exploring with them, away from your normal experiences. For this you need no special talent, just the willingness to look from a different perspective.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23—Nov. 21): Wanderlust overtakes you. You find it hard to respond to it in a modest way at once, perhaps in a big way later on, after you've found the means and opportunity. Relatives have surprises for you.

SAGITTARIUS, (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): Inspiration comes suddenly, perhaps from a trivial incident, and you have something added to strive for, which will definitely there once you've sensed it.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 — Jan. 19): Advice of friends is just a bit out of kilter. Your own judgment is at its keenest now. Spending is the most difficult factor to control.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb. 18): Personal plans make fair progress if you control the eagerness to get things settled. Some of the people you mind deal with today are very touchy and your finesse is important for results.

PISCES (Feb. 19 — Mar. 20): Just be yourself since the norm is for everybody to tell a different tale. Your home offers a challenge: you can do a number that's been long over-due tried in the way of maintenance.

Marmora

MARMORA — Retiring from Marmoraton Mining Co. Limited on Friday, after 15½ years' service, Lorne Bowen of Corbova was presented with a watch and 50 cigars by fellow employees in the warehouse. Gift from shop workers at the Mine was a leather wallet with a sum of money. Mr. and Mrs. Bowen are planning a motor trip to the West Coast this summer.

Mrs. Jim Shrubb and children of Alsask, Sask., are spending some weeks with Mrs. Shrubb's mother, Mrs. P. J. O'Neill. Mr. Shrubb on course at North Bay, was here for the weekend.

Mrs. Elden Kelly of Whitehorse, Yukon, have been visiting Mr. and Mrs. Stewart Hardy of Marmora Township.

Mr. and Mrs. Doug Trumble and children of Winnipeg visited their parents in Marmora over the holiday season.

Mrs. Theresa Skelly of Rochester, N.Y., was in Marmora for the funeral on Saturday of her brother, Donald Shannon. Mrs. Skelly was accompanied by her daughter, Mrs. Don Brennan.

'Hang-ups' on Religion

BY CLARENCE W. CRANFORD

What is your "hang-up" concerning religion? This is a popular term today, and many people do have hang-ups, or difficulties, concerning religion.

The hang-up of some people is that they find it difficult to believe what religion teaches. Most religions are based on the concepts of the universe with such a Being, especially when He is pictured as a personal God.

Christianity teaches the divinity of Christ. For some people this is a hang-up. They find it difficult to ascribe special divinity to one person that others do not also share.

They were good men. They wanted to do God's will. They thought they were doing God's will by enforcing these regulations. But by enforcing the system, they crowded out the real purpose of the day. People are so bogged-down obeying the regulations, they fail to experience the real merciful God.

Jesus refused to be bound by the system, and so ran afoul on those who were trying to enforce it. If the system was challenged or changed, they felt the very role of religion in the lives of the people would totter. So they resented the fact that Jesus' disciples did not always keep the fast days, and that Jesus healed people on the Sabbath. How could people maintain a proper reverence for the day if the restrictions were ignored?

These religious leaders could not see Jesus. He was too popular. He did amazing things. People went to fantastic extremes to bring sick persons to Him (Mark 2:4), and He healed them. As a result, people were saying, "We never saw anything like this." (Mark 2:12 RSV)

In order to heal their body, Jesus often had to deal with a person's spiritual problem. Most people thought of sickness as a punishment for sin. If a person was sick, that meant God was angry at him. Jesus had to assure such a person that God was not angry with him, but would forgive and heal him. (Mark 2:5)

This was the first hang-up religious leaders had with Jesus. Who was He to speak with such confidence for God? Jesus insisted His right to give such assurance was demonstrated by the healing that resulted. (Mark 2:10-12)

They were also hung-up on Jesus' attitude toward fasting and Sabbath regulations. Jesus insisted that when a need comes, first, regulations second. Regulations are meant to serve men, not men to maintain a set of regulations.

When will churches learn that human worth comes first? What ever structure gets in the way is bad, and should go. Whatever channel permits God's love to flow to human need, that channel is good. Whatever blocks that flow is bad. Blue laws won't create a respect for the Lord's Day. A new committee to discipline lukewarm church members is not enough. What is needed is a whole new concept of the church as God's healing agent in the world.

The Uniform Sunday School lesson for January 19: "Early Reactions to Jesus," Mark 2:1 through 3:6.

For many people, the hang-up is the structure of the institutional church. Institutional religion is very much under fire today. There are those, who are saying that God cannot use the church as it now exists to do what He wants done in the world, because its structure gets in the way of the church's mission.

The problem, of course, is that the church must have some kind of a structure to do its work. After all, a spirit needs some kind of a body, how can it express itself? And a church needs some body of doctrine, some organization, some program, or how can it express its faith and concern to the world? But it is so easy for the structure to get in the way of its mission. People can spend so much time defending a doctrine, or maintaining an organization, they have no time around to carrying out the church's mission which is to witness to God's love in the world.

This is nothing new. Religion has always had this problem. It did in Jesus' day. Religious leaders were concerned that people be kept aware of God. There were many ways to do this. One way was to observe certain fast days. Another way was to observe one day a week as a special day set aside primarily for the worship of God. To keep people from desecrating this day, they made a very strict system of laws, or regulations, to govern how it should be spent.

U.S. Plans to Cut Forces in Vietnam

Paris Talks Open

PARIS (AP) — The four representatives at the new Vietnam peace talks reached agreement today on all procedural matters, and real negotiations will begin early next week, the United States delegation reported.

After a five-hour 15-minute meeting with representatives of the South Vietnamese government, North Vietnam and the Viet Cong guerrillas' South Vietnam National Liberation Front, U.S. Ambassador Cyrus R. Vance told reporters:

"I am happy to report that we have reached full agreement on all procedural questions for the first plenary session which will take place early next week."

The U.S. ambassador gave no immediate details on the procedural format for the peace negotiations. But he said: "I am happy that we are getting down to the serious business of making peace in Vietnam."

The swift disposal of procedural questions means that there will be no more haggling over matters not directly concerned with the achievement of a Vietnam peace.

At the start of the meeting North Vietnam proposed that the first meeting on matters of substance should begin early next week.

Mission Accomplished

Fourth Cosmonaut Lands

MOSCOW (AP) — Cosmonaut Boris Volynov landed safely today, successfully completing a four-man mission in which the Soviet Union achieved the world's first crew transfer between orbiting spaceships.

Volynov made a soft landing in the Soviet Union aboard his Soyuz 5 spaceship, the official Soviet news agency Tass reported.

"He feels good," Tass said.

His landing came one day after three other cosmonauts made a soft landing in the Soviet Union aboard Soyuz 4, the other spacecraft in the historic mission.

Two of the three—Alexei Yeliseyev and Yevgeny Khrunov—made world walk Thursday from Volynov's Soyuz 5 to join Vladimir Shatalov aboard Soyuz 4 after the spaceships linked up in orbit.

Tass said Volynov landed in an area about 125 miles southwest of the Soviet city of Kustanay at 11 a.m. Moscow time (3 a.m. EST). This would put him in an area a few hundred miles northwest of the space centre at Baikonir, where Soyuz 3 was launched last Wednesday with Volynov, Khrunov and Yeliseyev aboard.

The safe landing of Volynov, 34, "successfully completed" the multi-planned mission which began Tuesday with the launching of Shatalov aboard Soyuz 4, Tass said.

Tass said a braking rocket on Volynov's space ship was fired at a pre-determined time and the Soyuz craft descended into the atmosphere. Its descent was further slowed by a parachute system, Tass added, and the spaceship floated down to a soft landing in a pre-determined area.

Apparently using the same landing technique as Soyuz 4 Friday, the Soyuz 5 today separated into two sections during the landing, Tass said. Volynov was aboard the crew capsule, while the working quarters descended separately.

The flight of Soyuz 5 lasted 72 hours 46 minutes. Counting the launching of Soyuz 4 Tuesday, the entire mission lasted 96 hours 21 minutes.

The Soyuz mission has been widely acclaimed as a step toward assembly of permanent space stations or laboratories to which scientists and cosmonauts can be ferried back and forth from earth.

Foreign commentators and observers have also noted the military value of permanent manned earth satellites and their possible use as a base for further flights in space.

France Issues Call For Big Four Parley

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

France has called for a Big Four conference aimed at settling the Middle East crisis. But the United States is reported backing a peacemaking plan which would include provisions for direct talks between the Arab states and Israel.

The Washington Evening Star, in a story following the French announcement Friday, quotes qualified sources as saying State Secretary Dean Rusk outlined a form of two-track negotiations in a note handed to Soviet Charge d'Affaires Yuri N. Tchernikov.

The Star says Rusk's note proposed talks between the United States and the Soviet Union, and separate talks between Israel and Arab states under a United Nations "umbrella."

The talks between the two big powers, the newspaper reported, would be to help UN special envoy Gunnar V. Jarring mark out "peace perimeters" for detailed Arab-Israeli negotiations. Jarring would mediate the talks between the Arabs and Israelis.

The French proposal, issued at the United Nations and in Paris, suggested that France, the United States, Britain and the Soviet Union meet at the United Nations to discuss ways to end the Middle East dispute.

The French statement avoided any implication that the Big Four would attempt to impose a settlement, but indicated the aim of the meeting would be to implement the Security Council's November, 1967, Middle East resolution.

100,000 Men May Go Home

SAIGON (AP) — President Nguyen Van Thieu announced today some United States combat troops will be withdrawn from South Vietnam this year. He has directed his military chief of staff to draft a timetable with the U.S. command.

Thieu did not say how many of the 532,500 U.S. troops in the country would be withdrawn, and added detailed plans will first have to be developed by the military staffs of the two countries before specific timing can be developed."

But sources said the initial withdrawal might affect 20,000 troops and 100,000 might be phased out by the end of the year.

An aide to Gen. Cao Van Vien, chief of South Vietnam's armed forces, said Vien conferred with the U.S. commander in South Vietnam, Gen. Creighton W. Abrams, last week. A spokesman for Abrams said further discussions are scheduled between the two.

Abrams is understood to have reluctantly accepted the fact that some American troops will have to be withdrawn soon, but he is opposed to any reduction until mid-July.

Abrams believes the South Vietnamese army will not be good enough to fill the gaps until then. He also wants to keep the Viet Cong "on the run," sources said, and would prefer to await developments after the Paris peace talks before paring down U.S. strength.

Thieu's announcement followed a two-hour meeting Friday between Thieu, U.S. Ambassador Ellsworth Bunker and Abrams.

Some high-ranking American officials who are critical of current military tactics have reported to Washington that a 20 per cent U.S. troops reduction is possible without letting up the pressure on the Viet Cong. But they say troops left in Vietnam would have to be utilized more effectively than at present.

Latest official figures put the strength of the South Vietnamese armed forces at 800,000 regulars and militiamen.

Thieu said American troops could now be withdrawn "thanks to the growth of the ARVN (Army of the Republic of Vietnam) both in quantity as well as quality." He added that a gradual American withdrawal "will in no way alter the military and security situation in Vietnam."

On the battlefield there were no reports of major sustained fighting.

Panthers Slain At College

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Two officials of the militant Black Panthers were shot to death Friday as a meeting about a proposed Afro-American studies program was breaking up at the campus of the University of California at Los Angeles.

About three hours later, police arrested 17 persons they said were fellow Panthers or friends of the victims apparently planning revenge. Police said no one was charged with the killings.

Most of those arrested were booked on suspicion of illegally possessing weapons after officers seized 14 guns, a homemade bomb and hundreds of rounds of ammunition. The arsenal was found, police said, around one victim's home in the Watts area, about 20 miles south of UCLA.

Police said they were investigating an apparent rivalry between the Panthers and another group which they did not identify.

Soviet Ship Tracks Cosmonauts

The Soviet satellite tracking ship Kosmonaut Vladimir Komarov is shown today steaming through the Atlantic about 100 miles southeast of Halifax. The defence department said Friday she was presumably in the area to plot the path of the Russian Soyuz 4 and Soyuz 5 space ships launched earlier this week. This photo was taken by a Canadian Argus patrol aircraft.

Benson Won't Raise Taxes This Spring

TORONTO (CP) — The Globe and Mail quotes Finance Minister Benson as saying Canadians will face no federal tax increases this spring.

In an Ottawa story, the newspaper said Mr. Benson has no plans for a spring budget and likely will not present one unless there is a significant change from the economic conditions forecast in his Oct. 22 budget.

Budgets are not necessary unless tax changes are planned, the Globe and Mail quotes Mr. Benson as saying.

In his October budget, Mr. Benson forecast a surplus of 1969-70. He estimated expenditures for the next fiscal year at $11,875,000,000

Detailed estimates for government spending in 1969-70 are expected to be tabled before the end of the month.

Mr. Benson said Friday that forecasts made last October still appear to be reasonable.

Students at Tokyo Lose Buildings Held for Year

TOKYO (Reuters) — About 8,000 police broke through barriers at Tokyo University today and occupied 19 buildings being held for up to a year by militant left-wing students.

At nightfall riots called off their offensive for the day, leaving the students still in control of a nine-storey assembly hall.

Throughout the battle police helicopters hovered overhead, dropping tear gas canisters among the students.

From the rooftops of university buildings students showered police with acid bottles, gasoline bombs, furniture and slingshot pellets.

Reports said 245 students were arrested and 45 police and about 10 students and reporters were injured.

The last student bastion — held by an unknown number of students — withstood police attempts to get in with power saws, axes and crowbars.

Before the police sweep, students in the building told reporters they had stockpiles of food and could withstand a 10-day siege.

Classes at the university had been halted for months as the occupation, started a year ago to win university reform, grew into bitter rivalry between two main left-wing factions on the campus.

News Briefs

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — District Attorney Jim Garrison has asked for an indefinite delay of the trial of Clay L. Shaw, 55, charged with conspiring with Lee Harvey Oswald and others to murder President John F. Kennedy. The trial was scheduled to start Tuesday. Garrison says that federal secrecy has crippled his case.

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP) — Despite threats of a $15,000-a-day fine, employees of the J. Clark Keith hydro generating station refuse to end their strike. About 120 members of Local 102, Canadian Union of Operating Engineers, have remained in the plant since Thursday morning, after a mass who wouldn't work overtime was suspended.

School Administrators Move to New Offices

Creation of Hastings County Board of Education this month has resulted in a shuffling of administrators between the former high school and public school board offices.

Official headquarters of the new county board is in the former public school offices at 208 Bridge St. East. The board allocated $2,000 earlier in the month for renovation of the rear of the building into extra office space.

This week, administrators with the former Bay of Quinte District High School Board moved from the former high school board offices on College St. West to the new headquarters. Assistant superintendents and supervisors with the school board moved to the College St. offices.

"We are pulling the senior administrative staff together in the new building to begin the team approach to education in the county," said board chairman James Clarke.

D. C. Stirling, high school superintendent, L. F. Reid, assistant, and R. O. Dulmage, temporary secretary-treasurer of the new board, have moved into the Bridge St. East offices, together with two of the former high school board secretaries.

John Bancroft, assistant business administrator with the former high school board, will remain at the College St. offices temporarily and W. J. B. Keith, superintendent of plant, has moved to an office at Centennial Secondary School.

Superintendent with the former public school board, L. A. Kells and business administrator Lee Anderson, are also accommodated at the Dundas St. East Offices.

Assistant public school superintendents J. M. Cousins and R. D. Howood are now housed at the former high school board offices. With them are five elementary school supervisors, Miss Phyllis May, Mrs. Dorothy Blakeley, Miss Phyllis Beattie, John Dizon and Walter Cochrane.

Yet to be accommodated at the former public school offices are the director of education Eric Runacres, who will take over his duties Feb. 1, and the board's business administrator, who will be appointed early in February.

Administrators and business officials with former boards in Trenton, Tweed and Bancroft are continuing in their former positions on a temporary basis.

Decisions on their positions with the new board will have to await the arrival of the director of education next month. Superintendents employed by the department of education in the district are also continuing in their former positions until re-organization of the county system is completed.

IN MEMORIAM

BOWES — In loving memory of my dear husband James A. Bowes, who passed away Jan. 18, 1965.

Sadly missed along life's way
Lonely thoughts every day.
No longer here, my life to share,
But in my heart he is always there.
—Always remembered by wife Dorothy, son Donald and daughter-in-law Bob, and grandchildren.

CLARK — In loving memory of my dear grandfather George M. Clark, who passed away Jan. 17, 1963.

Dear to the thoughts of one so dear,
Those happy days we spent together,
Thoughts return to scenes long past,
Time rolls on but memories last.
—Always remembered by granddaughter Charlie.

DAVOE — In loving memory of Albert Dalee, who passed away January 18th, 1967.

Those we love we never lose,
For memory keeps them dear,
And always remembered.
Always in our memory.
—Lovingly remembered by his family.

FRASER — In loving memory of a wonderful father and grandfather Fred Fraser, who passed away January 19, 1962.

Every day in some small way,
Memories of you come our way,
Not a day goes by dear Dad,
That we don't remember you.
—Lovingly remembered by daughter Loella, son-in-law Rupert and grandchildren Ann and Bill.

HALL — In loving memory of dear brother Lorne, who passed away Jan. 18, 1966.

May God grant him eternal rest.
Gone but not forgotten.
—Lovingly remembered by Joan, Ralph and family.

HURST — In loving memory of my dear sister Agnes Hurst who passed away January 19th, 1966.

You are not forgotten sister,
Nor ever will be,
While memory lingers that last,
We will remember thee.
—Lovingly remembered by sister Theresa and brother-in-law Al.

POST — In loving memory of a dear husband and father, Percy Post, who passed away January 19th, 1964.

Your presence is ever near us,
Your love remains with us yet,
Your kind deeds we kind of feiter,
Your loved ones would never forget.
—Ever remembered by son Vernon, daughter-in-law Laura and grandchildren.

POST — In loving memory of my dear friend Percy Post, who passed away January 19th, 1964.

In our hearts your memory lingers,
Always tender, fond and true,
There's not a day, dear husband,
We do not think of you.
—Sadly missed by wife Evelyn and family.

SODERBERG — In loving memory of a dear husband and father, Carl Soderberg, who entered into eternal rest, January 18, 1965.

There's a land beyond the river,
That we cannot see,
Where the weary ones shall rest.
—Sadly missed by wife Ethel, children and grandchildren.

THORN — In memory of our brother-in-law Charles Edward Thorn, who passed away Jan. 18, 1968.

Looking back with memories,
Down the path, you trod.
We bless the hours we had with you,
And leave the rest with God.
—Sadly missed by Gladys Elmer and children.

THORN — In loving memory of my beloved husband Charles Edward Thorn, who passed away January 18, 1968.

Where memories linger,
Sorrow and sadness dwell,
Death leaves a wound that never heals.
As ever aching heart,
Which I feel so true,
Dear husband, and whisper
Charles I think of you.
Those days we shall all survive,
And being one to forget,
But dear Lord, I would like to know,
How much I miss you yet.
—Sadly missed and remembered by wife Marjorie.

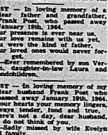
THORN — In loving memory of my father Charles Edward Thorn, who passed away Jan. 18, 1968.

It brings a day we never forget,
A sorrow we never forget,
But our memories of him will never die.
We miss him more than anyone knows,
As each day passes, our emptiness grows,
The years ahead will wipe away,
But the ache in our hearts will stay.
When days of memories are few,
And we're all sadly, his thoughts but he left us memories to treasure.
—Ever remembered by daughter Shirley Thorn and family, Toronto, Leamington, Ont.

THORN, Charles Edward — In loving memory of our son-in-law Charles Edward Thorn, who died one year ago, January 18, 1968.

Sad, lonely days we've spent,
Since you left us,
Hello, Dad, in the same old way,
To bear your memory in mind,
To sit with you and chat awhile,
Is all we have to remember you by,
Charles him with care,
Is all we have to keep the heartache,
Till we're his vacant chair.
—Sadly missed by daughters and son Sylvia, James, Lorna and Douglas.

THORN — In loving memory of our dear brother Charles who passed away January 18, 1968.



Dear Brother, your labors ended,
Never more will grief or pain,
Bow your head or make you heartache,
You are safe where God doth reign.
—Remembered always by brother Percy and family.

THORN, Charles Edward — In loving memory of a dear brother-in-law Charles Edward Thorn, who passed away January 18, 1968.

A few more steps along life's road,
Perhaps a few more years,
Then by God's grace we'll meet you dear,
Beyond the vale of tears.
Sadly missed but always remembered by brothers-in-law Don and Alvin.

THORN — In loving memory of our dear father Charles Edward Thorn who passed away one year ago today, January 18, 1968.

Dad's life was filled with suffer, day by day,
It ceased one bitter grief,
To see him slowly pine away,
His pain was more than we,
His weary hours and days of pain,
Will never more be seen,
Dad's life is ended and he's at rest,
He has found sweet rest at last,
Dad's journey's over, his work is done,
Sweet memories linger on.
—Sadly missed by daughter Virginia (Lennie) and son George Thorn.

Orliff Lloyd Retires

Orliff "Boiler" Lloyd, president and general manager of Garage Supply and one of the city's better known businessmen, municipal and community workers is retiring.

His immediate post-retirement program is to look over some world maps and with Mrs. Lloyd "do some travelling."

A native of Belleville Mr. Lloyd joined the Garage Supply organization 28 years ago and with the exception of two years in Kingston has spent almost his entire working years with the firm.

He is a past president of the Belleville Sarnia Club and the Belleville Kinsmen Club and has been associated with many of the city's community fund raising activities.

Intensely interested in the work of children he has given much of his time and effort to crippled children's work.

In the sports field Mr. Lloyd is one of the better known men of the area having worked hard to promote hockey, baseball and softball. He is also interested in municipal affairs and served two years on city council.

His successor as branch manager at Garage Supply in Belleville is Gordon Laing from the parent company in Hamilton.

"Mr. Laing will like it here," predicts Mr. Lloyd. "I know the staff will give him the same fine co - operation they gave me during my tenure of nearly four decades with Garage Supply."

Hospital Vetoes Visitors As Precautionary Measure

The current flu epidemic has closed the doors of Belleville General Hospital to all visitors.

The ban will be imposed starting next Tuesday and will be in effect for an indefinite period.

The move is a precautionary measure taken on the advice of the medical staff, John Kunetsky, assistant administrator, said this morning.

"Flu is prevalent in the community, and we have had a number of cases of the disease, of different varieties, in the hospital at the moment," he said.

Mr. Kunetsky added that none of the cases had yet been identified as the Hong Kong virus.

After Tuesday, visitors will be prohibited in all floors of the hospital including the maternity and pediatrics departments.

Fog Closes Airport Runways

TRENTON — Runways at CFB Trenton were socked in for five hours last night by an old-fashioned London pea soup fog that could be cut by a propeller blade.

As a result outgoing traffic had to be cancelled and incoming planes re-routed to Ottawa.

This morning air transportation for servicemen and their families returned to normal and schedules will be restored before the day is over, a spokesman at the air terminal said.

However, the latest report from the station's duty forecast office — rain, drizzle and fog, accompanied by milder temperatures — was not too encouraging.

There were a few passengers affected since all but one of the aircraft carried freight.

THE CORPORATION OF THE CITY OF BELLEVILLE

PROCLAMATION

January 19 to 26 is International Y.M.C.A. Week. The Belleville Family "Y" will play host to local citizens who are not members but who would be interested in visiting the "Y" building and participating in some of the available activities for youths, women and men during the week.

The Belleville Family "Y" celebrates 75 years of continuous service in the community. During 1968 there have been 43,813 individual participations in "Y" programs in the Y.M.C.A. building and other locations throughout the city. Over 15,000 of these participations were by non-members.

During the observance of "Y" Week, I am sure that all of us will join in paying tribute to the Belleville "Y" for its contributions to our community, and wish it continued success in its endeavors.

By virute of the authority invested in me as Mayor of the City of Belleville, I, J. Russell Scott, call upon all citizens to assist in the observation of Y.M.C.A. Week in Belleville.

Dated at the Mayor's Office
this 16th day of January 1969.

Signed
Russell Scott, M.D.

Artist Hangs Paintings.

Kingston artist Fred Schonberger was assisted by his daughter Frances in arranging the 34 landscapes he is exhibiting at the Corby Library gallery for the next two weeks. His desire for a one-man show in Belleville was born two years ago when he adjudicated a local art exhibition and admired the "gem of a gallery."

Europeans Coming

Artist Says Canada Growing Mecca

By LENNY WILLIAMSON
Staff Reporter

The excitement of a one-man show by an established painter reached Belleville today with the hanging of 34 paintings by Fred Schonberger in the Corby Library gallery.

Behind the landscapes on exhibition for the next two weeks lies a long tradition of European art invigorated by the Canadian environment.

Mr. Schonberger received his art education in Arnhem, Holland, and came to Canada in 1957. He now lives in Kingston with his wife and two daughters and instructs at Queen's University and for branch of the Ontario department of education.

"European artists are migrating to North America as fast as they can get away," claims Mr. Schonberger. "American painters are the base of the artistic pyramid, the support for the few artists who make it to the top. This base is absent in Europe — people have lost interest. But in Canada, mass participation in the arts is great and growing greater all the time."

Since his arrival in Canada, the artist has won the grand prize at Quebec's Salon aux Printemps in 1961, and now has paintings in the traveling exhibit of the Ontario Council for the Arts "Nine Kingston Artists".

"The arts are gaining their proper place in North American life." Mr. Schonberger says. "This continent will take over the leadership from Europe. There, the 'coke and joke box' culture that used to blanket this continent is taking over."

Artistic taste is improving fast in Canada, the painter says. Part of the responsibility lies with the schools.

"Art teaching in the elementary schools is excellent, but in the high schools is deplorable," he asserts.

"All the arts are needed in the modern world to provide the human element in an increasingly de-personalized society.

"We are going through a period of shifting in the art scene. The peaks are not as high as formerly, but mass participation is larger. The artist is becoming versatile; paintings are becoming having sculptures, for instance, and artists are working in several media at once."

Mr. Schonberger also sculpts and hopes to show his work in that medium in Belleville later in the year.

Art by itfstalment is another innovation on the art scene.

"All modern artists accept installment buying of their works," Mr. Schonberger says. "They have to, that's how the economy works. Besides, it is a boon in the artist. He is assured of a steady income from the instalment payments of his clients."

Good art is within reach of everyone today, he said.

"Eventually, I hope my 24 landscapes on display at the Corby gallery will find their way into private homes in Belleville. But until the show ends, anyone within driving distance can view them at no entrance charge. Almost every community in Canada now has a gallery, public or commercial, where the exhibiting artists render the same community service at no cost to the public."

Mr. Schonberger was trained in the great tradition of the Rembrandt school of art. Do his works show the influence of the Dutch master?

"Not you must see my paintings and decide for yourself," he chides. "One half my artistic life has been spent in this country, and I would hope the Canadian influence would be as strong as the European."

A clue may be gained by the comments of city amateur painters who caught an early look at the works.

"Landscape," "glowing", "serene", and "superb concept of light" was their verdict.

Soloists Add Voice To Concert

The third in this season's series of concerts by The Kingston Symphony Association will be presented in the Grand Theatre, Kingston, at 2.30 p.m. on Sunday, Jan. 26.

Dr. F. R. C. Clarke will conduct the 100 voice Kingston Choral Society and the 50 piece Symphony Orchestra in a performance of Mendelssohn's "Elijah". Solo roles will be sung by Doreen Millman, soprano, Nancy Greenwood, alto, Larry Marshall, tenor and William Perry, baritone.

This highly competent choral group, in its eleventh season under Dr. Clarke, supported by the outstanding solo voices, promises musical fare to reflect the acclaim brought to the Association with last season's performances of the Bach B Minor Mass.

Lions Seek Fairgrounds Building

Rental requests for the new fairgrounds recreation building were discussed yesterday by members of the newly formed Recreation - Arena Committee.

Most urgent of the requests considered was from the Belleville Lions Club which wants to rent the building twice monthly for bingo games now being held at the Tibi Club at the Belleville Plaza.

Committee members agreed to the rental with lease arrangements to be worked out later.

Washrooms of storeroom facilities are now being installed at the fairgrounds building with the work expected to be completed by the end of June.

Recreation-Arena committee members decided they would hold their regular meetings on the same date and immediately following Parks Board meetings — on the first Thursday following city council meetings.

PE School Board to Interview Seven Applicants for Director

PICTON (Staff) — Acting as committee of the whole, the Prince Edward School Board decided to interview seven of the 19 applications for the position of superintendent of education for Prince Edward County at a meeting yesterday.

The board does not want to interview any more applicants than necessary, because it is responsible for the expenses incurred by applicants attending interviews.

Horton Martin, chairman of the board, said that they hope to start interviewing next weekend. He thinks the seven applicants can be interviewed in one day.

He said that some of the applicants had informed the board that they had already taken positions elsewhere. Most of them, said Mr. Martin, are already working for the department of education.

Although the department gives the board until July to hire a superintendent, Mr. Martin wants to obtain one as soon as possible. He does not wish to see the academic standard of the schools jeopardized.

Fire Protection Offered Areas

PICTON (Staff) — Picton Fire Chief Duayne Foshay, said yesterday that he would be happy to assist any of the townships or municipalities, whose fire protection may be weakened if the army base closes completely.

Chief Foshay said that several of the municipalities and townships are already receiving more than adequate protection under their present arrangement.

The chief said he thought Picton town council would be receptive to entering into aid agreements with surrounding territories now covered by army firefighting equipment if the military base were to close completely.

He said there was no reason why some portion of the proposed mutual aid plan could not be used by concerned municipalities.

Firefighters Build Own Meeting Room

PICTON (Staff) — The men of the Picton Fire Department are hard at work renovating what will be their new recreation and meeting room, located on the second floor of the fire hall.

Donald Burns, one of the three permanent firemen said each of them works on the room as much as possible during his 24 hour shift and the volunteer firemen help at night.

At the moment they are laying the floor tile, but they must have the whole room finished by Feb. 5 in time for their Mutual Aid Meeting.

Picton Alarm System To Be Ready by Spring

PICTON (Staff) — Fire Chief Duayne Foshay said yesterday that the town's new fire alarm system should be installed and working by spring.

Town council granted $2500 toward the new equipment designed to add further protection to both lives and property.

Chief Foshay said that six were already booked into the old alarm system. They are the Royal Hotel Prince Edward Collegiate the county home, Beamish store, Rest Haven Nursing home and the hospital.

To be added to the new system are the Proctor-Silex Co., Bata Shoe, and the Uplands Nursing Home.

Chief Duayne said the reduction in insurance rates would pay for the equipment required in the buildings.

He hopes that more institutions will hook into the system. A nominal fee is required for connection.

Raise Chinchillas with Canada's largest chinchilla marketing association

Consider these facts:

- CHINCHILLA — has long been recognized as one of the world's most valuable furs. The velvety softness and light weight of chinchilla has constituted in the spectacular growth of the industry, and the demand for chinchilla pelts is the backbone of the supply. In the tradition of breed research, quality, and consistency demand the "Gold" maintains its leadership.
- INCOME — supplemental income has become a reality. The Chinchilla Gold provides all ranchers a written contract wherein their chinchilla offspring are purchased by the Gold at a minimum guaranteed price. The "Gold's" contract also provides a sire exchange program controlled by IBM machines.
- CONVENIENCE — chinchillas are generally raised in basements and spare rooms, as they are among the cleanest of animals, odor free, quiet, and gentle.
- CARE AND FEEDING — "chinchillas eat less than $1.00 a year to feed and second income families in their spare time profitee most of the pelts sold on today's market. You too, can share in the profits by joining the Gold, being owned by these people throughout the world.
- SERVICE — Purse penning, grading, killing, pelting, dressing and marketing are provided for by the Gold's extensive servicing organization, breeding and delivery of related equipment and supplies.
- INVESTMENT — The Chinchilla business is one of the easiest and least costly in which to invest. With financing available from the "Gold", your down payment need not be large. It is not limited as a tax shelter, Chinchilla investments also provides special tax advantages. If you are facing retirement, or in need of a second income and feed of animals let us show you why "CHINCHILLA" can be a second investment.

Belleville's Future

Revealing . . . that is how we would describe the panel discussion between city officials and Belleville Jaycees the other day. It revealed a lot about progress in Belleville — or the lack of it — and about what is going on in the minds of community officials.

We hear of plans, surveys, and more plans and surveys, but is there much to show for it? To be sure, there is the new overpass on Dundas West, and the roadway on Bridge Street West has been re-surfaced. These are welcome developments, but much more is yet to come, in all probability years ahead.

"We are only on the threshold of development. We will see far more in the next five years." That is what city manager J. R. Reynolds had to say. He spoke of millions of dollars in the capital works program for services to industrial parks.

And speaking of parks, Mayor Dr. J. Russell Scott told the Kiwanis Club Tuesday he hoped that one day Riverside Park will extend from Highway 401 to College Street on both sides of the river. And that is also a welcome prospect.

To return to the panel discussion, someone asked about the rebuilding of businesses after "annual" downtown fires, and received this reply from Ben Corke: "It is not unreasonable that it is not rebuilt. Fundamentally, the street was never all that busy."

Rebuilding of any such area of course remains the prerogative of the business concerned, or of any new purchaser of the property. Meanwhile, a depressing sequel to such a blaze is the debris left in the gap. This unfortunately, is a feature of the area destroyed by fire on Front Street some weeks ago. How long will it be before this gets cleared away?

What about the social and cultural aspects of city life? Industrial Commissioner Ray Brown was asked what importance the commission placed on these and he replied: "It is not an important factor. My wife considers it an important factor."

Well it may be outside the province of an industrial commission, but nevertheless a city ignores such factors as its peril.

The panel discussion also heard some pertinent comments on the recreational situation from Recreation Director Lorne Williams. That it is hard to know what youth wants half the time could have been the understatement of the day, but Mr. Williams certainly struck a chord there. He said the young people do not want to be told what they need. They desire certain things, but they want to come and go as they please.

Perhaps, if he were more blunt, Mr. Williams could have said the truth that the young people want to have their cake and eat it. He reminded his listeners that most of the recreation resources are here in Belleville and it was just a matter of utilizing what is available. Are you listening teenagers?

As we have said, it was an interesting discussion. Belleville is on the march, if slowly. City Manager Reynolds envisages a population of 50,000 "a lot sooner than some people think." He could be right.

Home Exports

An official of the Department of Trade and Commerce has stated that Canadian companies could be exporting nearly $200 million worth of factory-made housing annually to the northern United States within five years.

This is very interesting, but what about Canada's own needs? At a time when people here are crying out for inexpensive housing, this sounds like an excellent opportunity to provide it.

At the same time, export to the U.S. will be facilitated by the fact that the U.S. tariff on Canadian housing components, now 13 per cent, will drop to eight per cent by 1972.

Traffic Hazard

Cars turning into residences along Dundas Street West can be a traffic hazard, especially during the rush hour and at night. Now there is another problem in the absence of lighting at the approach to the new overpass. Vehicles are turning onto and coming off the overpass, but at the moment there is little warning of the bridge's existence. A temporary flashing light could be beneficial until permanent traffic lights are provided.

Trudeau Has A Match in Sharp-tongued Backbenchers

By RICHARD JACKSON

OTTAWA — Don't let the super-stars of the parliamentary game, Prime Minister Trudeau, Conservative Leader Stanfield and Dief the Chief monopolize your interest in this great spectator sport of politics.

For if you do, you will miss much of the action.

And don't think you should not be following the play either — because contrary to what seems to be popular belief, the show is by no means for-free.

It just so happens that you are paying — and plenty, remember those taxes? — for whatever entertainment you can get out of it.

The total cost of this national political production is running pretty close to $13 billion a year.

So enjoy it. If you can, at that price.

They can't all be super-stars down there on the floor of the Commons.

Then, berewith a partial program and score card for some of the lesser and not-so-lesser lights.

Keep an eye on Cape Breton's combative Conservative, Donnie MacInnis.

Tough, wiry, completely without pretence, this outspoken former coal miner is actually the only man in the House who can stand off and face down Pierre Trudeau.

Never hesitating to speak his mind, extremely explosive with a dangerously short fuse, he has blown up in the prime ministerial face several times, instructing him to, among other things, "get real."

He completely baffles, if usually delights the prime minister, who obviously regards him as something of a "character," forceful, even formidable.

There have been times when the tough-tongued MacInnis has told off Trudeau in such style that the PM, in grudging admiration, has saluted him with a grin and a wave.

Watch Tory House Leader Gerald Baldwin, a very deceptively quiet, cool calculator from Northern Alberta.

Perhaps it figures that he picked up the working name of "Joe" in recognition of how, in sudden anger, he can cut up just about any Liberal or New Democrat reckless enough to rouse his icy rage.

Following the verbal footsteps of those two Tories Robert Coates of Nova Scotia's Cumberland and Wallace Nesbitt of Ontario's Oxford, as they lead in and out of the government's ever-expanding executive suites.

Wally and Bob are always on the prowl, looking for signs of what they call the "scandalermania" of the ministers and the mandarins on such fancy things as rugs with phones in matching colors, drapes of richest brocade, desks that cost as much as television color consoles and waste-baskets with price tags that could cover a week's groceries for a family of five.

This pair of opposition frontbenchers are something of a cross between private detectives and hound-dogs, sniffing and sleuthing their way through the corridors and towers of the ruling Liberals.

Never lose sight of long and lanky Stanley Knowles, grown old in the selfless service of his fellow man. He has been around going on a quarter of a century, worrying all those 25 years about the pensioners and suggesting successive governments about the other storytellers.

ed. A man of truly dedicated concern, this sere socialist has even himself so this in the service of others you can almost hear the winter wind whistling through his not - quite - bare lones.

Keep track of handsome George Hees, still as athletic at 59 he "kicks" his shoulders, sitting or walking, like a pro boxer.

His political foes have always tried selling Hees short as lightweight and something of a comedian. And he is good for laughs — watch him these days, he has become as used to Mr. Speaker batting him down as out of order that he has developed a skid-back-into - his - seat motion with his hand. It's a sort of signal of here - we - go - again.

But mark up to this same George Hees the most devastating definition of the new government's performance that anybody in the combined Opposition is far has managed to come up with: "terrifying incompetence."

Not bad that. Even the imperturable Pierre winced.

Send an ear to John Gilbert, a New Democratic Mr. from Saskatchewan's Broadview and hear some of the most beautifully mixed metaphors going.

Like, for example "Mohammed going to the mountain and bringing forth a mouse."

Keep tuned to the "Lake Ontario French" of Tory Doug Alkenbrack of Ontario's Prince Edward-Lennox. It is the most finely fractured French you are ever going to hear, and, warns Trudeau's Quebec lieutena nt, Rural Development Minister Jean Marchand, could set bilingualism back to the age of sign language.

Windsor: A Tale of Two Cities

Letter to the Windsor Star:

On the weekend of Dec. 22-23, two of my daughters travelled to Windsor as part of the Pembroke Kiwanis Youth Choir.

They have performed in many places away from home, but never have they come back so exuberant about a city or its people.

I would like to publicly express my appreciation and gratitude to the Kiwanis Club of Riverside for their kindness and consideration to the girls. It meant so much to them, especially when they were so far from home.

MRS. PAT REGGAN,
Pembroke.

Windsor Star:

It is high time that with a halt to the rash of armed robberies in Windsor, The wave of crime has gone beyond the humor stage, if there ever was any humor in being robbed.

The difficulties of the police are realized. They cannot be all over the city at one time. Most of the recent robberies have been small jobs, but in each case life was threatened.

Worst of all, some robberies were in daylight in downtown areas.

The Trials of a Moscow Housewife

United Press International

One day after work Vera I. Sorokina went to buy a half pound of sausage. She waited in line 40 minutes before reaching the meat counter.

At that moment a newspaper team entered the shop. They asked the manager why Miss Sorokina had to wait so long.

"What's wrong with standing in line 40 minutes for a half pound of sausage?" calmly replied manager M. Yurchilivev.

Miss Sorokina and millions of Soviet housewives know what's wrong. But they don't know how to cure the problem.

A Soviet housewife doesn't have a car and has to wait for crowded buses and trains.

"I live in the suburbs and work in the very heart of the city," said a young mother. "My girls stay with my parents during the week. I ride the subway 35 minutes each way. On the way home I shop. It's like working three extra hours a day."

She has to wait in different lines to buy meat, vegetables and dairy products, which are sold at separate counters.

The system requires that she first take a look at the produce, then line up at the cashier's desk in the other part of the shop. Armed with the sales slip, she can go to the counter and elbow into the crowd to pick up her purchase.

"To forget to buy a bottle of milk is a tragedy," the housewife said. "You have to go through it all over again plus carrying your loaded bags."

Once she is finished with shopping the wait for a bus or a streetcar begins.

The Soviet press is filled with harsh words of criticism of service personnel. Discussing problems in Moscow's transportation system, the government newspaper Izvestia recently said:

"Passengers naively believe that city buses were made to serve them. The drivers think otherwise."

Services in general are neglected because in the Marxist economic theory the profit is placed on production and there is no room to fit the value of services into centralized economic planning.

Waiting lines are inevitable in an economy of scarcity which not only doesn't provide enough consumer goods but also fails in giving incentives to service personnel to care for the customer.

One theory about Soviet inefficiency, popular among Western observers here, holds that a Russian in a service job rids himself of frustrations by maltreating customers and thus getting even with all those at whose hands he has suffered similar treatment.

There is enough money around but during the recent session of the Supreme Soviet (parliament) it was asserted that increases in personal income during 1968 were not matched by adequate increases in production of consumer goods.

Re-routing of School Buses

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

For nearly 20 years I have been busing students into BCI from Ameliasburg Township and unloading them at the entrances marked "Boys" and "Girls" on John St.

There were signs "Parking Reserved for School Buses" and "No Parking" on the east side of the street. The buses all faced toward Bridge St. and we were in and gone in a matter of minutes. A bus driver just needed to be a good careful driver and not a wizard with a slipping clutch.

Alas! those were the good old days. We have a feeling we are not wanted in Belleville now.

Thank you Marion Andrews for your letter on our behalf. I presume your daughters who ride on my bus have told you of some of our difficulties.

However, one of the few things you did not mention is that while we are hurriedly carrying around town, little rural school children are waiting at the roadside to be picked up and return from busing the high school students.

The weather has been good the past week but what about when students have to brave the elements on the way to the protection of the school when it is raining, snowing and blowing, and the girls in their short skirts stand wet and shivering holding those great piles of homework texts?

I am not criticizing the system — they will be in order when the students leave on stand there under a hot summer sun.

I feel that stopping on Church St. has caused a bottle-neck congestion as was on John St., with a lot more difficulty and danger for the school bus drivers and students. Martin buses from Brewersto cannot turn in the east if they face north on Church St., so they have to face south and even then it is a problem.

Several of the operators and drivers have complained but in spite of our objections to the school board and the traffic officers we are still here.

As you stated it would have been so simple to have made John St. a "One Way" street, banned the parking on the east side and reserved the length of the street.

A lot of the students who park here live in Belleville and those who don't could park at the back and thus eliminate much of the all day parking in the area.

Although we are reminded of the Charge of the Light Brigade (theirs not to reason why!) I personally would like to know the real reasons we are being shunted over to Church St.

The Bath—A Haven of Privacy

By Katharine Whitehorn,
London Observer Service
in The Globe and Mail

I am in my bath. I do not wish to be disturbed. I don't care if the house is burning down, the Government falling, the pound in ruins and all the hags escaping. No doubt the children will stop crying eventually, someone else will turn off the geyser; the national debt you just have to learn to live with and worse things happen at sea.

I know a man with a gazebo to retire to; there are doubtless some lighthouse keepers who get a bit of time to themselves: the religious go on retreats and people sometimes get a little enviable privacy stuck in an elevator between two floors. But for the rest of us, the bath is the only refuge. Nobody can get at us, nobody can expect us to get up and make their tea or sort their knitting or answer the telephone. Andy Capp crashed the last barrier when Florrie being in her bath and Andy's mother ringing, he said "You go, pet— I'm busy." And those carefully nudist parents who believe in "open bathroom" as a psychological ideal will take a running shower at themselves; there has to be some way of getting away from the little voice saying "You have got a fat tummy."

It's no wonder that it is now the bathroom that the decorators attack with their greatest zest. Sixties tube and baths in the middle of a room, a shower out of a metal chandelier; a round white bath with a gold key pattern round the edge or a bath with four-poster curtains are all perfectly available possibilities, and flowered basins, crystal jars, lush dripping vines and gilt taps and silk chairs and carpets are becoming commonplace. These days you don't need to take anything into the bathroom with you to think: you just lie there planning the dream bathroom in which you would like to be floating.

Status used to be clothes; then it was kitchens; now that it's bathrooms I suspect we're back to clothes again. This year I shall be wearing pink foam, green glass and a couple of new pictures; and I don't care how hard you laugh because I can't hear you at all.

Dead Sea Scrolls Give Hints On Life and Times of Jesus

NEW YORK (AP) — Like the gradual unfolding of a mystery story, fragmentary hints and clues today are being accumulated from musty manuscripts of the past to illuminate the times of Jesus.

"A steady stream of material is increasing our knowledge of that period," says Rev. Dr. Robert Northup of New York Theological Seminary. "We can expect a tide of additional material soon."

The painstakingly slow but dramatic process has been going on for about 20 years now, since the big finds of ancient documents in the dunes of Egypt in 1946 and in caves beside the Dead Sea in 1947.

However less than half of them have been deciphered and published so far, and work now is nearing completion on the rest.

Despite premature assumptions that the contents might undermine Christian views of Jesus, scholars say that instead the results have given new weight to the New Testament accounts.

"It has helped to make even clearer the special value and authenticity of the gospel records," said Dr. Northup, professor of New Testament literature and a research specialist on ancient writings of that era.

For instance, the Aramaic phraseology, especially in the Book of John, previously had caused many scholars to doubt about a century after Jesus' death, but the usages now are found to have been common in his own day, indicating an earlier origin.

Consequently, there now is new, objective ground for considering all the gospel accounts, including John, as having been produced within the span of the lifetimes of the apostles.

Of the newer leather-bound codexes or books found in Egypt, containing 6 tractates or writings, the dating of which varies in opinion from the 1st to the 4th century, only five of the writings have been generally published so far, containing mostly abstract material.

Of the Dead Sea scrolls, dated between 200 BC and 70 AD, four volumes have been published so far, with six others of which is used, which are expected within the next four years.

Besides detailed records about a separatist Jewish community, the Essenes, which lived in isolation beside the Dead Sea through Jesus' time, the documents also include all or parts of every Old Testament

Only Woman Member of Stock Exchange

NEW YORK (AP) — Muriel Siebert, who recently celebrated her first anniversary as the only woman member of the New York Stock Exchange, is one of those rare individuals who is bored by talking about herself.

But ask this diminutive blonde with the girl-next-door manner about the stock market and she settles back into a deep leather chair and offers her opinions slowly and thoughtfully in a low voice.

She doesn't think the new shorter hours on the exchange will cut volume. "If people want to trade, they'll trade faster in less time."

Ask her about her rise from the daughter of a Cleveland, Ohio, dentist who came to New York in 1954 with a little accounting experience to her position as one of the city's businesswomen, and the diversionary action begins.

She's clearly bored.

"Hey, where's that tape," she said suddenly rummaging through her desk. "You know I have the most disorganized desk in the office."

The tape, she explained, was a piece of ticker tape with her name written on it that she'd saved from a college visit to the exchange.

Her equity in the exchange has grown from the bit of tape kept for sentiment's sake to a seat on the exchange for which she paid $445,000 Dec. 27, 1967.

She made every dime herself, starting in New York with about $500 and a job as a research trainee at Bache and Co. She rose to senior security analyst there, and later worked for other firms. She made her money by "generating commission income and investing it."

Her net worth today?

"That's between me and Uncle Sam," she said.

"I was worried when I decided to apply for a seat," she admitted. "If I'd been refused, it would have seriously hurt my business.' As a member of the exchange she employs four persons at her firm.

"Oh I get a few stares now and then from men brokers—someone said I'm you're the woman' to me recently—but there hasn't been any problem," she said.

Her own specialty is aviation and aerospace industries.

"No, I'm not a women's rights type," she said. "I just believe that everybody should do what he wants to do.

"Of course it is a tremendous responsibility being first at anything. If I fail, it will hurt the people who follow me."

Miss Siebert spends much of her time working either in New York or visiting firms around the country whose securities she studies for clients.

She's had to find a hairdresser who's willing to stay open really late, she shops for food by telephone, and has a few saleswomen in her favorite stores who call her if a dress they think she'd like comes in.

Engagement Notice

Miss Betty Pearson — George R. Flower

Mr. and Mrs. James G. Pearson, Belleville, announce the engagement of their daughter, Betty Irene, to Mr. George Roger Flower, son of Mr. and Mrs. George F. Flower, Belleville. The wedding will take place on Saturday, Feb. 15, 1969, at 2 p.m., in College Hill United Church, Belleville.

"THIS WONDERFUL WORLD"

"My problem for 1969 — shall I save my pennies and go to Expo Japan in 1970, or shall I go back to Scotland next summer, or shall I just stay home and build a sauna in the big brook?" — Jessie Gillis, former Dean of Women at Albert College.

* * *

Among the holiday mail was a circular letter from Mrs. Jessie Gillis who as a former dean at Albert College made a wide circle of friends during her years of office in Belleville. She now lives in Nova Scotia, her home province. Last summer, she attended along with Miss Muriel Gibson, 195 George Street of Belleville, the Conference of the International Federation of University Women, which was held at Karlsruhe, Germany, and here is her account of the trip, which makes for delightful reading:

Taking off at Halifax Airport enroute to Germany: "I arrived in Frankfurt about 10 a.m. Next day. Customs officer pushed me through and left me standing with a suitcase I couldn't carry, no porter in sight, no German money to pay one if there were and absolutely no knowledge of German. What to do?

"The answer appeared in front of me out of the crowd, angels from Heaven — Joe and Elaine Vaderesse! (They were friends from West Pictou). I knew they were in Europe, but had lost touch with the postal strike. You can imagine my delight. They were travelling by car, so solved all my problems. We had dinner and a delightful evening in Frankfurt, a festival night with everything flood-lit, and amazing fireworks. They left next morning.

I had a day to myself and bought binoculars. In the evening I left for Koblenz by train to meet other CFUW members, including Muriel Gibson of Belleville and Mrs. Bingen, then by bus to Karlsruhe and the Conference of the International Federation of University Women.

"I can't give a report on the conference in this brief account, but I was deeply impressed with everything. The theme was Human Rights, and emphasized human responsibility. I felt we got somewhere. Karlsruhe was beautiful. German hospitality truly wonderful, friendliness everywhere. Prior to Black Forest, the auld kirk yard — no witches, but I found where they were born, the auld brig where Maggie lost her tail, etc. etc. A glorious day's drive in the Trossacks, lady of the Lake country, MacGregor country and the Bonnie bonnie banks. Then left Greenock on the Empress of Canada, Sept. 26 a lovely autumn day, a glorious sail down the Clyde, right in to the eye (or the tail) of Gladys' Aberdeen Thoroughly miserable day. I wasn't seasick, but spent the day muttering to myself, 'I'll never get me myself in for this? Never, never again.' But Gladys passed on and I'm all serene. By the time we sailed up the St. Lawrence on a beautiful autumn day, I was ready to start again!

Among the many enjoyable events, wonderful new modern buildings and the Tivolie, the most wonderful amusement park in the world. Had a country tour — lush farmland, fairy-like towns. Hans Christian Anderson's birthplace, Elsinore and many other castles and Manor houses. And the Danish pastries! I'm still reducing.

"Muriel left me on Aug. 30 to return to Belleville. I went alone then Sept. 1 to London where I was to meet my sister Elisabeth. All alone at the Eccleston Hotel, feeling rather lost and lonely, when again my rescuers, Joe and Elaine, appeared. Another lovely evening with them in London. They introduced me to the subway. London is always fascinating. Then a week on my own before Elisabeth came, spent in city tours, visiting friends in Tunbridge Wells and Norwich. Then with my sister to the countryside, a glorious day in Canterbury through the Weald of Kent in hop-picking time, Windsor Castle, etc. Three days in Edinburgh, my Scot's blood really stirred, followed by Perth and Blairgowrie, the home of our ancestors, where it almost boiled. No time to describe it, but I'm going back.

"On to Inverness, and a taste, or a feast, rather, of Highland hospitality, dispensed by friends I met in Karlsruhe. A trip to Culloden, the saddest place in the world, next to East Berlin. Elisabeth left from Prestwick, so we went to Glasgow. I had three days to myself after she left, and I went to Ayr. I saw Burns' birthplace, the auld kirk yard — no witches, but I found where they were born, the auld brig where Maggie lost her tail, etc. etc. A glorious day's drive in the Trossacks, lady of the Lake country, MacGregor country and the Bonnie bonnie banks. Then left Greenock on the Empress of Canada, Sept. 26 a lovely autumn day, a glorious sail down the Clyde, right in to the eye (or the tail) of Gladys' Aberdeen Thoroughly miserable day. Trapnell; conductor, R. McCormick; inner guard, M. Adams; outer guard, Helen Wallace; musician, E. Kingston; flag bearer, I. Robinson.

At the close of the meeting a buffet supper was enjoyed by all.

YOUR ANTIQUES

by Jack Jamieson

One of First China Patterns Was the 'Blue Willow' Design

(Picture Credit: The Canada West Society)

About 1780 Josia Spode began experimenting with pattern terns transferred or printed on china under the glaze. A glaze over the pattern protected it from wear and was a technical advancement on the glazed and hand-decorated crockery availabl', at that time.

One of the first patterns to be available in this new technique was the familiar "Blue Willow". The version familiar today was not the first made by Thomas Minton, who initially created the design for Thomas Turner of the Caughley porcelain factory. Shortly thereafter Minton went to work for Josiah Spode and developed the Willow pattern as we know it.

It was some years before Spode perfected his process of printing in blue (the first successful color). The plates were engraved on copper-plate, printed on thin tissue-paper, then transferred by hand to the unglazed pottery. A heavy-handed operator might smudge the pattern and a second would result. If the pattern were not skilfully cut, a seam line would show. Nevertheless the less printed blue led the market for many years. Black, browns and pinks, purplish-blue, green, orange and an underglazing gray followed.

The patterns of all these printed wares were better than the underglaze, finished with a surface hand-painted design, the market until the 1840's, when a new technique was developed.

In the early 1840's, instead of attempting to print as clear a picture as possible, the pottery was treated as the pattern color ran and "flown or "flowing" ware was the result.

Flowing blue revived the market and replaced the former carefully printed patterns. During the 1840's it dominated crockery styles and continued to do so past the 1850's. In 1900 it was still being advertised, and turn-of-the-century flowing blue may be found rather inexpensively used to Art Nouveau designs.

Other colors were added to the original blue, which in many cases was almost indigo in intensity. An oily purple achieved a great deal of popularity along with black, and less frequently brown, yellow and green.

The covered dish illustrated is not marked. The blue is less "flowing" than on many examples and the handling is trimmed with an overglaze gold. The dish is embossed, in a design complimentary relevant to the printed design. The pattern is an unnamed but attractive variation of the exotic and oriental themes prevalent in the 19th century.

This example, like much flowing blue, is pottery, akin to ironstone. In perfect condition the vegetable dish is worth $25 to $35. Collectable, named and identifiable patterns are worth more.

Quinte U.E.L. Association Holds Meet

The Bay of Quinte Branch United Empire Loyalists' Association held their regular meeting on Jan. 8 at the Royal Hotel in Picton. After the presentation of the Flag the minutes of the previous meeting were read.

A new member was welcomed to the Branch, Wentworth Henry Smith, Kingston, Ontario (UE ancestors Sgt. Peter Smith of Kingston and Patrick Smyth of Sorel and Kingston). The general business of the meeting was carried on.

The program for the evening was the story of the Robulin families with Mildred and Leral Wanamaker as speakers. Historical documents had been quite lengthy, Mr. Wanamaker gave only a small portion of the story on the Robin families with a promise to give the complete story at a future meeting.

The meeting closed with the retiring of the Flag and a social hour was enjoyed.

Club Activities

C.N.R. LADIES' AUXILIARY

The January meeting of the C.N.R. Ladies' Auxiliary was held in the Canadian Legion with 35 members. Everyone enjoyed a tasty dinner at Sun Luck Gardens and afterwards met at Club Canada, where gifts were exchanged.

A short business meeting and reports of committees were brought up to date. Jessie Scott reported some members still ill with the flu and the meeting adjourned.

Gladys Fitzgerald took charge of election of officers and the executive was returned by acclamation.

A social hour followed.

Women's Institutes

WALLBRIDGE WI

The Wallbridge Women's Institute met at the home of Mrs. Omar Stalsbie with a fair attendance owing to the bad weather conditions.

The president, Mrs. Ted Evans opened the meeting.

Mrs. Gerald Irvine, district president gave an interesting talk on "Resolutions".

The program was in charge of Mrs. Everett Pilgrim, who showed slides of their recent trips to Nova Scotia, Quebec, Montreal, and Newfoundland.

Mrs. Margaret Hinchcliffe won the draw.

The meeting closed after which the hostess and lunch committee served refreshments.

UCW MEETINGS

SPRINGBROOK UCW

The regular meeting of Springbrook United Church Women was held Thursday afternoon, Jan. 9 in the church hall. The president, Mrs. Williams opened the meeting with a poem. A minute of silence was observed for a deceased member, Mrs. Bert McCoy.

The program was in charge of the second vice-president and visiting committee with Mrs. Arthur Reid, Mrs. Ed Bateman, Mrs. G. Fitzgerald and Mrs. H. Haslett taking part in the worship. The topic was "Blue plists for a new year."

The secretary, Mrs. Clayton Burkitt gave a report and read thank-you notes from Mrs. Charlie Mumby and Mrs. Walter McIntyre, Mrs. Murney Mason, treasurer, gave a report. The visiting committee reported nine calls. Delegates were chosen to attend the annual meeting in Picton.

Mrs. Williams gave the mission study on China which was most interesting.

Lunch was served by the hostess, Mrs. Ed Bateman and Mrs. Arthur Reid and a social time enjoyed.

MOUNT PLEASANT-RAWDON UCW

The January meeting of Mount Pleasant - Rawdon UCW was held at the church hall with 23 members in attendance.

Mrs. Milford Wrightman and Mrs. Clarence Scott were in charge of the program, which opened with a hymn, beginning in a new year."

Two films were shown by Mrs. Raymond McCorvell. Both of these were produced by the National Film Board, and were most informative.

Selections were played by Mrs. Garth Joslin; Mrs. Douglas Pyear; Mrs. Grant Hubble and Mrs. Herbert Smith. Mrs. Robert H. Hoard rendered a vocal selection.

Mrs. Burton Sharpe presided over the business part of the meeting, beginning proceedings with a new year's message. Delegates were chosen to attend the Annual Meeting of the Belleville Presbyterial, and various reports were given.

Mrs. Harry McAdam and Mrs. Oscar Merrick provided refreshments for the fellowship hour.

CHURCH GROUPS

DESERONTO

PRESBYTERIAN WOMEN

The meeting of the women of the Deseronto Presbyterian Church was held recently. Mrs. Sam Geddes was in the hostess.

The first part of the meeting was devoted to the Women's Missionary Society activities, and the second half was a business meeting, covering the work of the Ladies' Aid.

Mrs. Gladys Pearase, the new president opened the meeting with a hymn and called on Mrs. Eric Quick to offer prayer. Mrs. Dorothy McCullough read the Scripture lesson and gave the meditation on the passage.

The president read a short report on the annual meeting of the Women's Missionary Society when she had attended in St. Andrew's Church in Kingston the previous day.

This portion of the meeting was concluded by singing a favorite hymn, and the work of the Ladies' Aid was taken up.

The women decided to make Easter eggs again this year. This annual fund-raising project is becoming more and more difficult for the few members to handle.

Last year they made and sold over 500, and it was found that several late orders could not be filled.

The annual pie social will again be held some time in March, but there is no definite date. The meeting closed by singing, after which Mrs. Kay Hood assisted the hostess to serve refreshments.

New Look for Spring Is Plenty of Pockets

LONDON (AP)—Knees are still in sight, but just barely, as London's spring and summer high fashion collections continued with Norman Hartnell's show Wednesday.

Both Hardy Amies Tuesday and now Hartnell showed no more than a bit of leg above the knee.

A slightly flared A-line emerged as the new silhouette in the first two weeks of the season, with some box or knife pleated skirts. Amies pushes the waistline down, while Hartnell pulls it up. They agree on longer jackets.

Plaids predominate in the Hardy Amies collection, while Hartnell likes horizontal stripes.

Though they may serve no practical purpose, plenty of pockets are provided for the girls in the new season's clothes.

Hitcher heels, up to three inches are common here to go with the more elegant, feminine look, leading London shoemaker Edward Rayne said.

Knowing Proper Foods to Eat May Lengthen Life Span

By DORIS CLARK

"Many of our grandmothers might still be alive if they had known and practised what we know about nutrition today."

A prominent food specialist made this statement recently; and he went on to say that many scientists now think we should aim for 100 as a normal life span. This he believes could be accomplished if we just applied what we already know in the field of nutrition.

We know better than we do, and that's for sure! Canada's Food Guide is available to every family; yet we are prone to say such tings as "I never did like boiled baffle-food (or what-have-you), so I just can't eat it!"

I guess we are lucky if such a one knows enough to keep his prejudice from his admiring and imitative little son or daughter.

The Food Guide emphasizes five main groups — milk, fruits, vegetables, cereals and meats or meat alternates, including eggs and cheese. It is only after these foods are provided in our meal planning that such tasty extras may be added as pies, cakes, cookies and ice cream.

Otherwise the sweet things crowd out at least a portion of the health-givers.

Dear Doris: I am 16 and have recently received my driver's license. Now whenever I go anywhere, other kids want to drive around with me. I hate to say no so I answer "later", and when nobody is watching I quickly and silently leave and go home — sad and lonesome.

I can't say yes because that means many miles on the speedometer and a low fuel tank. I know a boy who always has a car full of kids who he thinks are his friends. Whenever he isn't around they they appear to be "friends" when he's near. Such "friends" I don't want.

Any suggestions? I'm sure other kids have the same problem. — Sad Sack

Dear Sad: Friends who are only looking for a free ride aren't worth having; but teenagers without cars haven't a clue about gas and speedometers.

I hate to think what they say behind your back about the way you promise a ride, then sneak away.

You can either leave the car home, or if you need it for a specific errand, let them come along. Not for joy rides, until you can afford such luxuries, and wait in.

Dear Doris: Do you know of anything that might help to remove the pregnancy mask?

— Puzzled

Dear Puzzled: Afraid not. This discoloration around the eyes is skin deep and will disappear with the pregnancy. Unless you mention it most folks won't see it anyway.

Put on your best face and forget it.

Doris welcomes your comments and ideas. Write to her, enclosing a stamped, self-addressed envelope for private reply.

Cooking Exotic Foods Is Full Time Hobby

OTTAWA (CP) — It's second nature for Sylvia Job of Ottawa to whip up a smashing Malayan curry, spicy Hungarian goyas, hot Italian pasta or a snack of crispy Chinese suring rolls at the drop of a chef's hat.

And incidentally, she has cooked for a party of 200 people and is accustomed to entertaining 60 guests at a time.

Cooking internationally is a full-time hobby with the attractive, auburn-haired wife of Lesie Job, a mining engineer with the federal government's research unit.

Mrs. Job teaches gourmet cooking once a week to an adult night-school class and often discusses cuisine with a handful of neighbors in her kitchen.

She came by her interests first-hand. Her husband's career has enabled them to live in 12 countries and visit 76 others.

"Every day I make food from different countries," she said. "My family never knows what they're going to get.

"I cook according to what's on the market—and in my refrigerator. I don't keep canned foods. When I take a can out of my cupboard, my English bulldog thinks it's for him.

"French food is my ordinary food, my everyday cooking. If I don't cook foreign food, then my methods are French. It's so easy. And we always drink wine with our food—it gives the food tremendous flavor."

When Mrs. Job decided to write a cook book herself, she was told that Canadians were just not interested.

"That's not true—I find them terribly keen.

"I teach method to my cooking class, not recipes. I don't want my pupils to rely on recipes. I want them to be able to make a dish with-the basics.

"It's the hints that are important. Books don't supply these. I've been instilling into my students that they must make a good stock that they can't cook with water.

Mrs. Job insists that it is a wife's first duty to cook good food.

"I spend a lot of money on food but I never waste it." she said. "We never seem to have left-overs. We mean to eat out—I can eat the same things at home, cheaper."

The Real Haggis for Bobbie Burns' Day

By MARY MOORE

LETTER: Please find enclosed recipe for haggis Scotch Style. All ingredients can be bought in Canada. — John L.

ANSWER: Thank you John. To our readers who celebrate Bobby Burns birthday and want to make Haggis here is John's recipe but I have not tried it. He sent it to me last January and I promised to give it to you in time for Bobby Burns' Day, in 1969.

HAGGIS SCOTTISH STYLE
(Courtesy John L.)

Wash one sheep's stomach in cold water, scrape and clean. Leave soaking overnight in cold water. Mince sheep's heart, lights and liver. Add one breakfast cup of toasted oatmeal, (not rolled oats), ½ lb. chopped suet, 2 chopped onions and season highly with black pepper, salt and herbs (sage, etc.) Fill bag and allow for swelling. Sew up, place in hot water and boil for three hours.

QUESTION: . . . there was red cabbage, cooked, and seemed to have some kind of sauce . . . very little — on it . . . Mary G.

ANSWER: It sounds like the red cabbage my friend Garnet used to cook:

EUROPEAN RED CABBAGE
(Repeated from Nov., 1968)

One 3-lb. red cabbage.
2 green apples, peeled and chopped
1 onion, finely chopped
¼ cup sugar
¼ cup vinegar
2 tbsps. bacon fat
1 tsp. salt
Freshly ground black pepper

Shred cabbage. Put in saucepan with apples, onion, sugar, vinegar, bacon fat, salt and pepper and ½ cup boiling water. Bring to a boil, reduce heat, cover and simmer for one hour, stirring occasionally.

Protest Registered By 'Klop in The Chops'

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Is it permissible for a woman to slap a man's face in a public place, such as a restaurant? I won't go into the details. You can guess what happened.

ANN LANDERS

My friend says she was justified because a slap in the face is the surest way for a woman to register a protest against a gentleman who is no gentleman.

A bet is riding on your answer. — PLUS TWENTY.

DEAR PLUS: What's the matter with your fellow's vocal cords?

A woman doesn't allow a gentleman to go so far that she has to give him a klop in the chops in order to "register a protest." I detect a teeny weeny bit of teasing here my friend.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: A certain woman who goes to our church brings her three-year-old boy to services every Sunday. She also brings a bottle, a bag of toys, a tin whistle, and a harmonica. This mother spends the entire worship time trying to entertain the child. Sometimes her voice is louder than the minister's. This woman can't be getting anything out of the service and the little boy certainly doesn't understand what's going on. Our church has assigned seats so I can't move.

Last week I suggested to the mother that she leave the child in the nursery downstairs. She told me she wants her boy to be exposed to religion early, and even though he may seem too young, he absorbs a lot. The child may be absorbing a lot, but I haven't heard a sermon for two months. What should I do? — RIGHT CHURCH, WRONG PEW.

DEARR.C.W.P.: Ask your pastor to telephone or write the mother and ask her to leave the child at home or put him in the nursery. A three-year-old should not be expected to sit quietly through a church service. Moreover, it's unfair to the congregation and the minister to allow a youngster to spoil the Sunday worship.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: I'm stationed near Oklahoma City and go into town whenever I can. I met a sweet chick through a buddy's sister and we hit it off right away. The other night after the dance, we got to talking and didn't notice the time. I brought her home two hours late. She tried to sneak in but her old man was waiting up. When he started to lecture me I lost my temper and used a couple cuss words. He kicked me out and told me not to come back.

I've called the girl four times but she says she can't go with me because her father won't allow it. I think a guy should be forgiven for a little mistake. Please help me. — ARNIE.

DEAR ARNIE: Sorry, I can't work up any sympathy for a character who brings a girl home two hours late and then cusses out her father. Everything has a price tag and you'll have to pay for your big mouth.

Parties Given to Mark 25th Anniversary

Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Geen of Plainfield were pleasantly surprised recently when members of the Porter and Coulter families arranged a party to mark their 25th wedding anniversary.

During the first part of the evening a time of fellowship was enjoyed after which euchre was played. Later the gathering was called to order and an address was read by Mrs. Albert Clare. Bruce Coulter presented the honored guests with a pole lamp, while Donald Clare presented them with a set of TV tables for which both expressed thanks. At this time Harry Coulter of Tweed, uncle of the bride" and Mrs. Russell Radford of Belleville, a cousin, also spoke briefly.

Refreshments were served by the four Geen children, Kenneth, Carl, Lois and Cass and included was the anniversary cake presented by the mother of the "bride" Mrs. Albert Porter.

A party was also given by Marion Gray and members of the Geen family for the couple. Everett Geen read the address which was followed by a reading by Garnet Geen. At this event the couple were presented with a chrome dinette suite.

Points for Parents

Mother: "You must be quiet when Aunt Mary is here or I'll punish you after she leaves. Remember I mean it when I say no noise!"

Mother: "Aunt Mary is old and loud sounds disturb her, so please don't shout or romp in the house. We want her to enjoy her visit."

Understanding is a part of true courtesy and children will try to comply with a specific request if they realize the reason for it.

For children from kindergarten age to 7, there are caterpillars, butterflies, simple flowers and a pedestal plate centrepiece; for children from 8 to 10, an octopus, a paper plate with plaque and Christmas tree ornaments, and for the over-10s, necklaces, spiders, snakes, mistletoe kissing balls. The display will feature a large collage mural created by Miss Hill in crepe paper, called "The North Wind."

CLUB ACTIVITIES

(CONTACT CLUB)

On Monday evening, the members of the Contact Club of Christ Church, held its first meeting of the new year. All enjoyed a beautiful potluck dinner, after which president Lillian Middleton discussed the activities for the upcoming season.

Two new members were introduced, Pamela Parks and Audrey Williams and along with Mainie Daley, a former member were welcomed to the club. Rev. David Hawkins was a special dinner guest.

A bowling party scheduled for Jan. 27 was cancelled when the girls decided to attend the annual vestry meeting as a group.

Plans for the confirmation reception on April 13 were made and Edith Pringle offered to convene this event, assisted by Jackie Gilbert and Pamela Park.

Lillian Middleton spoke briefly on the new membership program which looks most promising. It is hoped many more young women of the parish will join in this group for a rewarding evening of fellowship.

A tour of the chapels of the RCAF Station at Trenton was planned for sometime in February. Treasurer, Edith Pringle, gave her report and took charge of the sale of church calendars, ACW Hasti-notes and AYM newsletters.

A most enjoyable evening was brought to a close with all the girls helping out with kitchen duties.

Selectivity Still Obstacle

Provinces, Ottawa Establish Studies to Examine Welfare

By KEN KELLY

OTTAWA (CP) — Federal and provincial governments moved toward cooperative reassessment of all their social welfare programs Friday by establishing two special studies and preparing for a third.

Federal Health Minister John Munro said at the end of a two-day conference of welfare ministers that they "laid the basis for new thinking on the efficiency and worth of social welfare plans."

One study will concentrate on costs of social assistance, including better financial and statistical reporting, analysis of caseloads and reasons for cost increases.

The second will try to find out what is needed to help social assistance recipients participate in the programs created to help them "out of the traps of poverty, ignorance, disease and disability."

But the ministers withheld final agreement to a third proposed study—one that would look at ways of directing help to those who really need it, so that the major effort would be to rehabilitate those capable of complete or partial self-support.

Mr. Munro said proposals were made that would broaden the terms of reference of this study so the ministers decided to work on that for a while before setting up the study.

But one stumbling block may have been the expressed opposition of some provinces, Quebec among them, to switching programs like family allowances from universal payments to a more selective basis.

Mr. Munro had said before the conference he hoped the ministers would agree to examine such devices as income needs and means tests as are being done by the federal government in its current review of social security programs.

But Jean-Paul Cloutier, Quebec social welfare minister, flatly rejected, on the first day, any idea of dropping the principle of universality in family allowances in favor of income or other such tests.

Mr. Munro said there hadn't been a full discussion of "selectivity." Some provinces opposed it. Others wanted more time to think about it.

The immediate aim of selectivity is to channel income support to those low-income families which really need the money, cutting out those who don't.

Mr. Munro has said this is a step along the road to a guaranteed annual income. But he also has stressed that the federal government has taken no position itself on the matter, pending receipt of the views of the provinces.

Considerable discussion centred on the five-year-old Canada Assistance Plan, a program under which provinces may opt to group welfare programs under one cost-sharing formula. Among the programs covered are unemployment assistance, blind and disabled allowances and old age assistance.

While all provinces have signed agreements bringing one or more programs under this arrangement, Mr. Cloutier served notice that Quebec will withdraw at the earliest chance, probably next year.

The step would be in keeping with Quebec's demand that Ottawa vacate the family allowance field so that it could integrate all social aid supplied to Quebec residents.

Mr. Munro and Indians Affairs Minister Jean Chretien urged the provinces to extend their welfare services to Indians, offering between 85 and 95 per cent of the costs under the Canada Assistance Plan. Ontario already has done this.

But the Western provinces, those mainly concerned, insisted first on having guarantees that the federal government's aid will be adequate and won't be withdrawn at some later date.

They also proposed a federal-provincial conference on Indian affairs going beyond welfare services to cover schooling, housing, relocation and like problems. Mr. Chretien agreed to discuss it with the federal cabinet.

Meanwhile, the provinces will negotiate individually with the federal government on welfare extension to Indians on reserves.

New Brunswick, on behalf of the four Atlantic provinces, proposed that the Canada Assistance Plan cost-sharing be changed to give the have-not provinces a greater share of federal funds. Mr. Munro agreed to take it up with the cabinet.

Drug Bill Still Facing Critical Opposition

OTTAWA (CP) — Conservative MPs again Friday questioned whether a government bill "goes as far as it should" in protecting Canadians against unsafe drugs.

The bill, before Parliament for more than a year now, is aimed at lowering drug prices by throwing the industry open to foreign competition.

Debate on second reading will resume next week.

P. B. Rynard (PC—Simcoe North) again led the attack on the bill, questioning whether federal inspectors can satisfactorily cope with the flow of foreign drugs expected if the bill becomes law.

Dr. Rynard questioned the cost of inspection and suggested that lower prices will go hand in hand with lower quality.

Dr. Rynard said the bill should be scrapped and replaced with a scheme to subsidize the cost of drugs to needy Canadians. Gordon Ritchie (PC—Dauphin), also a physician, said this already is being done.

Liberal MPs in return rolled out statistics to show that Canadian drug prices are among the highest in the world, disclosed that inspection services are being beefed up, and reiterated that an "unassailable case" for action on drug prices has been made in a series of inquiries.

Ray Perrault (L—Burnaby-Seymour) said it is a "brutal and tragic fact" that Canadians with chronic illnesses are being ruined by drug prices.

Mr. Perrault said that at least some of the opposition to the bill is coming from "those who have a vested interest in soaking the sick."

Warren Allmand (L—Montreal Notre-Dame-de-Grace) said it was difficult to know what Conservative policy was with respect to drug prices. "They offered no alternative policy and I doubt if they have one."

The Montreal MP said the government bill was not radical and was unlikely to cut heavily into industry profits.

And there was no doubt drug prices were too high, Mr. Allmand added.

For instance, one cortisone preparation sold to hospitals for $1.95 cost retail pharmacists $17.

Max Saltsman (NDP—Waterloo South) said the only effective way to break the international hold the drug industry has is through nationalization and the formation of a Crown corporation to manufacture and distribute drugs.

Rosaire Gendron (Temiscouata), the parliamentary secretary to Health Minister Munro, said 22 men will be added to the Food and Drug Directorate this year to strengthen surveillance of imported drugs and 11 had been added to the health department last year.

In response to "A Canadian Hockey Supporter" — (aren't we all?) — I am not now, nor never have been, a member of the Kremlin secret service, and, aside from talking briefly with Tommy Douglas once, I can't recall any Left Wing political associations.

I thought this affidavit was necessary after your anonymous note berating me for "not pulling for my own crew and country."

It was a typical reaction — (Clarence Campbell called it the "chauvinistic element" of a Russian-Canadian pro hockey encounter) — to my opinion that the Soviet Union's hockey team has been given the royal runaround long enough by the cozy establishment of North American professional hockeydom.

I feel like a St. John's fisherman, wading through a bilge-full of red herrings, when really the only question at issue is: "Why don't our pros play the Russians?".

It's that simple.

I want to see "our boys" win just as badly as anyone, but the Russians have obviously progressed to the professional level, even though they probably aren't as accomplished at shinny as North American pros . . . yet.

What good is it then to argue about unrelated issues — the fact that the Soviets pay their "amateurs" (incidentally, don't we?); and who cares if "in the good old days" our senior hockey talent could trounce anyone in the world?

This is now. The Russians say they want to play the best hockey teams in the world and, instead of being proud to show them what a high calibre of hockey we have developed, we slink around offering the lamest of excuses why such encounters should not take place.

We must remember that professional hockey as we know it in North America is — first and foremost — business, so there should be little consolation in our criticizing the Russian game as having nationalistic or political footings.

As a matter of fact, isn't there a nicer ring to it when we say our hockey team is a full-time project of your country, instead of a six-month fund-raising fee for a dozen greups of board-room wizards and their shareholders?

Surely it must be an enviable arrangement — why else would we try to emulate it in the recently-overhauled structure of our National Team?

Don't our hockey bosses have the same option of creating a year-round professional squad instead of turning their roster members out as part-time beer salesmen with the coming of each summer?

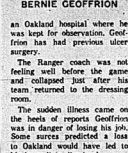
Could it be that they don't think a national professional team would be a good paying proposition?

The Soviets are eccentric — their rude hijinks surrounding their current on-again, off-again Canadian tour should prove that.

But they're also dedicated to attaining the best level of hockey ability that they can.

And if we don't provide them with the opposition they want, it's got to be because of one, and only one reason — we're afraid they just might crimp our pride by beating us.

Geoffrion Collapses After Ranger Win



Dismissal Rumors Wouldn't Help Boomer's Ulcer

By SCOTT BUTTON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

A victory by New York Rangers Friday night did little to lessen the problems of Bernie Geoffrion, whose first season as a coach in the National Hockey League has been far from a resounding success.

Geoffrion collapsed with a suspected ulcer attack following his team's 3-1 victory against Oakland Seals in the only scheduled NHL game.

The 37-year-old former Montreal Canadien star was taken to an Oakland hospital where he was kept for observation. Geoffrion has had previous ulcer surgery.

BERNIE GEOFFRION

The Ranger coach was not feeling well before the game and collapsed just after his team returned to the dressing room.

The sudden illness came on the heels of reports Geoffrion was in danger of losing his job. Some sures predicted a loss to Oakland would have led to his immediate dismissal.

Emile Francis, general manager of the Rangers, stepped down as coach after last season and gave the job to Geoffrion. But the Rangers' mediocre performance this season led to rumors Francis may reclaim the coaching job.

The victory left the Rangers in last place in the Eastern Division, one point behind Detroit Red Wings and two back of Toronto Maple Leafs and Chicago Black Hawks.

Scoring for the Rangers were Phil Goyette, Don Marshall and Rod Seiling. Billy Hicke, a former Ranger, connected for Oakland in front of 4,982 California fans.

New York jumped into a 2-0 lead in the opening period on a goal by Goyette at 1:03 and Marshall at 19:00. Hicke and Seiling exchanged third-period tallies.

Goyette, who participated in all three New York scoring plays, picked up his goal on a rebound from a shot by rookie defenceman Brad Park.

The victory helped New York continue its mastery over Oakland. The Rangers have defeated the Seals five consecutive times this season after winning all four games against the expansion team last year.

Francis was not available for comment about the possibility he might take over as New York coach. He was in Memphis to watch Omaha, New York's farm team in the Central Hockey League, play Friday night.

Geoffrion, who finished his playing career with New York after many outstanding years with Montreal, said Friday he knew nothing about rumors of his firing.

"So I don't care to comment on it," he said. "I haven't heard from Francis."

The Rangers started out fast under Geofrion and were in first place as of Dec. 4. Since then, they have won only six of 20 games.

No Montreal Game

Soviet Behavior Has Molson Upset

MONTREAL (CP) — After keeping Canadian amateur hockey enthusiasts in a tizzy for days, Russia's national hockey team was to land in Montreal today for a seven-game tour of Canada.

An eighth game went up in an angry puff Friday when the Russians advised the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association they would spend Friday night in Paris and arrive here at 1 p.m. EST today.

Their first game of the Canadian tour was to have been played at the Montreal Forum at 2 p.m.

David Molson, president of Montreal Canadiens of the National Hockey League, backed by CAHA president Earl Dawson of Rivers, Man., announced cancellation of the Montreal opener at a news conference Friday.

The remaining seven games of the tour would be played as scheduled in Toronto, Vancouver, Victoria, Winnipeg and Ottawa.

The Russians were to board a 3:55 p.m. flight to Toronto today for their first game there against Canada's Nationals Sunday night.

Nearly 5,000 tickets had been sold in advance for the cancelled Montreal game and a full house was expected.

"We spent $40,000 taking our team to Russia," Dawson said, "and the way we recover this money is through the gate receipts here.

"The gate receipts belong to the CAHA after the rink takes off a percentage for the rental and if we'd had a full house here it would have cost us $25,000."

If the complete tour had fallen through, the CAHA stood to lose $150,000.

The Russians notified officials of the CAHA at the last minute —late Tuesday—that they were cancelling the tour.

They complained that they would meet only second-rank teams during their visit here, but CAHA officials assured the Russians they would compete against a combination of Canada's top nationals and the tournament was once again on.

Following Friday's announcement of the cancellation of the Montreal game, Molson said:

"It's obvious this whole issue is a political one, with the instigators making it propaganda affair.

"Personally, I am not going to be embarrassed any further, or have the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association or the people of Montreal subjected to such treatment. It is obvious the Russians had no intention of coming here to play Saturday, and knew this 36 to 48 hours ago."

Molson said that a previous invitation for the Russians to attend tonight's Canadian Chicago Black Hawks NHL contest had been withdrawn.

In a late Friday afternoon conversation, Molson told a Russian consulate official here: "I don't want any part of your team any time this year."

Consulate officials "appeared to find it quite a joke."

Dawson and Molson agreed it would have given them considerable pleasure to advise the Russians to stay at home when they first cancelled the tour.

Dawson said he would like to see steps taken by the International Ice Hockey Federation at its summer meeting in Switzerland to have the Russians suspended by the world hockey body.

On Smaller Scale

Shown here testing her skills on a miniature lane in the Belleville Bowl-a-Drome, Marg Ruttan doesn't need to prove her kegling ability on the regulation alleys. Sporting a 230-neighborhood average in two city mixed five-pin leagues, Marg recently rolled a 410 game in a 901 triple series. The big game was the highest women's single in the city this year, and bettered Marg's personal high of 390. (More bowling news on Page 10.)

Japanese Shade Kingston

KINGSTON (CP) — Hideo Suzuki's power-play goal late in the game gave the touring Seibu hockey team of Japan a 7-6 victory Friday night over Kingston Merchants of the Ontario Hockey Association Intermediate A League.

Suzuki's goal was his third of the game but his performance was overshadowed by teammate Koja Iwamoto who tallied three and assisted on the other four Japanese goals. Asao Kashara also scored for the visitors.

Wayne Clancy, Leo Lavallee, Jim Stinson, Terry Landon, Bob Dickson and Guy White scored for the Merchants as they overcame a 5-2 second-period Seibu lead to tie the game at 6-6.

Mo-Hawks Lose Playoff Ground With Lacklustre Loss to Hornets

STAFF — Belleville's Mo-Hawks last night were playing with all the casualness of a team that had cinched a senior hockey playoff berth and were just playing out the remaining scheduled games for fun.

The problem was, the Mo-Hawks were being beaten 5-1 by the visiting Galt Hornets in a game that was crucial to their chances of overtaking Kingston Aces for the Intermediate A sixth and last playoff spot.

Going into last night's game, the locals trailed Kingston by five points, but the Aces used their first road win of the season in Woodstock — a 13-4 verdict over the last-place "A's — to move seven points up on the Mo-Hawks.

Two of the Mo-Hawks' nine remaining games are with the arch-rival Aces.

Galt broke the Mo-Hawks' three game home winning streak with a pair of goals by Fern Belanger and singles by Vance Millar, Pete Brennan, and Bob Erlat.

Lorne O'Donnell ruined Ron Boomer's shutout bid at 10.24 of the final period, when he kicked in Bob Taylor's passout from the side of the net.

The largest local senior crowd in several weeks — a paid attendance of 678 — watched some of the sputtiest hockey imaginable from both sides. Particularly so in the latter half of the scoreless opening frame after Belanger put the Hornets in front 1-0 at 11.34, skating in alone to beat Larry Holmes on Pete Brennan's long clearing pass.

Five-minute fighting majors in Mo-Hawk possession Ralph Plane and the Hornets' John Nickerson at 4.13 of the first were two of only three penalties called by referee Gord Favreau in the lacklustre contest.

An apparent inability to control the puck plagued the Mo-Hawks throughout the evening, with a good 30 passes going directly onto the sticks of Galt players.

Had the Hornets not been equally as inept around the Mo-Hawk net early in the game, the score really easily could have been higher.

Among the 30 shots stopped by Holmes in the Mo-Hawk net was Howie Dietrich's breakaway effort in the final minute of the second period. Earlier in the period, Vance Millar's high shot beat Holmes on a break for the Hornets' second goal, and centre Pete Brennan made it 3-0 at 14.29 when he scored after getting the draw in the Belleville end.

The Mo-Hawks mustered 20 shots on the Galt goal, most of them of the harmless variety except for a handful of testing drives by Andy Teeple, Jack Wilson and Eddie Marineau.

Playing-coach Davey Jones reverted in some final period lineshuffling in an effort to get the Mo-Hawks moving, at one point reuniting the Brown-Godson-Jones combination that used to pace the club in scoring.

At least centre George Godson came away from the game a winner. The slick-skating Peterborough native was awarded the O'Keefe Trophy as the Mo-Hawks' most valuable player during January.

Tomorrow, the locals head into Barrie to tackle the mighty Flyers, while they will be at home to the cellar-dwelling Woodstock club next Friday.

First-Quarter Outburst Keeps Collegians Unbeaten

STAFF — A first quarter outburst which netted 32 points powered BCI seniors to a 72-42 triumph over Picton in a battle of undefeated senior teams last night in Class "AA" basketball play.

The senior win capped a three game sweep for the Collegians, with the juniors dumping Picton 39-32 and moving into second place tie with Quinte at four wins and a loss, and the Intermediates defeating Picton 45-41 to climb into third place in the seven team league.

In other action, the first-place Trenton bantams downed Napanee 38-26 for their fourth consecutive win, Trenton juniors scored their first win of the season, defeating Napanee 41-32, and the Golden Hawks of Napanee moved into a third place tie with Moira in the senior by virtue of a 54-43 decision over the Tigers.

BCI's senior Collegians employed a zone pass to great advantage during Picton intermanu errors and turnovers, while piling up a 32-7 first quarter margin, and a 46-16 lead at halftime.

The rebounding of Bill Mindenhall and Bob Wright and the outside shooting of forward Ken Richardson allowed BCI to control the game for three quarters, by which time the result was beyond doubt.

Richardson hooped 20 points for the winners, while Mindenhall netted 16 and Wright and Ted Rose added 14 each. Jack Walmsley was the big gun for Picton with 18 points.

Brent Gallupe counted 17 points for the BCI juniors, while Dave Wright added 14 and Mike Scarlett 13 for the winners.

Bill Barrett with 11 points, Steve Carrol with nine and Joe Burleigh with seven hooped the Picton scorers.

Kendal Piche and Danny Dow paced the Trenton Junior Tigers to victory over winless Napanee.

Napanee seniors evened their record at two wins and two losses by shifting defences often to upset the Tiger attack, and cashed in on Trenton's many faults to throw the balance in their favor despite a fourth quarter comeback by Trenton.

Bob Cook threw in 17 points for the winners while Dave Cecchetto and Dave Cunningham netted 14 each to account for the bulk of the Golden Hawks' offence.

Jes Nicholson hooped 16 points and Andy Fesar contributed 12 in a losing cause for the Trenton seniors.

By George...

Namath and Clay Put Arm Where Mouth Was

By GEORGE H. CARYER

Joe Namath, the sideburned football god of Gotham, is the second world champion to put his arm where his mouth was. But he's a helluva long way from the record of Number one, a guy called Muhammid Ali. (Cassius Clay to you-a guys).

The $400,000 New York Jets beauty, riding the crest of his egotism, turned on his bullin radio to announce to the football world in general that his Jets would "make" the vaunted Baltimore Colts.

Comparison is odious in this case. The Jets' immodest hero one opportunity to make his boast good. The Muhammid called his shots round by round with uncanny accuracy in four or five different occasions.

The difference was, according to the news media, that Namath, besides calling the winning shot for the Jets took time out to belittle his opponents.

True, Clay dubbed Liston the Big Bear, but Cassius was mostly-hunger. Namath he lurped about his opponents was not a personal blast rather fan-bak — and it worked.

Now, how about Number Three?

In case you're curious he is Lieut. Colonel Andrey Targeov of the Russian Army and for the past dozen years coach of the Russians' national hockey team.

I met Tarasov in Prague in 1959 where on the eve of the all-important Canada-Russia game he invited Coach Ike Hildebrand and the Billeville McFarlands to a pre-game team breakfast.

Ike rose to his full five-feet seven (135 pounds). I never felt prouder of the little guy.

"Listen coach" he said "We've appreciate the invitation. I'm sorry, Canada is in training."

"But" said Ike "in appreciation of your invitation, Canada and the McFarlands hereby invite you to our victory dinner tonight."

Tarasov and his hockey tovarishes stood up. They didn't seem happy. They stalked out of the room and Ike said "I hope de goddamnighty I'm right".

He was. We defeated Tarasov and his Russians 3-1 with the poking in one of the goals. (The Russians did not show for the victory dinner).

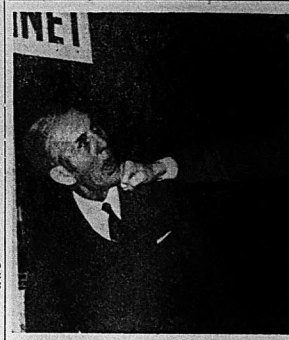
That was ten years ago. The Russians with the exception of two or three years have swept the world "amateur" hockey tournaments. They whipped the weak sisters of Canadian Amateur Hockey with little effort.

They defeated everything in sight, international-wise and now are putting their muscles where they want their hockey sticks to be.

And it is up to Canada to close their yaps.

Clarence Campbell of the NHL has stated he has received no formal challenge from the Russians. The other day Tarasov intimated through the Moscow press that Canada was "yellow or words to that effect.

I don't hear by telepathy that Russia could defeat any team in the National Hockey League.



Let's take Tarasov up at his suggestion. Let's settle this question once and for all. Play under any rules? That always was the question.

The determination of Canada's senior "A" hockey has been an important factor. Look at what happened to our 1968 Allan Cup winners?

The calibre of Canadian senior hockey is judged by European nations as the best we have.

True, it is. But it has dropped to the calibre point where it is nothing better than old-fashioned senior "B".

With all due respect to the Trail Smoke Eaters and the Penticton "B's" the two best teams ever to represent Canada in world amateur hockey were the 1958 Whitby Dunlops and the 1959 Belleville McFarlands.

THIS GAG'S GOT A PUNCH LINE—Maurice Chevalier lands a right on the jaw of former light heavyweight champion Georges Carpentier as they gag it up during the celebration of Carpentier's 75th birthday in Paris yesterday. Chevalier, who is 80, presented Carpentier with a silver cup. (AP Wirephoto).

Seals' Transfer Creates Stir

VANCOUVER (CP) — Vancouver Canucks of the Western Hockey League faced off again with the National Hockey League board of governors Friday in a bid to get an NHL franchise.

The club announced it has formed a partnership with Labatt Breweries of Canada Ltd. to purchase controlling interest of the financially-troubled Oakland Seals and transfer the club here.

The deal requires approval of the NHL board of governors and as far as President Clarence Campbell is concerned the NHL is not prepared to get the Vancouver franchise game under way.

The Canucks notified the NHL of its agreement with the brewery when the deal was completed Friday and sought permission to put it on the agenda of a league meeting Tuesday.

Seymour Knox III, a Buffalo millionaire and president of Niagara Frontier Hockey Inc., said earlier this month his group has reached an agreement to purchase the Seals and has applied to transfer the club to Buffalo for the 1969-70 season.

But Labatt president Peter Hardy told a hastily-called press conference to announce the partnership with the Canucks that the Niagara group's agreement to purchase the Seals is void because of a previous agreement negotiated with the brewery.

The agreement was signed last March when Labatt loaned the Seals, plagued by poor attendance, $650,000 to meet league commitments.

Under the agreement, Hardy said the Canucks would own 65 per cent of the controlling interest in the Seals and would have an option to buy out the Labatt shares "at any time."

Wellington Snowed Under

PICTON — The local Intermediate B's handed Wellington an 11-4 thumping last night, paced by the hat trick contributions of former Bellville Mc-Hawks Gary Gorey and Murray "Moe" Hunter.

Paul McGill added a pair, for the winners with single Picton markers going to Sid Faulkner, Fred James and Jim Somerset.

Rick Rosebush, Hyalie Bryant, and Bob and Gary Lavender received credit for the evenly classed Wellington team's scoring.

The winners drew 10 of 13 penalties handed out by referee Ted Hurst.

DESIGNED TO FILL THE EMPTY DAYS!

In 1890, James Naismith was trying to figure out a game to fill the physical education curriculum between the football and baseball seasons. Basketball was the name of his invention . . . and it's the only competitive sport of purely American origin!

There's a wonderful invention used all over the world to sell no longer needed basketballs of almost anything . . . here we call it an Instantype Ad . . . and you get it by dialing 962-9171.

NERO PLAYED THE BAGPIPES?

Although we think of the bagpipes as being a Scottish instrument, it was very popular in ancient India and the Roman Empire. Nero had one, too. Made of a leather bag and reed pipes, the bagpipes was a popular folk and military instrument in Scotland and Ireland.

Whether you wish to sell a good set of bagpipes or any other no longer used musical instruments, an Instantype Ad is a fast-acting Intelligencer Ad to do it for you! Call 962-9171 for information.

33 PALMER ROAD

An exceptional attractive bungalow. Just look at those beautiful trees and landscaping, two car garage and breezeway. This home is on a half-acre of land, well situated and particularly well built — copper plumbing, storms and screens, etc.

This is a two bedroom home and a third at the rear with separate bath, all nice size — living room, over three hundred square feet with a handsome stone fireplace. The lower level has not been finished.

We will accept any reasonable offer. A good size mortgage can be arranged. Let's talk about this. Call

BOWES AND COCKS WISH TO GIVE THEIR CLIENTS THE BEST POSSIBLE SERVICE and have the most knowledgeable personnel in the business, their entire selling staff of 200 employees are today attending a one day seminar in Bowmanville conducted by Mr. J. Douglas Edwards, who is America's foremost sales and marketing analyst. This service is being extended exclusively to Bowes and Cocks in Canada. Mr. Douglas is not simply a man who tells what should be done, but, rather, the type of person who shows how it can be done. He is in constant demand to present his provable methods and has engagements booked well in to 1970.

We regret that our services are not available today, but are sure that the knowledge gained at the seminar will be well worth while and to your advantage.

Marijuana Smoker Hard to Detect

By Dr. George C. Thosteson

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I heard that one of my young grandsons told a friend that he smokes marijuana. I don't know if this is true, but would like to know what symptoms to look for. Are the pupils of the eyes dilated? — Mrs. C.S.

The use of marijuana is not always easy to detect. Pupils of the eyes are not particularly affected, although in some cases the eyeballs may look inflamed.

Effect of the drug lasts from two to four hours after use, but the effect is different for different people, varying from excitement to depression.

Some are loud and talkative while under the influence of the drug; others become unsteady and drowsy. The sense of time and space may be distorted.

There may be a sweetish odor on the breath or clothing from smoking it. Pinches of green, dried fragments of the weed in a garment pocket may be a better cause for suspicion than whatever you may observe in the user's appearance or behavior.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Could you explain in layman's language what is syndrome, and is it hereditary? — C. C. M.

A syndrome is a combination of symptoms falling into some particular pattern. It may be named after the person who first described it, or it may indicate the anatomical area involved.

Thus "Down's syndrome" is the group of symptoms associated with what is more commonly known as mongolism. Cubital tunnel syndrome is a group of symptoms resulting from a certain type of injury to the elbow. Guillain-Barre syndrome is a group of symptoms involving the nervous system, with weakness or paralysis of certain muscles. Turner's syndrome is a particular type of birth defect involving the genital glands. There are scores of syndromes some hereditary, some not.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Last winter I quit smoking, and from November to April I went from 118 to 158 pounds. I started smoking again but have gone down only to 140.

I still want to lose 10 to 15 pounds but I also want to stop smoking again. I find it easy to quit but am afraid I will gain more weight.

I didn't eat more during the day but I did a lot of nibbling in the evening. Have you any suggestions? — Mrs. G. B.

The psychological urge to smoke is not very well understood even today, but just stopping smoking does not cause a gain in weight. The trouble is that the urge to "do something" is transferred. Too often, instead of smoking, the person eats something.

You did so, even if only in the evening, but your experience is a vivid example of what just "nibbling" can do to one's weight!

My suggestion: try some other form of substitution. Quit smoking again, but when you have an urge to nibble, substitute something else. Perhaps keep a supply of small carrot and celery sticks in the refrigerator, and nibble one.

If you have the willpower to stop smoking, just like that, I think you can conquer the nibbling, too.

• • •

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I have been losing my hair for the last year and was told this a male pattern baldness. Is anything being done to prevent this from taking place? Does a man become deficient in something which causes this, or is there no hope? — E.W.G.

Male pattern baldness appears to be governed entirely by heredity. While this is under study all the time, to date there is no apparent clue to any way of preventing it.

Canadian Stock Prices Return Close to Earlier Record Level

By GERALD CLARKSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Prices recovered and reached near-record levels on Canadian stock markets this week, although the rally ran out of steam in late trading Friday.

The Toronto industrial index rose 2.77 to 189.14. Its all-time high was 191.16 just before the sharp plunge early last week. The composite index on the Montreal and Canadian exchanges gained 2.51 to 186.59, also just below its record.

The leading industrial groups were chemicals, oil refiners, pulp and paper stocks, beverages and trust and loan stocks.

Speculative issues in the junior industrial and real estate group edged up, although they still were below their peak last year.

The Toronto index of seven real estate issues was down about three per cent, and J. H. Crang and Co.'s index of 79 junior industrials rose 1½ per cent.

Mining shares are putting up a strong performance following the recent price increases in several important metals. These include nickel, copper, aluminum, lead and zinc.

The Toronto base metal index has been at an all-time high for the last four days. Among the biggest gains, Pine Point rose 4¾ to 47¼, Denison 3¼ to 73½, Hudson Bay Mining 2 to 78 and Sherritt Gordon $1.02 to 10¼.

Life insurance stocks posted a crop advance towards the end of the week, continuing their recovery from a slump after the last federal budget.

The budget introduced proposals to subject the companies to income tax for the first time. However, analysts said they expected the shares to revive.

Gold shares continued to trade at almost record prices, although the Toronto gold stock index rose little ground towards the end of the week. The record period for gold shares was during the international monetary crisis last March.

Gold shot into the news midweek when the free market price of bullion touched $42.70 U.S. an ounce in London, its highest price the free market was established last April.

The official price of monetary gold still is controlled by the U.S. government at $35 U.S. an ounce. But speculators are hoping the next U.S. government will raise the official price, which has been unchanged since it was fixed by then president Roosevelt in 1934.

U.S. officials have repeatedly denied this possibility, although speculators feel president-elect Nixon has talked to clarify his position.

The market as a whole has been picking up from the severe slump which hit North American exchanges on Jan. 6. The Toronto and Montreal markets went through their sharpest one-day slide in several years.

About three-quarters of the losses have been wiped out.

There has been no special news to spur the recovery, although investors were relieved that the higher interest rates announced this week by Canadian chartered banks had no adverse effect on share prices.

Brokers said the stock market already had digested the trend towards higher bank rates before the announcements were made.

The earlier move by U.S. banks, which raised their prime loan rates a week before the Canadian banks, coincided with the slump and took most of the blame.

On the Montreal and Canadian exchanges, volume was 10,278,000 shares compared with 10,932,000 last week. Gains outnumbered losses 196 to 163.

Employment News

By: J. R. STAVELEY
Employer Counsellor

The local labor market during the past week was quiet with regards to employment opportunities for the unskilled or semi-skilled worker seeking either regular or casual work.

The demand for the skilled and professional worker remains good and in some cases it is difficult to meet the requirements from industry for such workers.

In this community, in addition to the normal employment centres, there is a tremendous local effort being made to retain personnel who for a number of reasons have found it difficult to compete and hold suitable employment in the modern world of work.

At the present time, approximately 600 adult students are undergoing retraining courses in the City of Belleville.

As in all cases of retraining and assistance, the main factor in success is the determination of the individual to make a better life not only for themselves but their families. The end objective after the retraining is a suitable job with his attendant benefits to the Canadian economy.

In recent months, there would appear to be a trend towards the decentralization of industry away from the large metropolitan areas.

Such a trend, if it successfully includes the Quinte area, will give a welcome impetus to the economy.

In recent months, there would appear to be a trend towards the decentralization of industry away from the large metropolitan areas.

Such a trend, if it successfully includes the Quinte area, will give a welcome impetus to the economy.

At this time of the winter, the Belleville and district winter employment campaign committee reminds that all support and participate in the campaign slogan — "Keep People Working — Do It Now. Even a small job creates employment and a material demand. In the winter months, workmen are more readily available, materials are usually obtainable without delay and discounts are also given by some firms. "Do It Now" and avoid the spring and summer rush.

In the female division locally, there is still an unfilled position for a mature and capable woman to work as a supervisory hotel housekeeper. There is an opening in the collection field for someone, preferably with experience in this type of work, who would require some typing and telephone duties. A Canada-wide publishing company is seeking salesmen who would be free to travel wherever required. Their transportation would be supplied by the company.

In the male division locally, there are requirements for hospital orderlies and also qualified hospital maintenance mechanics. There is a constant demand for trainees in the retail and financial field. Industrial plants are seeking qualified plant, machine and production foremen, technologists professional engineers and accountants. It is to be noted that a number of positions are available elsewhere in Southern Ontario for various categories of plant superintendents. These positions are at very attractive salary levels. A large electrical firm located in the Toronto area has a number of positions vacant calling for experienced electrical-electronic draftsmen. This company is also interested in and willing to accept applications from students who anticipate graduating from a four year technical school program who have had as a major, the electrical-electronic drafting.

If you are interested in any of these positions, you are invited to contact the Canada Manpower Centre at 324 Church Street, Belleville or telephone 962-9681.

Lemay Is Finally Sentenced For Bank Robbery Back in 1961

MONTREAL (CP) — Stocky Georges Lemay, convicted of masterminding a $1,000,000 tunnel robbery of a bank in 1961, was sentenced Friday to eight years in prison.

His capture in Florida in May, 1965, as a result of a photograph flashed across North America via a communications satellite, was as fantastic as the $500,000 robbery carried out with walkie-talkies after months of planning.

The end of the saga, that included his escape from a Florida jail and recapture in Las Vegas in August, 1966, came in a crowded courtroom Friday.

Lemay, 43, heard the sentence read by Mr. Justice Jacques Trahan. He was convicted on burglary and conspiracy charges.

He received up to 14 years on each.

The oft-postponed trial that started in October, 1967, brought out an amazing story of the detailed planning that went into the 1961 Dominion Day robbery of a downtown Montreal branch of the Bank of Nova Scotia.

Lemay had escaped unsuccessfully by police through out the world for four years.

Only after his photograph was flashed over the first Early Bird communications satellite in 1965 was he recognized and captured.

The mysterious death 13 years earlier of his first wife, a former French-Canadian beauty queen, was another chapter in the Lemay story.

It was his part in the rifling of 273 safety deposit boxes during the holiday weekend seven years ago that put him high on the police most-wanted list.

In his 274-page judgment, Mr. Justice Trahan said the court placed reliance on the testimony of Jacques Lajoie, 43, of Piedmont, Que., one of four others who helped in the robbery. The four were captured soon after the theft.

It was six years ago to the very day—Jan. 17, 1962—that Lajoie told a court here that the bank was entered through a conduit and told how, despite the occasional tread of a beat policeman, various charges of dynamite were used to blast a way into the vault.

Lemay was said to have used a walkie-talkie to deploy his colleagues and direct their efforts in entering the bank from an office across the street.

Lajoie received a one-day jail term for his part in the robbery after spending two years in prison during the trials against other members of the gang.

Roland Primeau received a 12-year term and André and Yvon Lemieux, brothers-in-law of Lemay, received six and four years respectively.

Lemay's escape from justice in Canada ended six days after the satellite, during its first international transmissions, showed his picture across the continent.

A Florida resident recognized him as an apparent wealthy yacht owner and he was jailed in Miami.

He escaped five months later and was recaptured in Las Vegas with his wife Lise, whom he married in a one-minute ceremony in the Florida jail.

It was in Florida that he first became a public figure with the disappearance of his first wife, Huguette, in 1952.

They had been married seven months when they travelled together from Montreal to Florida and, according to Lemay, she disappeared when she left him to change her clothes one evening.

Florida police launched a search but she was never found. A grand jury report said she "may be dead and, if dead, she met death as a result of foul play."

His second wife, Lise, is the 25-year-old sister of the two Lemieux found guilty for their part in the robbery.

Jean Dixon's Horoscope

For January 19

Your birthday today: This year will be a switch to simpler, more effective habits. Attention to causes will be necessary, along with an effort to avoid difficulties rather than try to resolve them after they arise from negligence. Today's natives tend to be collectors of ideas and have talent at putting them to use.

ARIES (Mar. 21 — Apr. 19): Attend your usual Sunday social contacts. Then take the day off for rest, light recreation, expecting no great excitement or serious developments.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 — May 20): Visit those who do not travel. Do something for these people, without seeking reward. Resolve not to get involved in complicated discussions.

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): Where you meet people, speak directly to the point to avoid confusion arises; everybody hears only what he wants to hear today. Study, reading, music are desirable.

CANCER (June 21 — July 22): Does your Sunday duties are done, much can be accomplished clearing off correspondence, errands, and the like. Your mate would have much to say today in any case, and the ideas are quite worth hearing.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22): Keep the peace at nearly all costs! Calm discussion will resolve most tensions. Avoid rushing any chore that brings fatigue.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 — Sept. 22): Do your share in the community, then turn to work on your personal concerns, creative projects. Take the time to exercise, and to meditate.

LIBRA (Sept. 23— Oct. 22): You can create unnecessary problems by meddling. Youngor people tend to create dissension, which you are called on to arbitrate.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23—Nov. 21): Refrain from doing repairs on gadgets unless you are well experienced. Exceptional care is very strongly urged in the use of edged or power tools. Inflammable materials during the week. Pleasant manners, even when you don't feel that way, are a must.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): You will probably find yourself in the midst of a social whirl today with people gathering around to discuss group action or proffer helpful suggestions. Meditation is a prop per part of your Sunday.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 — Jan. 19): Family affairs are emphasized. Except misunderstanding and pay no serious attention, as it will straighten out quickly. Keep things light by doing nothing that is not required at the moment.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 — Feb. 18): The early hours are normal. As the day wears on, take things more calmly, and l o a f throuth the afternoon.

PISCES (Feb. 19 — Mar. 20): This is more of a day to stay put and do small things rather than to travel or move across the country. If you must drive, watch for the irresponsible driver.

For January 20

Your birthday today: N e w people come into your life from all sides, providing interesting relationships. After the start of spring, the main factor is your own desire to develop. Today's natives often have an abiding enthusiasm for humane causes.

ARIES (Mar. 21 — Apr. 19): Just because you meet little resistance doesn't mean i t o u don't work; clear out that backlog! Don't slip in the next couple of weeks. Avoid arguments with women this evening.

TAURUS (Apr. 20 — May 20): Concentrate on routines for even headway. Enjoy an interlude of relaxed, informal contact with associates, neighbors. Plan for a mini evening at home.

GEMINI (May 21 — June 20): Nothing serious is going to interfere with your life from the outside. You can be disruptive with a bit of boredom or a tantrum; don't. Catch up with your own chores.

CANCER (June 21 — July 22): You may have the feeling that something is brewing and you are left out of it. If you will be patient and abstain from even thinking about unanswered questions, all will come to your attention in due course.

LEO (July 23 — Aug. 22): Conduct yourself so that anything unfavorable said behind your back will appear preposterous. Friends and family talk; your privacy is apt to be breached a bit. You can do nothing about it.

VIRGO (Aug. 23 — Sept. 22): Criticism will get you nowhere. Work on plans already underway. Keep various activities fairly concurrent, switch back and forth if the situation permits you movement.

LIBRA (Sept. 23 — Oct. 22): With so many items of correction to make, your notebook may be your best tool today. Poignant emotion may have to be contained and concealed deeper in your own bosom than is usual for people posing as confidants.

SCORPIO (Oct. 23—Nov. 21): Whether it's "neither a lender e. be," lest you lose both t h e sum and the friend who borrows it, or vice versa. If jealousy or gossip arises out of a casual flirtation, the results involve repercussions you hadn't thought about.

SAGITTARIUS (Nov. 22 — Dec. 21): Everybody around you seems to want to fight. Just stay out of it until it's time to be a peacemaker. Spend time at your hobby this evening.

CAPRICORN (Dec. 22 — Jan. 19): Continue your efforts to get projects organized. Today you can, with a bit o f p a i n r e a l e t aid that usually would be beyond your reach without a major regulation. U s e the opportunity.

AQUARIUS (Jan. 20 —Feb. 18): You might call this "accountant's day" since it mainly is. Expect associates t o l a c k some of their normal drive. Wait for better times to start large operations.

PISCES (Feb. 19 — Mar. 20): People arouse your sympathy, but understanding their insecurities and jealousy does not give you peace of mind or control over their problems. Hold your imagination to positive lines.

Strong Indictment Voiced of Way Canadian Studies Taught

TORONTO (CP) — A "strong indictment of the way Canadian studies are being taught" is how Bernie Hodgetts describes his new 122-page National History Project report, What Culture? What Heritage?

Mr. Hodgetts said in an interview Friday that Canadian youth is getting a "greyed-out, poorly taught smash of constitutional and political history, nice neat little acts of Parliament, taught as if everyone agreed with each decision.

"Students paddle and portage over the river routes with the early explorers and fur traders, not once but several times, proving in the process that the spiral theory does little more than increase boredom.

"They have found very little in the Canadian past which is interesting and meaningful to them and practically no source of inspiration in their cultural heritage. They are future citizens without deep roots."

Mr. Hodgetts based the report on a year-long study sponsored by Trinity College School in Port Hope, Ont., where he was a history professor.

With a staff of eight, he observed 847 social studies and history classrooms in operation in 247 schools in 20 cities.

The staff interviewed educationists and Grade 10 students and had 1,000 Grade 12 students write short essays giving their own opinions of Canada.

He is currently working for the Ontario Institute for Studies in Education to develop new programs in Canadian studies.

Mr. Hodgetts' report calls for a council of education ministers from the 10 provinces to establish a Canadian studies consortium.

It would consist of regional centres with a national office and communications centre to develop and distribute new material and teaching strategies for use in schools.

The consortium would initiate and work from findings in the report and related studies. Final decisions on any material it produces would be left to the provinces.

He said it would be an enormous project, but could be done within a year.

Mr. Hodgetts said Canada's national history has only been served in a school system that ensures that each citizen has an all-sided historical view complete with the dissent and color of history as well as a thorough sweep of contemporary opinion and viewpoints.

"Such things as protest and minority movements, class developments and issues, the influence of art, literature and ideas, education and religion, industrial growth . . . that should be an integral part of history are virtually ignored in our schools," he said.

"It's not just conservative! It's downright reactionary!"

Gomulka Vanquishes Anti-Semites

WARSAW (AP) — Communist party boss Wladyslaw Gomulka has cracked down on anti-Semitism in the interior ministry and is consolidating his position after a serious challenge to his authority in 1968, sources report ed today.

Since the 63-year-old party first secretary's re-election last November, said the informants, there have been a number of "personnel changes" in the government and party, and, more are expected. Several provincial first secretaries have been out ed.

The sources also reported that Gen. Mieczyslaw Moczar, a party secretary, deputy member of the governing Politburo and the interior minister and secret police chief until last July, may lose the chairmanship of Poland's 250,000-member Veterans Organization.

Gomulka's crackdown apparently began late last year after Ryszard Gontarz, a general who linked to the anti-Semitic campaign and a member of the Communist party cell in the interior ministry, accused men close to Gomulka of being "revisionists"—the worst criticism in Communist ideology.

Gontarz retaliated swiftly, the sources said. Gontarz was expelled from the party cell, the executive committee of the cell was dissolved, and Gomulka removed the head of a newly formed Jewish section in the ministry.

It later was announced that Gontarz was a secret police officer with access to ministry records and archives. Many Gomulka supporters regarded him as a tool of a campaign hatched by Moczar to shake up the party apparatus and topple Gomulka.

After Poland's student demonstrations last March against government censorship and the expulsion of dissident students, Gontarz wrote a series of articles blaming the disturbances on Jews. He wrote about "Jewish Gestapo" and "collaborators" who betrayed their own people walled up in Nazi ghettos.

He also accused Jews, who left the country after being dismissed from jobs, of joining an "anti-Polish slander campaign" and betraying Poland with charges of anti-Semitism.

Moczar, interior minister and secret police chief at the time, used the anti-Semitic theme to arouse the nationalistic Veterans Organization and whipping up a press campaign against Jews in high positions. It created a wave of purges and dismissals, and several thousand Jews emigrated in fear.

In July, Moczar was promoted from party secretary and deputy member of the ruling Politburo, and many feared Gomulka's days as first secretary of Poland's Communist party were numbered.

But the Soviet invasion of Czechoslovakia last August apparently checked Moczar's climb. Gomulka, with a personal pitch from Soviet party boss Leonid Brezhnev, was re-elected to the Polish party congress in November.

'Not Cent More' Teachers Told

QUEBEC (CP) — The provincial government came out Friday with a blunt, not a cent more reaction to announced plans by some Quebec teachers to begin a system of rotating strikes later this month.

Seven teachers associations have announced they plan to begin the rotating strikes in an attempt to pressure the government and school boards into a settlement of their dispute, which has simmered for 18 months.

The provincial government said it is firmly opposed to any further concessions.

Paul Dozois, finance minister and acting premier, told a news conference Friday:

"As finance minister, I am sorry to say I can't give a cent more than what has been offered to the teachers. The negotiating table because it would knock the government's salary policy to the ground."

Salary schedules in the dispute between the teachers and the provincial government and school boards are already settled, but Mr. Dozois said other teacher demands would be costly.

The financial situation of the province was too precarious to support the extra cost burden the demands would impose.

Raymond Laliberte, president of the 65,000-member Quebec Teachers Corporation, announced Saturday the decision to undertake rotating strikes which "can affect a school board, a single school, a class within a school or even a subject taught."

Duration of such strikes, which would come without warning, would vary.

Strike notices have been filled by seven teachers' associations which are members of the Quebec Teachers Corporation.

They are in Baie Comeau, Valleyfield, St. Johns, Pinoumski, Quebec City, its suburb of Sillery, and two associations in Laval, near Montreal.

The corporation has 62 member associations and notice from other members was expected.

Meanwhile, the 8,000-member Provincial Association of Protestant Teachers announced it will not take part in the rotating strikes and the 1,500-member Provincial Association of Catholic Teachers 'said its members —English-speaking Roman Catholic teachers—have not yet decided on the matter.

Besides rejecting any settlement that would increase school costs in Quebec, Mr. Dozois rejected arbitration at the news conference.

Any settlement would involve questions that could only be decided by the legislature, he said.

"No matter how intelligent or competent the arbitrator may be, it is not the business to decide the tax level we should impose on the population."

Indians Send Bill For Five Billion

QUEBEC (CP) — Acting Premier Paul Dozois was given a bill Friday for $5,000,000,000 for lands the Quebec Indian Association says were taken from Indians in the province without their consent.

The 27,000-member association, grouping Indians from 43 bands and nine tribes, presented the bill. Max Gros Louis, association secretary-treasurer, said there is a possibility the Indians will sue if the government does not reply by April 15.

Besides asking for monetary restitution for more than 85 per cent of Quebec territory the Indians say is theirs legally, the Indians outlined a number of their grievances.

Mr. Gros Louis told a news conference the association will present the same brief to the government of Newfoundland.

Quebec Indians did not recognize Newfoundland's jurisdiction over Labrador, but might recognize it if Premier Joseph Smallwood's government agreed to Indian claims.

Mr. Gros Louis said that the first of the two governments to agree on Indian territorial claims will have an additional argument to support its own claim to Labrador.

Labrador was awarded to Newfoundland in a British Privy Council decision in 1927, but the decision never has been recognized by Quebec.

Mr. Donois' only comment to reporters was: "It's the biggest bill I've ever received."

Mr. Gros Louis, chief of a Quebec village near Quebec City, said that under a royal proclamation in 1763 the territories, then provinces, were forbidden to appropriate any Indian lands without Indian consent.

Mr. Gros Louis said Quebec literally floated Indian rights by refusing Indians access to their own lands for hunting and fishing.

Indians also had been refused the right to education and had to pay taxes without having voting rights.

Car Insurance Rates Likely To Show Slight Overall Rise

TORONTO (CP) — Slightly reduced insurance rates on collision are likely for many Ontario drivers this year—but a small increase in costs of coverage for public liability and property damage could raise the total cost for many of them by a few dollars, the All Canada Insurance Information Service said Friday night.

It made public the first of its indications of probable insurance rates for 1969. Estimates of costs in other provinces will be made public later.

The Service's report on likely rates in 12 Ontario centres emphasizes that final insurance charges for this year have not been established, but says its figures "probably represent maximums which will be applied."

They are based on a driver carrying $100,000 for third-party liability and property damage and $100 deductible collision. The car involved is a medium-priced, eight-cylinder sedan. Premiums for older cars could be less, depending on year and model.

The figures also assume that the driver uses his car mainly for pleasure, with no principal operator under 25.

The Service gives no specific reasons for the general small decrease in collision insurance costs or the small climb in public liability premiums, but it notes that in 1967 and the first six months of 1968 the frequency of claims fell to 8.1 for every 100 cars insured from 8.3 claims in 1966.

The cost of the claims in 1967 and the first six months of 1968, however, rose to an average of $696 from $570 in 1966.

The estimates show that, for drivers without a claim in the last three years, Kingston and Peterborough should have the lowest premiums—$96 a year.

North Bay and Fort William-Port Arthur could have the highest at an estimated $126. Niagara Falls, Hamilton and Windsor rates could be $125.

Nixon Asks World To Enrich Man's Life

Tight Security At Inauguration

WASHINGTON (AP) — Richard Milhous Nixon, shielded by bulletproof glass and the tightest security ever devised for an inauguration, became the 37th president of the United States today.

In his prepared inaugural address, he called on the Communist world to join the U.S. in "peaceful competition — not in conquering territory or extending dominion, but in enriching the life of man."

At home, he warned that the country faces a "crisis of the spirit."

In a pageant almost as old as the country since independence, Nixon repeated the traditional presidential oath and accepted the power and the agony of the office that ended him eight years ago when he lost to John F. Kennedy.

Afterward, he said the country is "rich in goods but ragged in spirit, reaching with magnificent precision for the moon, but failing into raucous discord here on earth.

On world peace, Nixon said his administration seeks "an open world—open to ideas, open to the exchange of goods and people, a world in which no people, great or small, will live in angry isolation.

"We cannot expect to make everyone our friend, but we can try to make no one our enemy."

The 56-year-old Nixon, son of a california grocer, assumed office by reciting only 35 words.

Before Nixon took the oath his vice-president, Spiro T. Agnew, was sworn in by Senate Minority Leader Everett M. Dirksen.

The historic tableau was played out on a stand before the Capitol, its participants shielded on three sides by broad panes of bulletproof glass and guarded above by armed federal agents scanning the crowds with special wide-angle devices.

As the totems of power passed from Lyndon Johnson to Richard Nixon, from Democrat to Republican, helicopters carrying secret servicemen hovered in the leaden skies nearby.

Capital streets, lined with more than 10,000 soldiers and stands where vicious Republicans jostled with antiwar protestors, were damp from three days of rain.

In outlying areas of the capital armed national guardsmen patrolled with city police. Mingling with the downtown crowds were plainclothes experts from Chicago, New York and Philadelphia known for skills at spotting pickpockets, con men and psychopaths.

Mayor at Ceremony

That the Mayor of Picton is on a first name basis with the President of the United States is more than a little unusual.

But Mayor Harvey J. McFarland is and he will be one of the few Canadians that will be meeting Richard Nixon in Washington DC on a personal basis.

Times On Side Of Peace

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Nixon launched his administration today, saying "the times are on the side of peace" and history beckons the United States "to help lead the world at last out of the valley of turmoil."

In the text of his inaugural address from the steps of the Capitol, Nixon said that at home the U.S. faces "a crisis of the spirit" and needs an answer of the spirit.

"We have found ourselves rich in goods but ragged in spirit; reaching with magnificent precision for the moon, but failing into raucous discord here on earth," he said.

The new president said the answer to the crisis will be found in such simple vertues as "goodness, decency, love, kindness."

In these difficult years, the of world," Nixon contended, of words, Nixon contended, "from inflated rhetoric that promises more than it could possibly deliver; from angry rhetoric that fans discontents into hatreds, from bombastic rhetoric that postures instead of persuading.

This complaint clearly is not directly today at any one individual but, from whatever source, Nixon said "we cannot learn from one another until we stop shouting at one another.

At the same time, Nixon seemed to hint that portions of President Johnsons Great Society programs will be continued.

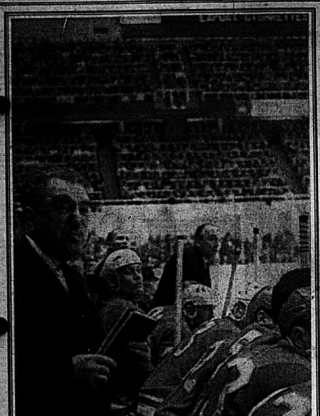
He promised to "press urgently forward toward such goals as rebuilding cities, providing better housing, improving education, protecting the environment and seeking full employment.

Citing his inaugural motto, Nixon said all must go forward together if any is to advance.

"No man can be fully free while his neighbor is not," he said.

"This means black and white together as one nation, not two, the president declared. "The laws have caught up with our conscience. What remains is to give light to what is in the law: To ensure at last that all are born equal in dignity before God, all are born equal in dignity before man.

Nixon's principal emphasis clearly was on the search for peace.



"For the first time, because the people of the world want peace, and the leaders are afraid of war, the times are on the side of peace, he said.

To help make the world safe for mankind, he added, "is our summons to greatness.

As in the past, Nixon asserted:

"After a period of confrontation, we are entering an era of negotiation. Let all nations

Fog Crash Kills Four On 401

CORNWALL (CP) — Police worked feverishly today trying to clear the wreckage from a series of separate car-truck collisions on fog-bound Macdonald-Cartier Freeway. Hospitals reported four dead, but there were unconfirmed reports that at least nine had died in the accidents.

The accidents—in both east and westbound lanes of the freeway, involved 12 trucks and seven cars. One truck was carrying paper which burst into flames.

The highway was closed after the collisions and police were working to clear bodies from the wreckage. Asked about the dead, one police officer said:

"I lost count at nine."

Pushers Jam Tokyo Trains

TOKYO (AP) — Kyodo news service reported Sunday that the national railway has hired 506 more men to shove more passengers into already crammed commuter trains in an operation which it says helps support Japan's economy "from behind."

Winter is difficult because passengers wear heavy coats which take up precious room on the trains, Kyodo's Masanori Hayashi wrote, but the railway has "the supreme duty" of getting millions of commuters to their Tokyo offices on time.

"Operation Push Bottom," he said, "not only supports the commuters but the nation's fast-growing economy from behind."

This winter, Hayashi added, the addition of 506 men gives the railway 2,577 pushers, including 754 college students skilled in judo, karate or soccer.

"Lowering their heads slightly like bulls confronting a matador in the ring, the ace pushers at work on Shinjuku station platform spring at a passenger from behind and push him into the coach, which is already bulging with passengers three times the fixed capacity of 250," he said.

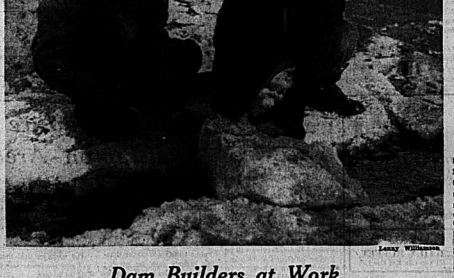
Urgency Attached To Paris Talks

PARIS (AP) — With Ambassador Henry Cabot Lodge due in Paris tonight to take over the U.S. negotiating team at the Vietnam peace talks, the four delegations are expected to get down to business by the end of the week.

The Viet Cong's National Liberation Front proposed Saturday that the first session of substantive talks be held Tuesday. But Lodge said the U.S. response would have to await his arrival in Paris, and other officials in Washington doubted the talks could get under way so soon.



President Johnson's chief negotiators at the talks, W. Averell Harriman, flew to Washington Sunday and saw both Lodge and Johnson soon after his arrival.

Vice-President Nguyen Cao Ky, supervisor of the South Vietnamese delegation, was expected back in Paris early this week.

A sense of urgency and activity pervaded all the delegations in the French capital.

The sudden burst of speed stirred speculation that pressure had been brought to bear by Moscow on North Vietnam and Washington on the South Vietnamese ally.

All is set for the most important phase of the talks, in which the four parties begin discussing such matters as guaranteeing the demilitarized zone between North and South Vietnam, a ceasefire, other military questions and eventually a political settlement.

U.S. Lifts Troops At Czech Border

NUERNBERG (AP) — A huge airlift from the United States started pouring some 5,000 troops into this West German city today, on their way to manoeuvres near the Czech border which both the Soviet and Czechoslovak Commoanists have protested.

The first of 53 giant C-141 Starlifter jet transports arrived at the Nuernberg airport at 9 a.m.

The last of the 5,000 soldiers is due here by Tuesday night.

The troops arriving today and Tuesday are joining another 12,000 American soldiers who have been flying to West Germany since Jan. 6. Also already on the scene are four tactical fighter squadrons from the United States, totalling 3,500 men.

As the troops arrived, they picked up equipment they left behind last summer and began moving by train to the manoeuvre site at Grafenwoehr, in southeast Germany.

The army says speed is not the point of the airlift. It says the main purpose is to test the efficiency of the dual-based plan of operation.

Politics is also a major factor, the exercise, now scheduled for Jan. 29 Feb. 4, was moved up six months because of the Soviet occupation of Czechoslovakia last August.

Picton Mayor At Inauguration

After receiving invitations from Mr. Nixon to attend the inaugural proceedings in Washington, Mr. McFarland took off from Picton airfield Sunday afternoon in his private twin engined Beechcraft.

The millionaire contractor is accompanied to Washington by his wife and they will both be returning on Tuesday.

"It's a real honor to know Mr. Nixon," said the Picton mayor, "and be attending his inauguration."

"I should be quite close to the President, in fact I understand that we will be right across from him at the proceedings."

But it's the personal side of the McFarland — Nixon acquaintance that is most interesting.

Mr. McFarland has known the President of the United States since he was vice-president under Dwight D. Eisenhower.

And during Mr. Nixon's fruitless bid for the presidency in 1960 against Jack Kennedy, Mayor McFarland even went down to the US and accompanied Mr. Nixon for part of his campaign tour through New York State.

The call (May 1960) called me while I was in Ottawa that day and told me he was making a speech in Rochester. I flew down that afternoon."

And backing evidence to the fact is a picture of Mr. McFarland's Picton office where he, the then vice-president Nixon and New York Gov. John D. Rockefeller are together on the speech platform in front of 10,000 supporters.

Still another interesting photo (the office contains almost 100 pictures of noted personalities whom Mayor McFarland knows personally) is one of Richard Nixon and Harvey McFarland in sportshirts, and smiling at the camera as they stand with arms around each others shoulders.

The picture was taken on Mr. Nixon's last four years ago when it was docked in Picton. At that time Mr. Nixon was on a fishing cruise that came by to see Mr. McFarland.

"We were sitting on the boat one day then and just to show you what kind of a man Nixon is I'll tell you this story," Mr. McFarland.

"He was signing a few autographs for children when this one eight-year-old came up and told the vice-president his mother really respected him and that she was sorry Mr. Nixon wasn't a politician in Canada so that she could vote for him.

"Well, where's your mother, Mr. Nixon asked the boy. She's not feeling well" came the answer.

"Well," said Mr. McFarland "the vice-president excused himself, took the little boy's hand and said 'come on, son, let's go say hello to her.'

"Both of them walked up the hill and down a couple of streets and you can imagine how much of a thrill it was for that boy holding hands with the vice-president of the USA and taking him to visit his mother."

Mr. and Mrs. McFarland will be attending the Inaugural Concert, Official Inaugural Ceremony, the Inaugural Parade and the Inaugural Ball.

Combined prices for tickets to the four events go as high as $1,500.

"There hasn't been a year since I've known Mr. Nixon that he hasn't sent me a Christmas card and a picture of his family," as he passed Mr. McFarland said, 1969 card and picture across the table.

"He's a fine man and if that eight-year-old artist above anything, it shows that he cares."

"That's what's going to make Mr. Nixon a damn fine president."

What the Y means to me is the theme that prompted children to draw these posters for a poster contest during open house at the Belleville YMCA yesterday. Miss Valerie Slater, girl's and women's program director at the "Y," examines some of the children's efforts.

YMCA Holds Open House

The Belleville family YMCA inaugurated International "Y" Week yesterday with an open house visited by approximately 200 young people and 300 adults.

The open house visitors took part in a poster contest for youngsters, a tour of the YMCA building and a free guest swim in the pool.

The celebration of the special week is also an occasion for the Belleville "Y" in that 1969 is the culmination of 75 years of service.

Yesterday's activities were the commencement of a week of festivities which will run to Jan. 26, to enable Belleville citizens to have an opportunity to learn a little more about the "Y" and its place in the community.

During this week, the YMCA building will be open to non-members. The general public may participate in many of the regular programs to obtain a first hand knowledge of some of the daily activities of the "Y".

Part of yesterday's open house was the drawing of two names of winners of free memberships to the YMCA. Winners were Leonard May and Douglas Boyle.

Organized displays provided the color for the afternoon. Visitors witnessed exhibits of diving and synchronized swimming, trampoline displays and matawork shows.

The poster display offered the theme "what the 'Y' means to me" and 30 children entered drawings with imaginative and clever captions to exemplify this theme.

Winners in the age eight to 10 group were Margaret Pickles of R.R. 1 Hilton; Kelly Elleston of 548 Victoria Avenue and Corrie Harris of 37 Lambert Drive. The children placed first, second and third respectively.

In the 11 to 13 age group, first, second and third prizes went to Catherine Pirie, of R. R. 1, Hilton; Chris Pilla of 71 Hastings Drive; and Martha Byrne of 339 Victoria Avenue.

Visitors also witnessed a slide display detailing the extensive and varied programs offered by the YMCA. Another display reported special events during the year.

"It is the hope of "Y" program committee and the board of directors that citizens of Belleville will use the open house periods during the next week to come along and experience our "Y" during the YMCA week," said David Bell, chairman of the Belleville YMCA program committee.

Extra Performance

Mr. Dressup Draws 1,300 Youngsters

The world of make-believe produced a mix with real-live theatre audiences in Belleville during the weekend.

So much so, the playbill had to be rejrafted.

Onstage was Mister Dress-Up's Make-Believe — the road show of CBC's long-playing children's show starring Ernie Coombs.

So strong was the attraction that an extra performance had to be scheduled to meet the demands of young fans.

Originally, the presentation was scheduled for three showings — two on Saturday and a Sunday - afternoon performance.

Local organizers had hopefully looked to an attendance of 250 at each presentation.

By Friday morning, however, bookings were so heavy they already were re-allocated additional seats to handle the demand. By Saturday, it was obvious a fourth performance was necessary to handle the audience volume.

The result: Total audience attendance of 1,300.

The show arrived here as a result of fortunate chance. Stu Gilchrist, director of Loyalist's Communications Council, was formerly producer for Mister Dress-Up, before taking up his teaching appointment here.

The contact was sufficient to turn the show to Belleville's direction.

Now, Mr. Gilchrist and his group, spurred by the initial success, are hopeful of securing Coombs and company on a return engagement sometime in spring.

Secret of the show is the involvement of its audiences.

Geared to youngsters of preschool age, the presentations here seemed to draw as happy a response from older children.

The versatile Mr. Coombs slips easily through a series of seemingly - impromptu scenes dipping into a trunk for costumes that inspire characterizations.

Puppets plus the involved audience, round off the presentations.

The productions here also were put to educational ends. Loyalist students participated in behind-the-scenes professionalism, handling promotion, stage management and lights.

Mr. McFarland said that the money the government lost on Expo would have first of all removed every level railroad crossing in Canada.

"Then, the rest of the money could have been used to provide housing funds for every Canadian family at two per cent interest.

"People would have remembered Canada's centennial every time they turned the key in their lock and besides that the government would have money back.

Mr. McFarland said that he hoped after the Expo experience the government would remember the money wasted for future reference.

"Some day will have a bi-centennial, said the mayor.

McFarland: Expo A Waste

PICTON — According to one Quinte area personality, Mayor J. McFarland of Picton, Expo '67 tops the list as the biggest waste of money in Canada.

"I was against that project from the start," said the Picton mayor, "and I blame liberals, conservatives . . . .

"Look what happened when de Gaulle came over to Expo. That certainly didn't spread good will between either Canada or France or between English and French speaking Canadians."

Besides everything the federal government now holds bills for over $600,000,000 due to Expo according to Mr. McFarland — 60 per cent of one billion dollars lost.

That's what provokes me," he said. "that we're supposed to have, MPs and Cabinet Ministers 'that represent us and try and save our money."

Recent financial problems experienced by the federal government and the immediate increase in personal income tax ceased Mr. McFarland to recall the matter of Expo.

Also an Alternative to Expo, Mr. McFarland said that he had tried to initiate a plan across Canada for the centennial celebration of the country "but the Expo snowball was already rolling at that time, with $20,000,000 spent on it."

Mr. McFarland said that the money the government lost on Expo would have first of all removed every level railroad crossing in Canada.

Power Failure Hits Picton Area

PICTON (Staff) — The Hydro commission in Picton has blamed a short circuit at Lake Ontario Portland Cement plant for a power failure here on Saturday.

Picton was without power from four o'clock to 4.50 p.m.

Public Utilities Manager Clarian Blakely said the short circuit from low water or melting snow getting into a high tension bushing in the cement plant's sub-station caused the failure.

"It caused an overload throwing open the switch in Belleville."

The manager said that before power could be restored, the whole line from Picton to Belleville had to be checked. Crews started working at the Belleville end of the line and labored their way toward Picton until they found the problem at the cement plant.

The manager said that this was why the power was off as long as it was.

Students Sign Petition On Closing Date Issue

Although minister of education - William Davis has declared that local estimates of the school year officially closed, some Quinte district students have refused to let the matter die.

About 900 Quinte Secondary School students have signed a petition objecting to the entire 10 days the minister has decreed have been spared to attend in June.

The petition was also circulated at Belleville Collegiate and Vocational School, but the number of signatures obtained was not available.

Spokesman for Centennial students, Allen Kent, said the student council refused to handle the petition because it claimed the wording was not clear. He obtained about 45 signatures on his own before the student council vote.

Dennis Dunham, who received the petition at Moira, said he accepted it because he felt the "majority of the students didn't want the minister's decision changed". He said he discussed the matter with a representative group of students before deciding not to circulate the petition.

Students at Centre Hastings Secondary School in Madoc decided against signing the Belleville students' petition, but will draw up one of their own to send to the minister.

The Centre Hastings students held two general meetings at the noon hour to decide what action to take on the longer school year. They voted 367 to 45 in favor of a protest to the minister in the form of a petition.

"They have been in education experience for our students," said Centre Hastings' vice-principal Ronald Rowe. "They learned about democracy in action."

Stephen Glover, who distributed the petition at Quinte said the letter to the minister of education accompanying the signatures, lists two objections to the longer school year. It claims high school students will lose summer job opportunities to university students.

If they succeed in getting a job they will be deprived of about $200 in income they would have earned during the extra two weeks they will have to remain in school. In addition, the students feel the later closing date gives teachers too little time for marking examination papers and evaluating each student's year's work.

"Last year, those exempt from final examinations were out for school by May 21," Stephen said. "There were still jobs available at that time. By mid-June of this year the jobs will have been filled by university students because employers can't wait for us. The summer employment is critical enough now without this added impediment."

Stephen doesn't expect any immediate results from the student protest.

"William Davis said last week that the subject was closed and he was standing firm on his decision to extend the year by 10 days. However, the petitions he is receiving may have some influence on him if he should decide to re-consider the issue next year."

Frank O'Brien's tree stump remover performs its task at the municipal parking lot behind the Belleville police station. The apparatus is being handled by Frank Bouder of Point Anne, an employee of O'Brien's Tree Service.

This Machine Removes Stumps

There's a new piece of machinery in Belleville and it could possibly get a lot of use.

Have you ever heard of a tree stump remover? That's the purpose of the new machine owned by Frank O'Brien of RR 7 Belleville.

Mr. O'Brien operates a tree service and has done so for 15 years. His tasks include pruning, feeding, spraying, transplanting, cabling, bracing and, of course, tree and stump removal.

The new stump remover has just been purchased by Mr. O'Brien and has been in operation for only two weeks. It is the only machine of its kind in the Quinte area.

The apparatus consists of a saw and the motor to run it and a series of co-ordinating levers to control the swing and elevation of the saw blade.

The saw removes stumps by whittling them down. The blade has the ability to operate down to 12 inches below the ground.

With the utilization of the new apparatus things are looking a bit dismal for local tree stumps.

Train, Truck Crash

TRENTON — A private crossing car railway property behind the A and P store was the scene of a train - delivery van crash here on Friday afternoon.

Injured in the mishap was John VanLaeken, 54, of RR2, Trenton, who suffered a cut on the head and a sore shoulder. He was riding in the van along with another passenger Don Cooke of Trenton who did not need treatment at the Trenton hospital.

Lorne Richards of Trenton who operates a local cartage business was driving the van engaged in normal delivery truck from the CNR freight sheds. He told local police he did not notice the yard engine until it was too late.

The train hit the van broadside and carried it along the tracks 60 feet police said. The damage to the vehicle was estimated at $1,000.

The two passengers in the truck were helping the proprietor with deliveries.

Boy Shot in Chest Not Seriously Injured

PICTON (Staff) — A Picton area boy barely escaped death Saturday when a fragmented bullet struck him in the chest.

Dominic Lyons, nine, of R. R. 2, Picton, was playing at the home of his friend, Richard Naylor, when a gun, which they were using as a toy, went off.

Police said that the boys had taken turns holding the pistol in their game of cops and robbers, thinking it was a cap pistol. Nothing happened when the trigger was pulled because the revolving chamber was only partially loaded into position.

But when Richard pulled the trigger, the firing pin caught the bullet, causing it to fire.

Police said since only part of the chamber was lined up with the barrel it allowed only part of the bullet to leave the gun inflicting a minor cut on Dominic's chest.

The accident happened in the attic of the Naylor home where the boys found the .22 calibre pistol. They had loaded the gun, but did not click the cylinder into position.

Mr. and Mrs. Naylor were not aware that either the gun or the shells were in the house.

Gerald O'brien

Former Deputy Chief Dies

Former Deputy Chief of the Belleville Fire Department, softball and baseball player, coach of several teams and an active worker and supporter of handicapped and underprivileged children, Gerald Leo "Warpy" O'Brien, RR 1 Carrying Place, died suddenly at his home on Saturday after witnessing an accident on his front lawn.

He had suffered a stroke some years before and on Saturday was stricken with a heart attack.

Mr. O'Brien was born in Belleville, a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. John O'Brien and had lived his entire life in the community. He was in his 63rd year.

He joined the Fire Department in June, 1926 and was promoted to Captain in 1945. He was appointed Deputy Chief in 1958 and because of illness, retired in 1965. He served 26 years with the department and was a valued and well respected member.

Mr. O'Brien obtained leave of absence from the department during World War II, joined the fire fighter course for Canada, obtained the rank of Flight Sergeant and qualified as an instructor. He was in the force from 1941 until discharge in 1946.

"Warpy" as he was familiarly known to a legion of friends in all walks of life, was an ardent sports lover. He played and coached several teams, was instrumental in the starting of minor softball and baseball in Belleville, worked for the betterment of playing fields and did everything to advance the youth of the city in sport.

As a hobby he was an expert angler and spent many hours on the river in his search for the elusive bass or pickerel.

He was a tireless worker for the handicapped and underprivileged child and headed many organizations when funds were needed. He was a kind and gentle man, full of wit and never happier than with his friends.

He was a member of Christ Church.

Surviving are his wife, the former Winnifred Halsey, one son, John Leo O'Brien of Grimsby and three grandchildren. One brother, Owen and two sisters, Irene and Ann predeceased.

The funeral will be held from the John R. Bush Funeral Home on Tuesday, Jan. 21 at three o'clock with interment in Belleville Cemetery.

Rev. David Hawkins will officiate.

The Artistic Touch

For nine-year-old Bellevillian Clarice Vanderveide today brought some memorable moments. A piano student she is now studying hard for the upcoming Rotary music festival. And, briefly this morning, she met one of the world's great concert artists — Mme. Aline Van Berentzen, here for recital at Belleville Collegiate tonight. Despite busy schedule, the famed pianist took time out to share keyboard with young student.

Welfare Costs Increase in Area

General welfare statistics for the month of Sept. 1968 released by the Ontario department of social and family services show a 75 per cent increase in expenditures for Hastings county as compared with the same month in 1967.

But county welfare administrator Reginald Tucker says the increase is not as bad as it sounds as the department report lists only expenditures with no reference being made to revenues received.

"The report indicates a trend with the increased costs being relatively superficial," he said.

The provincial report shows that welfare expenditures for the county for Sept. were $61,407 as compared with $246,134 for Sept. 1967.

But according to Mr. Tucker the figures include benefits paid out in categories for which the county receives 100 per cent re-imbursements.

These categories include families from outside the province with less than 12 months residency, industrial accident claimants who apply for local welfare while awaiting compensation checks, and people who ask for temporary assistance when, because of delays, their regular pension or welfare checks are held up in the mails.

In such instances the expenditures are listed in the provincial report but the revenues are not.

The provincial report indicated a 16.5 per cent increase in the numbers of persons receiving assistance in Ontario in Sept. 1968 as compared with 1967.

In Hastings there was a 26 per cent increase in the number of welfare recipients in the same period — 2,198 as compared with 960. The 1,198 figure, however, was a drop of about 100 from August 1967.

Mr. Tucker said the increase levelled off during Oct., but an upward trend in the number of persons receiving assistance was noticed in Nov. and Dec.

The provincial report said the increase was caused largely by the higher standards of assistance introduced by the province last year, and also by increased unemployment which saw 2.5 per cent of the Ontario labor force out of work in Sept. last year as compared with Sept. 1967.

Accident Proves Fatal

PICTON (Staff) — A 24-year-old Consecon man escaped with minor injuries late Saturday afternoon when his late model truck plowed into a tree west of Roblesville, but the accident had a fatal aftermath for an invalid area resident.

Provincial police at Picton said Hilder Halvorsen of RR2 Consecon escaped with lacerations and head injuries when his truck was literally torn apart by the impact.

The accident occurred directly in front of the home of Gerald "Warpy" O'Brien, former member of the Belleville Fire Department, who witnessed the mishap from his front window. Mr. OBrien suffered a heart attack and died before he could be taken to hospital.

Police said that Halvorsen was driving west on Prince Edward County Road No. 3, when, just west of Redmerville, his pickup truck went out of control and struck a telephone pole before slamming into the tree in front of the OBrien house.

The force of the impact literally tore the truck apart with the motor and the rear wheel assembly being torn from the chassis.

Break Investigated

Belleville city police are investigating a weekend break at Kellys Sport Shop, 347 North First St.

According to police the break occurred sometime during early morning Saturday.

Entry to the store was obtained by kicking in the door on the south side of the building.

Item stolen included an unqualified quantity of rifles, shotguns, 22 calibre pistols, starter pistols and a pair of walkie talkies.

Ten dollars in cash was also removed.

Medical Costs Up

The increase of 46 per cent in medical insurance premiums under the Physicians Services Inc. plan is yet another blow to the pocket-book of the increasingly hard-pressed Canadian public.

The increase — to take effect in April — will mean boosts to as much as $6.75 a month for single subscribers (from $3.90) to $19.40 for family rates (from $13.35).

The figures speak for themselves. So does the following statement by The Ontario Medical Association, setting out its reasons for instituting a ten per cent increase in the total cost of medical care:

"Figures released by the Department of National Health and Welfare (Earnings of Physicians in Canada, 1967-68, Health Care Series No. 21) indicate that the income of medical practice increased by 43 per cent during that period. During the same period the wage and salary index rose by 34 per cent. The most recent figures available show the wage and salary index increased by 12.1 per cent from 1965-67.

"The Financial Post of Nov. 30, 1968 reported that weekly wages and salaries in industry as a whole have risen by an average of 44 per cent in the last eight years, and dollar income per household have risen almost 53 per cent.

"A study of incomes in four fee-for-service professions other than medicine showed that the average income would increase by approximately ten per cent during the next two years if it were based on average increases in the consumer price index over a decade.

"In none of the other fee-for-service professions does the average work week come close to the more than 60 hours which the average physician spends on behalf of his patients."

Thus the medical profession adjusts to the inflationary trend that grips the country. People in every walk of life are paying more for everything. Those who are hurt most financially, however, are average wage earners who can least afford such increases.

The Good And The Bad

In a world that reflects the good and the bad, the positive and the negative, hope still springs eternal. Society expects something better from each succeeding generation, yet human nature remains the same. The fittest, as ever, survive, and life goes on.

The younger generation grow up faster today, but for all the new fund of knowledge available they are little better educated as people. And where social experimentation is concerned — as with drugs, the new morality, and lack of discipline reflected by the student power movement — they may even be said to have taken a step backward.

News media afford specific examples of these variations in human nature, whatever the era. Crime, for instance, is on the increase and there is ready confirmation of this in the news of the day.

Some examples: three young men held on a charge of murdering two men on a highway west of Ottawa; two high school students pleading guilty to charges arising from two bomb incidents in Montreal in the last six weeks, and — in Orillia — two teenagers charged with 43 counts of theft, breaking and entering, malicious damage and arson that caused about $160,000 damage during the last three years.

And much else in an incalculable number of places throughout Canada and the United States.

Occasionally though we read of someone who has a positive goal in life. Perhaps he even has to leave the country to find himself. David Beenan took such a course when he left British Columbia nearly three years ago — in search of a navy.

Canada's new amalgamated defence force was not for Beenan. It was the navy or bolting. Now, according to a Canadian Press report from Auckland, he has just passed out at the head of the latest group of trainees from the New Zealand naval training school.

Canada needs more young people of the calibre of young David Beenan, now 19, even if they do leave the country. Join the navy — any navy — and you can expect to see a lot of the world. This way, young people can do more for themselves and for society than those who find themselves in the kind of dangerous and unhappy situations described above.

U.S. Presidency

Richard Nixon Now in the Hot Seat as LBJ Bows Out

By WALTER R. MEARS

NEW YORK (AP) — For Richard M. Nixon, 55 weeks of methodical, unspectacular preparation come to an end and four years of power begin at noon today.

The days of transition, from the inauguration of Lyndon B. Johnson as a man who has worked as hard at his job as any who ever held the White House.

There have been points of friction: For example, Nixon's early request for a Wednesday inauguration would clear with him any long-term foreign policy commitments for the inauguration day.

Johnson quickly declared that he, and no one else, would be in charge of U.S. policy until he left office. And Nixon instead, stoically relayed assurances that he wasn't trying to be ex-president.

In another instance, Johnson appears to have used his presidential authority to help Nixon take an endorsement of renewal of the 10-per-cent income surtax. Nixon reluctantly announced support of the continuation, apparently after the administration made clear that its alternative was a budget with spending reductions that the new White House team would find unacceptable.

As president-elect, Nixon avoided anything that would seem an attempt to upstage the lame duck president and take the role of national spokesman prior to his inauguration.

He decided at the outset, for example, that there would be no general, formal transition staff after Jan. 20. Nixon felt Johnson would regard that as an attempt to retain influence during the early days of presidential publicity. He remarked privately that Johnson was a bit sensitive on such matters.

Furthermore, Nixon was determined to avoid advance commitments that would embarrass him, at home or abroad, if he could help it once in office. He sought to make sure that the new presidency, for short or long term, would pledge only the president.

As a result there were no pledges at all, except in the most general terms. And Nixon set down a rule for himself and his appointees: Speak no policy until you take office.

From the evidence compiled at the Hotel Pierre, Nixon's will be a less personalized presidency than those of Johnson and the late John F. Kennedy.

Nixon has put his emphasis on staff men and staff work.

He assembled a team of what he called generalists; in effect, utility men equipped to fill a variety of assignments.

It soon became evident that in the Nixon lineup, one man was foremost among equals: H. R. (Bob) Haldeman, former Los Angeles advertising man and veteran political ally.

Haldeman's title is assistant to the president, but he has emerged as virtual chief of staff, the job he held during the presidential campaign.

He is, for example, the staff man Nixon contacts about the assignments and reports of other staff men. He was on hand for virtually every key session on the personnel of the new administration.

Letter to the Editor

PSI Rates to Be Increased in April

Editor,
The Intelligencer.

Day after day the cost of living increases, despite the fact that members of the Ontario Legislature have taken a strong verbal stand against careless and increased spending, and Mr. Benson has insisted Federal spending, too, must be curtailed. Everyone holding a political office has agreed the cost spiral must be closely watched and controlled.

So what is new?

Increased postal rates in December caused instant criticism; increased Hydro rates went in to effect last fall; increased Federal income tax became effective shortly after the New Year; telephone bills are going up, and now PSI rates have been increased 40 per cent.

News reports have stated physicians, dentists and lawyers are among the highest paid professionals in the country with average yearly incomes reported to be approximately $20,000. The average Ontario wage earner receives much less than that amount.

PSI was introduced to help those "average" Canadians who presently earn in the neighborhood of $4,000 or less annually, and who are supporting young families. A medical bill is then (before PSI) often meant years of sacrifice and deprivation. And these are the people who will feel the greatest pinch from the increase in PSI rates. Once again, a scheme designed to give assistance to the less affluent of our society has become a burden to the very ones it was intended to aid, and who most need such assistance.

We seem to be on a merry-go-round of strikes for higher wages, followed by increased salaries, followed by increased cost of living, followed by strikes, ad infinitum. The "average" Canadian family grasps futilely for the brass ring of ever-rising daughter forever just out of reach, while the low-income group rushes frantically around in the rut of poverty in a vain effort to escape, oblivious to the fact that the faster they rush and the harder they run, the deeper the rut becomes in the vicious circle of rising costs.

Where will it all end? Inflation precedes depression as history reminds those who remember the Hungry 30's. Are we destined to again experience less years similar to those of the Great Depression?

P.M. Supports The C' Wealth

Hamilton Spectator

Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau has had some constructive and scattered publicity since he became England count of it, but by no means all of it, flattering — and it might seem the strangest of his antics of some to find him warming up to the Commonwealth ideal, and firmly backing it up.

If this is a generalization, it might be remembered by those who claim to have a special comprehension of this country's history, that spokesmen from French Canada have traditionally been the most eloquent supporters of this deep, if often inarticulate, association of free Commonwealth countries, speaking not always the same tongue, but comprehending something much more vital and enduring. The London conference has been a case in point.

It is almost a commonplace now, that Canadians of English, Scottish, Irish and Welsh background, are the most diffident and most silent — even at times the most apologetic — of all their background. Maybe this doesn't mean very much: it is still regrettably evident, and if Old Canadians are lethargic, New Canadians understand it well.

Moon Flight Secondary Consideration?

Space Platforms Could Give Soviets Military Edge

By HAROLD MORRISON

LONDON (CP)—The path which the Russians have chosen in space development suggests they may be more concerned with exploitation of the heavens to help between nations and earth than in beating the Americans to the moon.

While many commentators still talk of a moon race, some give alarming concern that the Soviet Union is successfully manoeuvring the nucleus of a large space station, may be seeking to exploit space primarily for military purposes.

Both the Russians and the Americans have signed a treaty to ban nuclear weapons from space, but as the London Economist points out: How does anyone know whether space platforms or orbiting laboratories will be employed for reconnaissance, communications and other passive military uses or for more ominous purposes?

Some scientists say space platforms provide the best way of getting to the moon, by various sections shot up one at a time, a huge structure can be built in space to provide a staging process—and a rescue team —for the long and arduous trip the moon and back.

The Americans have shown through Apollo 8 that they have the necessary equipment and technical ability to reach the moon, though a safe landing and return from the moon's surface is a spectacular step yet to be achieved. American strategy is to make a swift direct voyage without interplanetary stopovers.

This provides a striking American lead in the moon race which the Russians seem in no hurry to overcome. The argument is raised that the Russians do not have sufficiently powerful rockets to raise a heavy, thick-skinned manned capsule into a moon orbit. The walls of Soyuz 4 and Soyuz 5 are described as thinner than those in Apollo 8 and the Soyuz 4 and 5 Soyuz cabins are much bigger.

The Russians may be scientifically well thickening which may increase protection against radiation—for cabin size in order to provide laboratories or other structures in space able to house relatively large numbers of men.

The successful docking in space of the Soyuz spacecraft suggests a program of joining up a continuing stream of cabins to produce, as the Russians now say, a permanent space structure complete with an internal man-made atmosphere and other requirements for long periods of living and working in space.

In this particular field of space technology, Sir Bernard Lovell, head of Britain's Jodrell Bank experimental station, estimates the Russians may have a four-year lead over the Americans.

But why does Russia want large crews in space? The aim may be purely scientific or it may be military.

Legislation Requested

Farm Leaders Favor One Body Concept

TORONTO (CP) — A coalition of Ontario farm leaders, called to study a special committee report on farm income, has given cautious approval to formation of a single organization to represent all farmers.

The proposal was the immediate support of Agriculture Minister William Stewart.

Conference delegates, representing mainly the Ontario Federation of Agriculture and the Ontario Farmers' Union, had spent three days studying the Challenge of Abundance, a 205-page report on rural life in Ontario. The report was released two weeks ago by a provincial-federal committee after two years of investigation.

The committee, composed of farmers, delegates supported the proposed building a single general farm organization—the only suggestion in the committee report the delegates endorsed.

However, OFU delegates attached from the vote, Charlie President, Walter Miller of Tara, Ont., said this was only an principle.

"The OFU always has supported a single farm organization," he said. "But this is not a convention, it is a conference called to study the report of the income committee."

"We were not given authority to take decisions on policy matters for our membership. Delegates should not have been forced into taking a position at this time."

But the conference apparently felt otherwise. It supported the principle of a single organization and said it should be built on the structure proposed by the income committee. It asked the agriculture department to secure the legislation necessary to make the organization operative.

Mr. Stewart told the 200 delegates who also represented marketing organizations, it's a provincial government and business associated with farming, he will take the farmers' request for provincial legislation to the cabinet.

He said if the cabinet approves, legislation will be introduced in the legislature session, which starts next month. He said enhancement of a new general farm organization "stood out loud and clear."

Mr. Stewart said he hopes the two farm groups will reach agreement on passing legislation would put support a new organization on the farmers.

"The legislation will be there if farm people vote in favor of using it," he said.

Russia Ready to Discuss Arms Limitations

MOSCOW (Reuters) — Russia today affirmed its readiness to discuss with the Nixon administration an agreement to limit the development of offensive and defensive missile systems.

Leonid Zamyatin, head of the Soviet foreign ministry press department, made the announcement at a Moscow news conference on Soviet proposals for disarmament.

The United States originally suggested talks to limit missile development with the Kremlin about two years ago but the offer was only taken up publicly by the Russians last year.

The opening of substantive talks on the issue was believed to have been delayed by tension resulting from the Soviet led Warsaw pact invasion of Czechoslovakia Aug. 21.

Zamyatin said the Soviet government is ready "for a new exchange of opinion with the U.S. government concerning mutual restriction and reduction of the armaments of certain means of delivery of nuclear weapons, including defensive weapons."

Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei Gromyko first announced Soviet readiness to begin talks on the issue in a speech to the Supreme Soviet, the Russian parliament, June 27.

Four days later the two governments said an understanding was reached on the opening of negotiations, but they were held up as tensions grew over the Czechoslovak crisis.

In October, the White House reacted coolly to a speech by Gromyko to the United Nations during which he renewed his offer of talks.

The news conference today was clearly timed to coincide with the inauguration of Richard M. Nixon, who is believed to be lukewarm to the idea of talks on this issue.

Zamyatin, who was reading an official government statement, said agreement on concrete questions of curbing the arms race, including the development of nuclear weapons, was "quite feasible although no easy thing."

The Soviet Union now believes it is essential to try and put into force the nuclear non-proliferation treaty, signed last year but still unratified by the United States or Russia, he said.

The Soviet Union wants to see the treaty "faithfully and consistently implemented," Zamyatin added.

The foreign ministry press chief suggested as a first step the implementation of Russian proposals for a ban on underground nuclear bomb tests, on the flight of nuclear bombers beyond national borders and the restriction of the movement of missile-carrying submarines, the prohibition of chemical and bacteriological weapons, the establishment of nuclear-free zones and the use of the sea and ocean beds for peaceful purposes only.

He accused the United States, Britain and West Germany of trying to step up activities of NATO and warned that Russia and her allies would have to

King Aide Says Earl Ray Innocent

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — A Negro civil rights leader long associated with the late Dr. Martin Luther King Jr. says the man charged with murdering King is innocent, the Memphis Commercial Appeal reports.

The newspaper says Rev. James Bevel sent a telegram to James Earl Ray, offering to defend him.

The newspaper says the telegram read: "I would like to inform you that I would be very happy to take your case without fee. I was present at the Lorraine Motel when Dr. King was killed. You have been charged with murdering him. Of course, I know that you are not guilty."

Ray is scheduled to go on trial here March 3 on a charge of murder in the assassination of King on April 4 last.

Time for Peace

know that during this administration our lines of communication will be open. We seek an open world—open to ideas, open to the exchange of goods and people, a world in which no people, great or small, will live in angry isolation.

These words seemed to suggest Nixon will at least consider resuming ties with mainland China and, perhaps, with Cuba.

"We cannot expect to make everyone our friends," he said, "but we can try to make no one our enemy."

The new president invited would-be adversaries to join in a peaceful competition. "Let us co-operate to reduce the burden of arms, to strengthen the structure of peace, to lift up the poor and the hungry."

Adding a note of caution, he said: "But to all who would be tempted by weakness, let us leave no doubt that we will be as strong as we need to be for as long as we need to be.

"I know that peace does not come through wishing for it, that there is no substitute for days and even years of patient and prolonged diplomacy.

But "I add this sacred commitment: I shall consecrate my office, my energies and all the wisdom I can summon to the cause of peace among nations.

Because the nation is strong, he said, it can afford to size up its weaknesses with candor and approach them with hope.

"We are caught in war, wanting peace, he said. "We are torn by division, wanting unity. We see around us empty lives, wanting fulfillment. We see tasks that need doing, waiting for hands to do them.

"In most those problems, "we need only to look within ourselves. Greatness comes in simple trappings.

For the governments part, he promised, his administration will listen to the voices of anguish and despair.

He said:

"Those who have been left out, we will try to bring in.

"Those left behind, we will help to catch up.

He emphasized the work of his administration will not involve tearing down in any wholesale fashion the progress of the Kennedy and Johnson administrations.

"Our task is to build on what has gone before—not turning away from the old, but turning toward the new.

But Nixon suggested government capacity for doing with many of the major domestic problems is limited.

Noting that in the last third of a century "government has passed more laws, spent more money, initiated more programs, than in all our previous history, Nixon said:

"We are approaching the limits of what government alone can do.

"What has to be done, has to be done by government and people together or it will not be done at all. The lesson of past years is that without the people we can do nothing; with the people we can do everything.

He said he is calling on Americans to lead neither a life of grim, sacrifice nor one of unbridled ease, but "I ask you to join in a high adventure.

CHURCH GROUPS

VICTORIA WILLING WORKERS

CARRYING PLACE — Mrs. Hubert Townsend was "at home" to the members of the Victoria Willing Worker group for their January meeting recently. Mrs. Wetherall, president opened the meeting, and conducted the business.

A report on relief work done at the Christmas season was given, and plans were made for 1960 meetings. Mrs. Peter Moran invited the February meeting to be held at her new home. A "games night" on March 17 for the community will be held at the Townsend home. Several "thank you" cards were read.

Mrs. Crawford Moon hostess had charge of the program, which was opened by singing, followed by a hymn, prayer and readings on the Scripture with which members assisted.

With the help of the Rev. McLeod operating the projector, Mrs. Waterhouse showed pictures of her holiday in California, where she spent the month of December with her daughter, Mrs. Bernard Webb and Mr. Webb.

The pictures were beautiful and took the group to many places of interest, including Disneyland.

All appreciated Mrs. Waterhouse showing her slides, and a social time was enjoyed. Thanks were expressed to Mr. and Mrs. Townsend for a pleasant evening.

ST. JAMES' C.W.I.

STIRLING — The January meeting of the Catholic Women's League was held recently at the home of Mrs. Ray Burley. The meeting was opened by the director.

The president expressed thanks to Mrs. Stan Meeks for her work and donations on behalf of the children of the parish.

Mrs. LaChappelle and Mrs. Burley attended an executive meeting in Kingston on Jan. 11. Members were asked to collect items of used clothing for the missions. Mrs. Gerald Kerby will again look after the parish correspondence. The collection of items containing gold has been completed. This proceeds will be sent to the Organization for Development and Peace.

Father McCarvey explained the ecumenical hour of prayer, planned for Tuesday, Jan. 31, in St. Paul's United Church, in conjunction with the World Council of Churches. Mrs. Ray Burley gave a reading.

The meeting closed with prayer and refreshments, which were served by Mrs. Burley and Mrs. H. Baker.

ST. PAUL'S GUILD

MARMORA — The annual meeting of the Ladies' Guild of St. Paul's Anglican Church, Marmora, was held at the rectory with retiring president, Mrs. R. K. Frost, conducting a short business period. After thanking members for the loyal support given during her term of office, Mrs. Frost turned the meeting over to Rev. David Saunders for the election of officers.

New executive for this year is as follows: president, Mrs. W. D. Lavender; past president, Mrs. Frost; vice-president, Mrs. Clarence McCoy; treasurer, Mrs. Earl Naylor; secretary, Mrs. Don Robertson. Mrs. R. K. Rosser was re-appointed card convener, Mrs. Irene Snell and Mrs. Frost, visiting committee. Mrs. David Saunders will act as temporary representative to the New Century Club.

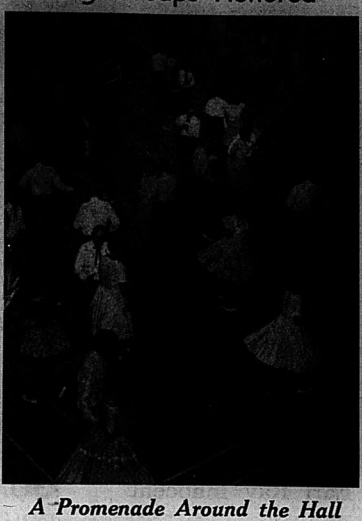
Beginning Feb. 1, the Guild will be known as the A.C.W., Anglican Church Women.

A congregational potluck supper will take place on Jan. 23 before the annual vestry meeting. The Guild will cater to a curling bonspiel dinner on Jan. 24. The Feb. meeting will be held at the home of Mrs. Clayton Cronkright.

Mrs. Saunders served refreshments during a social hour.

Honored Guests Pause

Bea and Bob Williamson pause a moment between square dance sets at an evening's entertainment held in their honor at Centennial Secondary School on Saturday evening. The couple introduced modern square dancing to Belleville on Jan. 21, 1961.



Some 400 present and former square dancers gathered at Centennial Secondary School on Saturday evening to honor Bob and Bea Williamson who introduced modern square dancing to Belleville on Jan. 21, 1961.

The first square dance executive was formed Feb. 25, 1961 with Bea and Bob Williamson as president, which office they held until May of 1962. In April of 1961, the first square dance club was formed numbering almost five sets. Now there are six active clubs numbering some 250 adults and approximately 200 children, all actively participating in weekly programs.

They were the prime movers behind the children's square dance activity; also the single adult group which is a unique activity in the square dance field as this recreation is primarily of necessity, a couple's activity. The couple has also been instrumental in bringing to Belleville some of the biggest names in the field of professional square dance callers and have been foremost in training and encouraging a number of local callers.

During the social evening Loree Williams of the Belleville Recreation Commission presented certificates of merit to Mr. and Mrs. Williamson in recognition of their contributions to the field of community recreation. Along this line the couple have travelled extensively attending square dance festivities and camps in their efforts to bring the best in modern square dancing to this area.

Chairman of the event Dick Brettingham also paid tribute to the couple for their sincere interest, patience, understanding and leadership during their years of being the leading and organizing modern square dancing in Belleville and district.

A Promenade Around the Hall

A gala event was held at Centennial Secondary School on Saturday evening when some 400 square dancers gathered to honor Bea and Bob Williamson for their contribution to modern square dancing in this community. A portion of the large gathering present to honor the Williamsons is seen in action enjoying one of the many dances throughout the evening.

Diocesan Committee Plans Year

MARMORA — At a diocesan committee meeting of the Canadian Catholic Organization for Development and Peace held at the home of his Grace, Archbishop J. L. Wilhelm, Johnston Street, Kingston, on Saturday, plans were made for the program for 1961.

The Canadian Catholic Organization for Development and Peace is an organization created by the bishops of Canada to construct measures of positive, practical help in underdeveloped areas of the world. Its aims is to form Canadian Catholics of the the problems of underdeveloped and to stir them to the urgency of helping. It will strive to get the greatest possible number of people in organizations to undertake a continuing crusade of "development-aid" i.e., helping people to help themselves.

Continuing as chairman of the organization for the coming year will be Mrs. Herbert Brown, R.R. 1, Belleville. Mrs. Breen O'Connor of Marmora was appointed secretary, and Herbert Brown of Belleville is treasurer. Other members of the committee are: his Grace, Archbishop Wilhelm, Kingston; Mrs. Pegeen O'Connor, Kingston, Mrs. Thomas Kelly, Stoco, Mr. Denis Carrighar, Marmora, Mr. Wilfred Wilkinson, Trenton, and Mr. Frank Dominick Kingston.

Tom Johnston from the head office in Montreal plans to meet with this committee at Nicholson College in Belleville on Feb. 5 to further discuss the program of the organization.

Theme for the Share-Lent 1960 program to be stressed for Lent is "They Want to Change with your Help" and literature on this project will be sent by the chairman to all parishes in the diocese.

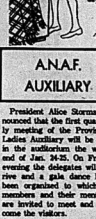
SCHOOLGIRL OUTFIT—This elegant outfit for seven-to-ten-year-olds is in British wool cloth. Navy full-length cape with matching dress trimmed with navy and white dogtooth check. By Sally Pigtails, of London.



Near Nudity Fashions Are Shown

ROME (AP) — Near nudity has become the cliche of spring-summer Italian fashion shows but today Antonelli added new shock-transparent dresses.

To top that, Antonelli's designer, Sergio Maha, designed the dresses with tongue in cheek. They were demurely styled; long sleeved high necked and might have been worn by a Victorian Jane Eyre. They were sheer but they had had plenty of petticoats underneath.

Not only was there no petticoats there was nothing except bare living flesh.

The collection began with a snappy group of beach costumes in natural-colored linen or crunchy silk. Tightly belted brown-brief jackets were teamed with long skirts of flared panels. The pants were sometimes topped by bandeau - behind mini - skirts. Big-brimmed bush hats in rice straw completed the look.

A.N.A.F. AUXILIARY

President Alice Storms announced that the first quarterly meeting of the Provincial Ladies Auxiliary will be held in the auditorium the week-end of Jan. 24-25. On Friday evening the delegates will arrive and a gala dance is a been organized to which all members and their friends are invited to meet and welcome the visitors.

The meeting will start at 2.00 p.m. Saturday Jan. 25. In the evening there will be a social get-together and that talented group of ladies from the local unit will supply more members of their well-known brand of entertainment guaranteed to have the audience rolling in the aisles. there will be some surprises also so do not miss it.

All members are urged to attend both days and make it a memorable and enjoyable interlude for the visitors.

U.C.W. Meeting

ST. ANDREW'S U.C.W.

MARMORA — A joint meeting of all groups of the U.C.W. of St. Andrew's United Church, Marmora, was held in the church hall on Tuesday evening, with Mrs. Borden Bell, president, conducting the business.

The following decisions were made by members: that the U.C.W. cater for a dinner for 70 ministers of the Belleville Presbytery on Feb. 13; that the U.C.W. cater for a lunch following a travelogue of tours taken by Franklin Bus Line being shown in the church hall on Feb. 13 by Franklin Smith, and that a donation be sent to the Five Oaks Training School for United Church laymen.

Devotional period was led by Mrs. Ray Darrah and Mrs. Doug Vineff. Special monthly collection was taken for the members' adopted Korean boy.

Members were asked to attend the World Day of Prayer service to be held on March 7 of the Pentecostal Church, Marmora.

50,000 Au Pair Girls in European Countries

STRASBOURG, France (Reuters) — The Council of Europe is considering proposals which, if passed, will make life considerably more secure for 50,000 au pair girls working in Europe.

One of the council's first aims will be to define clearly the position of these girls, who leave their own country to live and work for a family in a foreign country.

The council social committee has proposed a definition of their role as: "The status of being an pair consists of the temporary placing of a young foreigner with a family in exchange for certain allowances with the aim of improving that person's knowledge of languages and, eventually, professional status, and generally to improve herself culturally through a better knowledge of the country she is staying in."

The shift is clearly away from housework and the emphasis put on the cultural aspect of being an au pair.

At present, there are about 50,000 au pair girls in European countries, mostly between 18 and 25 years old. About half are students, and the rest, mainly secretaries and office employees.

Nearly three-quarters of the total number of au pair girls in Europe are over 21, and come mainly from France, West Germany and Switzerland.

Britain and France are the most popular choices of the girls followed by West Germany. Each year, Britain receives 16,000 au pairs, and, in any one year, there are 25,000 in the country.

The need for a European convention on the status of the girls is highlighted by the fact that France is the only country with legislation to protect the girls.

A young girl arriving in either Britain or West Germany has to report to a local police station, but that is all.

Since 1953, the au pair girl working in France has been under the protection of the ministry of works, she must have a permit to stay in the country, and it is only granted on condition that a written contract is drawn up between the girl and the family she is staying with.

The French family must register the girl for social security and pay her contributions.

The written contract between the girl and her adopted family safeguards her from work of an ordinary domestic—washing dishes is allowed, but scrubbing floors is prohibited.

The proposed convention will make a contract obligatory. The duties of the young girl will be written down by the family, after agreement on her living and working conditions.

Ann Landers
Wife Is Full Of Little Surprises

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Tell "Black Lace Trouble," the woman whose husband asked her to serve him breakfast in the baby-doll outfit he brought from Atlantic City, that she should be thankful she can still interest him.

When I read about people like that, I count my blessings. Peggy and I just celebrated our 25th wedding anniversary, and we are still as excited about each other as we were the day we married.

I never know what I'll find when I come home to dinner. One night Peggy will greet me at the door wearing a bikini, the next night it could be a floor length evening gown, or pantie and bra. Tonight she was topless. Heaven knows what tomorrow will bring. Peggy is so full of little surprises life never gets dull around our house. I'm one of the luckiest fellows and I know it.

I'd like to surprise Peggy with this letter in the paper. Be a pal, Ann. She reads you every day. — NED.

* * *

DEAR NED: Well, you two do love surprises, don't you? How nice! Please don't surprise Peggy by bringing home an old school chum for dinner, Bub. He might get the surprise of his life!

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: My favorite subject is Latin. When I tell this to my friends, they look at me as if I am crazy. Just today somebody said, "I wouldn't take Latin for all the money in the world. It's a dead language." I must admit I've forgotten most of what I learned in Latin, the way they do in Spanish or French, but Latin helps people understand all languages. For example, I understand English a lot better because I took Latin. In the last two years my vocabulary has increased tremendously.

Kids don't pay much attention to what I say, but they listen to Ann Landers, so please say something good about Latin. Thank you. — A LATIN LOVER.

* * *

DEAR LOVER: Your letter hit me where it hurt. If I could live my high school years over, the one thing I would do differently would be to take Latin. I ducked it because I, too, thought it was a dead language, and I have regretted it ever since.

* * *

DEAR ANN LANDERS: Our 13-year-old daughter is adopted. Lynn knows she was adopted. Last week I read your advice 10 years ago and told her. What I need to know now is this: People keep mentioning that fact (and often in her presence) that Lynn is getting to look more like her dad every day.

Should one of say, "Lynn is an adopted child and we are so delighted that she looks like Harry?" Or should nothing be said?" — CHATTANOOGA.

* * *

DEAR CHAT: Play it by ear. There may be times when you will want to volunteer the information, other times you might want to say nothing.

And incidentally, isn't it a happy coincidence that so many adopted children do grow up to resemble their adoptive parents?

CHURCH GROUPS

ST. ANDREW'S WMS

The January meeting of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Women's Missionary Society was held in the Sunday School auditorium and was preceded by a potluck luncheon.

The president, Miss L. Burnside, welcomed the members and guests; also a visitor, Mrs. A. Bell, a former member, now residing in Wallaceton.

Following the luncheon, Mrs. H. Elvidge, introduced the guest speaker, Rev. A. L. Sutherland, who chose as the theme for the first part of his address the word 'Belief.'

Mr. Sutherland gave several interpretations of the meaning of "Belief." This was followed by a talk on the church at work, illustrated by slides showing all phases of church government.

Mrs. G. Bennett, on behalf of all present expressed thanks to the speaker for his enlightening address.

During the business period reports were given by the secretaries of the various departments. In the absence of Mrs. E. Shier the minutes were read by Mrs. W. Clendenan.

A new year's message from Mrs. M. Shaw, Presbyterial secretary of afternoon groups was read, also notes of appreciation. It was decided to hold a Valentine Tea, with Mrs. E. Pigeon and Mrs. Clendenon as convenors.

The president welcomed members of the evening auxiliary who have now joined the afternoon group.

Mrs. E. Post Heads Senior Citizens Group

MARMORA — Due to inclement weather, the monthly meeting of Marmora Senior Citizens Organization was postponed.

The new executive is as follows: president, Mrs. Eva Post; past president, Mrs. Ethel Nobes; 1st vice-pres. Mrs. Florence Fluke; treasurer, Mrs. Myrtle McFaul; secretary, Mrs. Dan Bailey; trustees, Mrs. R. E. Bonter, Mrs. Percy Gordon, Mrs. Harold Gunter; sewing convenor, Mrs. Percy Gordon, telephone convener, Mrs. M. A. Jones, cards, gifts and visiting sick, Mrs. Ann Winters.

The meeting, with 23 present, including five new members, was called to order by the new president, Mrs. Post.

Members were invited to use the club room every Wednesday afternoon from 2 - 4 p.m. One member of the organization will be in attendance. Mr. James Ashford on Jan. 8, and Mrs. Frank Sweet on Jan. 29.

Mrs. Gordon was appointed to represent the club on the Marmora New Century Club for the planning and making of quilts.

A birthday party to celebrate the 6th anniversary of the organization will be held in the form of a potluck dinner on Feb. 5. Members are to make and wear a Valentine Hat, and a prize will be given for the best hat.

Mrs. Bonter gave a reading pertaining to the new year and Mr. Gunter gave a humorous reading.

Lunch was served by Mrs. Sweet, Mrs. Nobes and Mrs. Seymour Henry.

Points for Parents

By MARY BRYSON

Jim: "The minute I come in the house, my mother starts fussing at me about my grades, my clothes or the way I wear my hair. She really thinks I'm a bum. My mother always criticizes me, too."

Mother: "Hi, Jim, did you have a good day? How did the school election turn out? We're going to have your favorite meat loaf for dinner. There's some cookies in the oven. They'll be baked in a few minutes."

Home should be a pleasant sanctuary for a teen-ager, a place where he feels accepted, loved and respected. There are plenty of other ways to welcome him home than with criticism or disapproving comments.

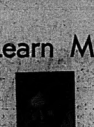
Youngsters Can Learn Money Management

By DORIS CLARK

"Mummy, can I have a dime for a coke?" Mother, why can't I have an allowance of my own? Sandy does."

What you do about handling Jackie or Sally cash is going to make a lot. Will your young ones learn that money is something to be used as a tool or resource, for living — or will they come to mistake money as a goal in itself?



It takes experience, years and years of it, to put money in its place; to get the best satisfaction from its use. And the best time to begin is in early childhood.

An allowance, even a small one, can help to learn to manage. When this is used up, nothing more is forthcoming until next allowance day. (Could be it hurts you more than it does him!)

Some fine tips about all this are wrapped up in a new booklet on Money Management. Packed full of ideas for parents who want Jackie and Sally to view the coin of the realm realistically. Details on request.

Dear Doris: For quite some time I have desired someone to write to; someone different in another part of the country. I have never told anyone of this desire for they might think I was crazy. You see, I have a full life. So, why do I want a pen pal?

Bette Clark

I think it's because I have the feeling that you can never have enough friends. Personally, of all the people I call friends, I can't think of anyone that I could really talk to.

I consider my wife to be the best thing that's happened to me in my life and always will, but the happiest home life in the world can become a routine, and result in being taken for granted as well as taking others for granted. And these are the times I would like to sit down and write a letter or maybe receive one.

To get to the point, could you send me any information about such clubs in both Canada and the U.S.A.? Also, could you let me in on the chances for a married man obtaining a pen pal? I'm interested in writing to both a male and female (if I can think of that much to say). — Penned Up.

Dear Penned Up: Take pen in hand, by all means. We need ways to express ourselves, and often do it better on paper.

The pen pal list is on its way. You will see that some clubs request the applicant to mention special interests, age and sex of correspondent desired. Better sound out your wife re asking for a lady pen pal. Would you be thinking of the motherly type?

(Readers: My leaflet, "How to Get More Mail," lists several pen pals clubs, and may be had for 10 cents and a six-cent - stamped, self-addressed envelope.)

Dear Doris: For two years he was crazy about me and I learned to love him a great deal. I don't know how it ever got into the habit of phoning him but, I do and we have for the last year or so. Doris, whenever we talk he always says well I've got to go and he acts as if he hates me.

Things are going so terrible; I know and he knows I'd do anything to make him happy. But he just never shows his affection for me, and here I am being so sweet and adoring, sometimes I don't know what's wrong with me for I think I deserve a little affection now and then. Lonely and Depressed.

Dear L. and D.: You are adoring and he should be adorable! I've got news for you. It takes solid love and a certain maturity to be able to take adoration without letting it throw one. If he seems to be hating you I wonder that he keeps his dates at all.

Ther's nothing for it but a complete right - about - face. Can you see yourself sweetly pushing him to the altar, phoning him when he doesn't come home from work, answering his hate with love for the rest of your life?

If you have no will power, disconnect the telephone. Keep your over-sweet looks and words to yourself if and when he turns up. Turn the tables or start a new game with somebody else.

Kitchen Tested Recipes
Blenders Are Not Beaters

By MARY MOORE

Nodding, I read the following excerpt from Mrs. W. B.'s letter:

"I received a blender. . . . cannot get the cream to whip fine. They just stuck to the side. . . book does not give any directions. . . cream in the blender are heavy. So far the only good thing I have done with it is breadcrumbs. — Mrs. W. B."

Too many blender buyers expect faster results from them. Keep your blenders handy on the counter and stop and think: "Will my blender chop this?"

I have sent several former releases to Mrs. W. B. but went to work on a Sunday afternoon using my blender for two items on our dinner menu: Cream of Spinach Soup and W G N (wheat germ and nut) Muffins. So today in our cooking lesson I am giving blender owners two ways to put their blender to good use.

BRIGHT GREEN CREAM OF SPINACH SOUP (blender serves 6)

one 10-oz. package spinach
3 cups milk
1 chicken Ono cube
4¼ tablespoons butter
3 tablespoons flour
¼ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon M.S.G.

Heat milk in double boiler with Ono cube. Wash and cook spinach covered 3 minutes in water that clings to leaves only. Turn it once during this 3-minute period. Cool a little then have all into blender goblet, pushing mass down against bladee and buss until pureed. You must have liquid down in well of goblet to start pureeing action. Add puree to hot milk in double boiler. Rinse out blender goblet with some of the milk. Melt the butter and blend in flour, salt and M.S.G. Stir into hot milk and spinach mixture in double boiler until slightly thickened and serve. This is very bright green and delicate and could be garnished with a little whipped cream if desired.

W G N MUFFINS (blender: wheat germ and nut)

2 cups sifted all-purpose flour
1 tablespoon baking powder
½ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon sugar
2 tablespoons skim milk powder
¼ cup wheat germ
½ cup finely chopped nuts (in blender)
1 egg
one-third cup salad oil
¾ cup water (1 cup less 2 tablespoons)
½ teaspoon vanilla

Measure walnuts then buzz in blender. Sift sifted flour into bowl with baking powder, salt, sugar and skim milk powder. Remove sifter and add wheat germ and nuts. Make depression in centre and add all remaining ingredients and stir to barely mix. Spoon into buttered 2½" muffin tins filling ⅔ full and bake at 400 deg. Fahr. about 20 minutes but be sure to test one in about 16 or 17 minutes to see if they are baking more quickly. A lovely new muffin for our hot bread fanciers.

Dear L. and D.: You are adoring and he should be adorable! I've got news for you. It takes solid love and a certain maturity to be able to take adoration without letting it throw one. If he seems to be hating you I wonder that he keeps his dates at all.

Ther's nothing for it but a complete right - about - face. Can you see yourself sweetly pushing him to the altar, phoning him when he doesn't come home from work, answering his hate with love for the rest of your life?

If you have no will power, disconnect the telephone. Keep your over-sweet looks and words to yourself if and when he turns up. Turn the tables or start a new game with somebody else.

Millions Lost

Passion for Road Show Attractions in Movies Is Cooling

HOLLYWOOD (AP) — A glance at the movie release schedule for 1969 indicates that the film companies' passion for roadshow attractions is cooling.

The reserved-seat became popular with movie fans after the historic accomplishment of The Sound of Music, which pushed through the $100,000,000 barrier during its sensational three-year run. That prompted the companies to seek other attractions that could be shown at advanced prices in a single theatre for long periods.

But it wasn't that easy. No other film has come along to combine the magic elements of Sound of Music, and millions have been lost in trying. The economic reality: Though you can earn fantastic profits on a roadshow, you can also lose enormously, because of the high cost of producing and exhibiting such films.

Only about one in three roadshows appears to score, and there are apparently no rules for success. It used to be that the presence of Julie Andrews ensured a hit—witness Sound of Music, Hawaii, Thoroughly Modern Millie. But even she is fallible, as demonstrated by the disappointing returns for Star!

Big names and rave reviews aren't necessary. The no-name 2001: A Space Odyssey drew many poor reviews, yet it has caught on with the young generation. But the all-star Shoes of the Fisherman is doing only fair business.

The Graduate, Bonnie and Clyde, Rosemary's Baby and The Odd Couple proved that pictures don't have to be roadshows to attract monumental grosses. In fact, such hits consolidated better lovemaking because of lower cost and faster pay-off.

Twentieth Century-Fox continues to place faith in the roadshow. And with good reason. The company has had the most profitable ones. Coming up for 1969 is Justine, based on Lawrence Durell's novels. Hello, Dolly! is also a hopeful entry, provided an arrangement can be worked out with David Merrick, who controls the release date.

Paramount, currently prospering with Romeo and Juliet, has two big musicals ready for 1969: Paint our Wagon, and Darling Lili. Alas, the Harold Robbins saga, The Adventurers.

Warner Brothers has high hopes for the 70-star Mackennan of Chaillot. The new year may also bring the made-in-Russia Tchaikovsky, then again, maybe not.

United Artists is bringing out two made-in-Europe roadshows: Stanley Kramer's The Secret of Santa Vittoria and the war film, The Battle of Britain.

Columbia is offering a large cast western McKenna's Gold and a space pic, Marooned. Universal has a Shirley MacLaine musical, Sweet Charity, and the all-star Airport. Even the new network-backed companies are getting into the act: CBS Films is sponsoring The Royal Hunt of the Sun.

MGM, prospering once more with Gone with the Wind, hopes that Ben Hur will have similar success on its re-issue this year.

A Possible Cast

Kaye Bain and a possible cast read over the script to the "Two Sophisticates" — a play which will be presented by the newly rejuvenated Ontario Theatre Company. The company folded last year due to lack of rehearsal facilities but now have conquered this problem and will be Trenton's only operating theatre group.

Russia Oks UN Talks On Mideast

From Reuters-AP

Russia today agreed to a French proposal for a meeting of UN Security Council representatives of the Big Four powers to discuss the Middle East crisis.

Leonid Zamyatin, chief foreign ministry press spokesman, announced the agreement without comment in answer to a question at a Moscow news conference.

Observers noted that the French proposal, made in various capitals last week, appeared to correspond closely to the Kremlin's current efforts to achieve a Middle East settlement on the basis of a 1967 UN Security Council resolution.

Zamyatin also expressed approval of the French decision to embargo arms supplies to Israel because it "could have a favorable effect towards a political settlement in the Middle East."

In the diplomatic effort to resolve the Arab-Israeli conflict, Egyptian Foreign Minister Mahmoud Riad summoned the French and Soviet ambassadors to Cairo Sunday to tell them the government considers that the U.S. reply to the Soviet proposal for a Middle East settlement had a "completely pro-Israeli and misleading tone."

Stranglehold on Consols

Trenton Rink Takes Out Three

STAFF — A rink of George Peters, Vince Gallipeau, E. Jesse with Bom McInnes as skip from the CFB club, Trenton, appear to have a stranglehold on the Consols playoffs now being played at the Quinte Curling Club. The CFB rink earned a bye into the finals by knocking off three opponents on Sunday, when eight clubs competed to go into the Provincial playdowns. It was a double knockout draw with a rink of 12—Colborne (S. Walsh, J. Armstrong, G. Delaney, E. Walsh).

SECOND ROUND

Picton 9, Napanee 6—Picton (S. Napanee, G. Wager, H. Ostrander, J. Trenton, A. Patterson, skip).

THIRD ROUND

Picton 7, Fowell 10—CFB (J. Fowell, G. Hogan, skip 6—Napanee (S. Wager, H. Ostrander, skip 5.

Trenton 9, Hogan 10—Belleville, G. Pinder skip 6.

The CFB rink had no trouble in winning their three games. Each one was accomplished by a high score and some of the competitors the closed out before the final end. The Belleville rink, skipped by Gordon Pinder, lost their first match to Napanee, won the second from Cobourg but was eliminated in the night game by Trenton.

This morning Trentos and Napanee will square off for the right to meet Picton in the afternoon game and the winner of that match will meet the CFB rink in the final game tonight. Bill Gault, OCA convener is handling the draw and the Women's section of the club is supplying refreshments in sandwiches and coffee for the contestants.

A large gallery followed the play throughout the day. The results:

League Leaders

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Centre Phil Esposito of Boston Bruins is pulling away from Bobby Hull of Chicago Black Hawks in the National Hockey League's individual scoring race.

Esposito picked up two goals and two assists in weekend action while Hull was held scoreless.

The four points gave Esposito 66 on 29 goals and 37 assists. Hull is four back, with 62 points on 30 goals and 32 assists.

Gordie Howe of Detroit Red Wings, who scored his 21st goal of the season during the weekend, its third with 58 points. In fourth place is Stan Mikita of Chicago with 56.

Smothers Review '68 in 4 Minutes

NEW YORK (AP) — The Smothers Brothers Comedy Hour found a creative film editor who put on film a lot of pictures, maps, documents, paintings and such, then ran it fast and succeeded in sketching 200 years of American history in 2½ minutes.

The film was such a hit that the Brothers ran it twice, then persuaded their man to tackle 1968 in the same fashion. He did —and it took him four minutes to scurry through the highlights of a single year.

The film was run Sunday night and while it seemed to be slightly loaded on the editorial side—it slowed down, for instance, at Chicago at convention time—it still added up to television's brightest yearend boondoggle.

NBC's latest world premiere feature, a movie-length drama broadcast Saturday night, not only took considerable liberty with courtroom procedure in its murder trial, but committed the dramatic sin of not having one admirable character among the leading players.

Trial Run, like so many of these two-hour shows made for television, rambled casually, took short side trips away from the main plot and in general had all the earmarks of a one-hour television show padded to fill another 60 minutes.

James Franciscus, remembered as the idealistic teacher of Mr. Novack, played a hard-nosed, short-fused young lawyer so ambitious that he was unscrupulous in his methods and faithless to his friends. The head of his law firm was played by Leslie Nielsen as a brusque, driving egocentric.

Then there was Janice Rule, again cast as a neurotic—this time the bossy, wanton wife of the boss. Diane Baker played the senior lawyer's private secretary without much warmth or conviction.

The author never seemed able to decide whether he was talking about the young man's handling of a murder trial involving a man who had killed his faithless wife or whether it was a story about the machinations in the big, high-powered law office.

Breathe easier, patriots. The Russians are coming, but not as fast as they might have hoped.

In the wake of their Canadian tour hoohah — the cancellation, reinstatement, misread Montreal game, fiasco at the pros for not playing them — the Soviets breezed into Maple Leaf Gardens last night as if nothing had happened, overcame a 2-1 third-period deficit and the jeers of 15,000 spectators, and plodded into their dressing room with a 4-2 win under their red suspenders.

The Canadian Nationals?

Well, they looked just like everyone in Smythe Stadium knew they would — neat, but herringboned (11 rookies in the lineup) when stacked up against the bulkier, more persistent Soviets.

Everything about a Russian hockey game is eccentric, much of it psychological warfare, I'm sure.

First there's the inevitable rifling of press and patrons with the announcement that there will be 13 sundry add'or personnel changes in the Soviet lineup. And with five-syllabled Balkan manickers, one's program begins to take on the appearance of a knotted-crosses game of two years' duration.

Then, after standing through the strains of "O Canada," the Gardens-goers and tube-viewers at home have to endure the Russian anthem, which lasts about 10 seconds less than Tchaikovsky's Fifth Symphony.

But those fellas can play hockey, yes they can.

Where the Canadians made every play — even when swarming around goalie Victor Zlager — look scrambly, the Soviet attacks had all the well-oiled, methodical precision of a Russian tank.

There were some experts up in the east-end Blues to analyze that attack, many of them for the first time in 10 years.

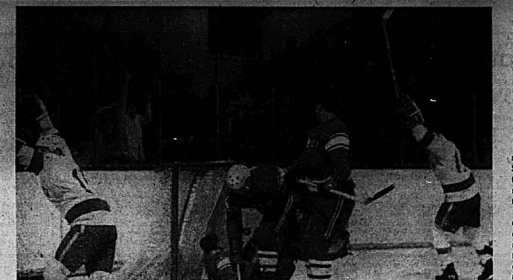
A Hot Stove reunion of the Belleville McFarlands brought a dozen or so of the Macs to the Gardens to see what had happened to Soviet hockey since the dramatic World Championships of 1959.

Sitting beside me, the sparkplug of the McFarlands was watching the Russians with the keenness of someone who's "been where it's at."

And like Hilderbrand had the Russian style pegged.

According to the popular McFarland playing-coach, the Soviet strength — a stunning passing game — also holds the key to their weakness . . . "the critical ingredient that denies them the successful recipe for an NHL-calibre team.

"See, there they go again," nudged Ike. "That spot-passing. They don't think out on the ice — they just throw that puck into the slot, and someone is supposed to be there.



"They make a lot of blind passes, but don't often cut in on goal like a Keon or Richard. This pattern play stuff just wouldn't work against an NHL club."

Meanwhile, the Russians are making hay with it against the world's best amateurs.

The Aftermath

This was the scene during the Olympics in Mexico when Canadian rower John Richardson collapsed and needed the oxygen mask after a heat. Arthur Richardson, his father, says the 25-year-old athlete was a sick man when he was allowed to row in the Games. (Story on Page 10.) (CP Photo)

Cossacks In Comeback

TORONTO (CP) — The Russian bear had another laugh Sunday night as the Soviet national team defeated Canada's rookie-infested national hockey team.

The Soviets, who earlier withdrew from an eight-game tour of Canada and then did not reach Montreal in time for the first game after reconsidering, defeated Canada 4-2 with three goals in the final 10 minutes at Maple Leaf Gardens before 15,574 fans.

The Russians showed little concern during the first 50 minutes of the contest, while the Canadians harassed them with man-to-man coverage and took a 2-1 lead on goals by Derek Holmes and Chuck Lefley.

Meanwhile, the Russians, attempting to break the pass coverage by playing one man far up the ice, got a goal from veteran Vyacheslav Starshinov in the second period while Valeri Kharlamov, Anatoli Makrushyn and Vladimir Betrov scored in the third.

Betrov gained credit for the fourth Russian goal that actually was a clearing pass by Canadian defenceman Terry O'Malley that bounced in off team-mate Fran Huck.

Head coach Jackie McLeod of Canada's team was unhappy about the loss, but found at least two bright spots.

Russia 4 Canada 2

He lauded rookie Lefley and said the team "played well out there."

But he said his club was not getting back fast enough on the Soviet rushes.

"They were late a couple of times and it cost us," he said.

"Our defence was loafing on the tying goal. The Russians lobbed in the puck and our defence didn't go hard for it. When they saw Kharalamov coming, it was too late."

Kharalamov broke straight down the centre of the ice, catching the defence off balance and raced from the Russian blueline to the Canadian goal with Ken Stephanson at his heels.

"Our kids were very nervous and tense," McLeod said.

"This led them to hold the puck a little too long in some cases before passing or shooting. We had 11 rookies in the lineup who have never played in international competition."

The Canadian attack employed fierce bodychecking and a shadow coverage to keep the Russians off balance in the first period, while Wayne Stephenson stood up standout goaltending to hold the Soviets at bay on their few good opportunities.

Holmes scored the first goal of the game at 16:09 of the first period, just 11 seconds after Canada put its power play into action.

The Russians began to break away from Canada's close checking in the second period and took advantage of shaky clearing to set up Starshinov's goal that tied the game 1-1.

Alexander Akulov started the scoring play by slapping down a clearing pass just inside the Canadian blueline and feeding the puck to Anatoli Mokovolov, whose shot was blocked by Stephenson before Starshinov batted it into the open side of the goal.

The Canadians went back to a man-to-man coverage early in the third period and Lefley scored with a hard shot from just inside the blueline at 9:17 to give Canada a 2-1 lead.

Both teams left after the game for the second contest in Vancouver Tuesday night.

Minnesota Losing Spiral Costs Muckler Job

By SCOTT BUTTON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

When Wren Blair turned over the job of coaching Minnesota North Stars to John Muckler last Nov. 6, the National Hockey League team was doing poorly.

Since then, the club has done even worse. So, it was decided Sunday to give the job back to Blair, the team's general manager, and to send Muckler on a two-week vacation before giving him unspecified duties.

Minnesota president Walter Bush announced the personnel shift only a few hours after the North Stars lost 3-1 to St. Louis Blues to extend their winless streak to 14 games and their losing streak to eight.

The North Stars had a record of 3-6-1 when Blair summoned Muckler from Memphis of the Central Hockey League to take over. The North Stars have won only six out of 35 under Muckler.

Boston Bruins, on the other hand, Sunday downed Toronto Maple Leafs 5-3 to stretch their undefeated streak to 11 games.

In other games Sunday, Philadelphia Flyers defeated Detroit 3-1 to halt the Red Wings' unbeaten string at seven games and Oakland Seals trounced Pittsburgh Penguins 6-3.

Saturday, Boston took Philadelphia 5-3, Montreal Canadiens downed Chicago Black Hawks 3-1, Los Angeles Kings blanked Pittsburgh 4-0, Detroit and Toronto played to a 1-1 tie and New York Rangers and St. Louis fought to a 2-2 stalemate.

Ab McDonald scored two goals for St. Louis Sunday and Ron Schock had the other. Jean-Paul Parise tallied for the North Stars.

A crowd of only 3,436 at Oakpolis saw St. Louis maintain its 17-point lead in the Western Division over runner-up Oakland The loss left Minnesota in fifth place, two points behind Pittsburgh and eight points out of fourth.

Aided by a goal and an assist from Phil Esposito, the Bruins extended their first-place margin in the Eastern Division to four points over idle Montreal.

The two points gave Esposito 66 for the season—29 goals and 37 assists—and put him four points ahead of runner-up Bobby Hull of Chicago in the scoring race.

Bobby Orr, Fred Stanfield, Ed Westfall and Ron Murphy scored the other Boston goals. Paul Henderson picked up two goals for Toronto and Bill Sutherland one before a Boston crowd of 14,659.

The Bruins, beaten only once in the last 18 games, have compiled their longest undefeated streak since they last won the Stanley Cup in the 1940-41 season. That year they set the NHL record of 23 straight games without a defeat—15 wins and eight ties.

A 31-year-old rookie, defenceman Dick Cherry, scored his first NHL goal and veteran forward Jean-Guy Gendron tallied twice to lead Philadelphia to its win.

Gordie Howe scored the only Detroit goal, his 21st of the season, before a Philadelphia turnout of 13,946.

Philadelphia defenceman Ed Van Impe, who missed Saturday's game because of an ailing hip, returned to action and is expected to be ready for Tuesday night's all-star game at Montreal.

Billy Hicke and Mike Laughton scored two goals each for Oakland while single goals came from Carol Vadnais and Norm Ferguson. Pittsburgh scorers were Billy Dea, Gene Ubriaco and Paul Andrea.

A crowd of only 3,43 fast Oakland saw the Seals outshoot the Penguins 38-23 to break a tie with Los Angeles for second place in the Western Division.

Edge Aces 4-3

Hornets Take Lead With Overtime Verdict

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

For the first time since the Ontario Hockey Association Senior series season opened last October, the eight-team group has a new leader, compliments of the seventh-place Belleville Mo-Hawks.

The Mo-Hawks forced a 3-3 tie with Barrie Flyers Sunday and dropped them one point back of Galt Hornets, who nipped Kingston Aces 4-3 in Kingston Saturday.

In the only other Sunday game, Oakville Oaks ran their home ice record to 11 wins in 12 starts by bouncing Collingwood Kings 8-2.

Before a small crowd of 840 at Barrie, Mo-Hawks Lorne O'Donnell's second goal of the game with less than four minutes to play, blocked the Flyers' bid to keep the league lead.

The Mo-Hawks also managed to gain ground in their bid for the sixth and final playoff spot. They now trail Kingston by six points.

Centre Jon Weeks led the Flyers with two goals and Dave Ferguson scored once. Ralph Plane scored the other Belleville goal.

At Kingston, the Hornets needed overtime to grab their first-place football. Ron Smith scored the winning goal after one minute and 42 seconds of overtime play. Howie Dietrich, with two, and defenceman John Nickerson also tallied for Galt. Rick Smith, Bob Olajos and Syl Apps, Jr., replied for the Aces.

Before a crowd of 1,087 at Oakville, the Oaks broke out with five third-period goals against Collingwood to edge within a single point of the Kings and the idle Orillia Terriers, who share third place.

Terry Cook and Bob Pole paced the Oaks with two goals each. Pete Bettiol, Bryan Pryce, Terry Holmes and Bob Hawkins added the others.

Amateur-Sports Federation Urges Federal Boxing Aid

OTTAWA (CP)—The Canadian Amateur Sports Federation has given a boost to a campaign to restore amateur boxing to favor in the eyes of the federal government.

At the end of its two-day annual meeting, the association voted Sunday to back the campaign and urged government support. There was no opposition, but one abstention was recorded.

Jerry Shears of Montreal, former Dominion lightweight champion who was recently elected president of the Canadian Amateur Boxing Association, said the decision "makes boxing a sport again."

The vote followed a report that federal sports advisers are favoring a partial reversal of the decision two years ago to cut off federal grants for boxing.

Tom Bedecki, a member of the fitness and amateur sport directorate, told the federation the national advisory council on fitness and amateur sport has put a recommendation to this effect before Health Minister John Munro.

Mr. Bedecki said outside the meeting that the council now is ready to support training, supervision and administrative aspects of boxing.

Mr. Shears is seeking support for sponsoring competitions as well, but the federal fitness advisers apparently are not yet willing to support this.

Even the limited recommendation put before Mr. Munro came on a split vote of 14 to 12 in the advisory council.

Mr. Shears met the health minister Friday and said he received a favorable response to his campaign which is based on better supervision of the sport.

But Mr. Munro gave no hint of what his decision will be when he spoke to the association's annual banquet Saturday night.

Without going into details, Mr. Munro suggested creation of a new organization to co-ordinate activities of amateur sport.

Such an organization could take up the problem of "grass-roots sports" inadequacies which were perhaps the most glaring flaw in the present national program.

A good part of the weekend meeting was concerned with relations between the government and the CASF, comprising governing bodies of various amateur sports.

There were suggestions that the government's fitness advisers had too much control over the series of Canadian Games, starting with the 1967 Winter Games in Quebec City.

Don Goodwin of Halifax, a member of the joint committee on the Canadian Games, reported that planning is on time with one or two minor exceptions for the first Summer Games to be held in Halifax-Dartmouth in August.

The Games, with heavy federal backing, will involve up to 2,700 athletes.

Mel Rogers of Ottawa, a former Olympic rowing coach, felt the joint committee is "far too much out of our control" with only three members from the federation and seven from among the government advisers.

Other federation members said federal control of the Games is involved as long as the federal government is putting up most of the money.

Rae Grimmell of Muskiota, Ont., a retiring director, said it was a "fatal error" to leave the selection of Games sites in the hands of a federal body.

"Such a decision is bound to be a political one," he said.

Mr. Goodwin said in an interview that two cities, Vancouver and Calgary, already have advised that they intend to bid for the next Winter Games, to be held in 1971.

And London, Ont., had expressed interest in holding the 1973 Summer Games, which have not yet been approved.

13-point Margin

After Namath Exit, Western Stars Triumph

JACKSONVILLE, Fla. (AP) — Len Dawson, overlooked by all American Football League coaches except his own, succeeded where youth failed as the West came from far back to defeat the East 38-25 in the league's all-star game Sunday.

Although he topped the league in average yards gained during the regular season, the 33-year-old Kansas City star was overlooked by the coaches in favor of San Diego's 23-year-old John Hadl in their selection of the West's all-star team.

But Hank Stram, coach of the West, lost no time correcting the error. He selected his Kansas City quarterback as a member of the squad and it proved a smart move as the Westers chalked up its fourth all-star victory against two defeats before a rainy day crowd of 42,000.

Dawson replaced Hadl at the start of the second half with the East leading 19-3 chiefly because of the passing and signal calling of New York's Joe Namath, the league's Most Valuable Player.

The picture changed as Bob Griese of Miami and Dawson became rival quarterbacks in the second half. Still the East led 22-13 going into the final period.

New York's Jim Turner kicked the last of his six field goals early in the final quarter to lengthen the margin to 25-13, but then Dawson took charge with assists from three comparative youngsters — Bob Hayes, Floyd Little and Paul Robinson, the league's top rookie from Cincinnati.

Little provided the first big burst when he took a short pass from Dawson. The Denver back cut down the left side and wasn't stopped until 81 yards later on the 59-yard line. Hayes Dixon of Oakland went over on fourth down.

Hayes successfully covered an onside kick and Dawson and his mates were on their way again from the East's 42. This time Robinson went over from the one for the first of two quick touchdowns.

Lynch then came up with another great play when he grabbed Griese's pass and raced 37 yards to the one from where Robinson scored again.

Jan Stenerud of Kansas City kicked a 33-yard field goal in the closing minutes for the East of his three field goals—the longest of which was a 52-yard in the opening period.

"We just gave away too much in the second half," said Wally Lemm of Houston, coach of the losers.

Most of the East's players gave credit for the victory to Dawson, who was voted the game's outstanding back. George Webster of Houston, with two interceptions in the first half, was named the outstanding lineman.

Ram Pair Pro Bowl Stars

LOS ANGELES (AP) — When they first started playing catch, quarterback Roman Gabriel and flanker Jack Snow of the Rams were just two guys who lived on the same block.

Dale, now a regular with Green Bay, has wound up with only three catches, but the 25-yarder came with less than two minutes to play and the West trailing 7-3.

Donny Anderson of the Packers booted 28 yards up the middle one play later and Bill Brown of Minnesota Vikings smashed the remaining yard for the go-ahead score.

Don Meredith of Dallas started for the East at quarterback but a stubborn West defensive line didn't allow a first down for the first 24½ minutes of the game. So midway in the second quarter, New York's Fran Tarkenton came in.

The defense played a fine game," said winning coach George Allen of the Rams. "The footing was a little poor and the linemen put a lot of pressure on Tarkenton."

The East gained only 81 yards in the first half and trailed 3-0 at intermission on Ram Bruce Gossett's 20-yard field goal.

Meredith got the East's only score midway through the third period on a 36-yard pass to Cleveland's Paul Warfield, who eluded San Francisco defensive back Kermit Alexander and raced in for the touchdown.

Then Gabriel and Dale teamed up.

Gabriel was named player of the game by writers. It was the 12th West triumph. The East has won seven.

WINDSOR, Ont. (CP) — Plans for an off-track betting service in Windsor have been dropped. Mildred Ivancic of London Pari-Mutuel Brokers of London, Ont., said Saturday Mr. Ivancic blamed a cool reception of the ideal by Windsor Raceway officials for helping to block the project. He said the raceway feared attendance might be cut with accompanying revenue loss from program sales, parking and meals.

Generals Twice Dump League-Leading Hawks

By THE CANADIAN PRESS

Oshawa Generals took on the role of giant-killer during the weekend, defeating powerful St. Catharines Black Hawks in back-to-back games to move into sixth place in the Ontario Hockey Association Junior A series.

The double loss by the Hawks, however, did not dislodge them from first place, but the two setbacks cut their points over second-place Montreal Canadiens to four. And the Canadiens have played six fewer games.

The Generals dumped the Black Hawks 6-3 Saturday in Oshawa and came back Sunday night for a 4-2 win at St. Catharines.

Meanwhile, the Junior Canadiens, before 10,889 home fans, shut out Hamilton Red Wings 5-0.

In other games Sunday, Doug Acomb, with four goals and an assist, paced Toronto Marlboros to a 9-5 win over Ottawa 67s and London Knights and Kitchener Rangers played to a 4-4 tie.

At Oshawa Saturday, Tom Foscroft scored two for the Generals and Dave Pulkkinen, Rick Kessell, Pete Vipond and Gerry Methe added the others. Bob Sheeman scored both goals for St. Catharines.

About 100 minutes in penalties, including nine majors and three misconducts, were handed out during the game. Two players—Kessell and Dennis O'Brien of the Black Hawks—were taken to hospital. Kessell had blurred vision and O'Brien suffered torn shoulder muscles.

In Sunday's game, Tom Simpson, Bob Kelly, Ivan Boldirev and Floyd Smith gave Oshawa while Skeeter Teal and Al McDonough replied for St. Catharines.

Captain Rejean Houle paced Montreal with three goals and assisted on the other two. Montreal goals by Robert Guindon against Hamilton.

Toronto's four goals against Ottawa gave him a league-leading total of 45. Other Marlboro goals by John French, with two, and Tom Johnston. Gord Davies and Mike Murphy.

Aaron's Five-Under Round Washed Out by Weatherman

NAPA, Calif. (AP) — That moisture on Tommy Aaron's glasses ahead of Charles Coody at Abilene, Tex., and the first-day leader, 23-year-old Bob Lunn of Sacramento, Calif.

Slooshing through with five birdies, Aaron in his eighth year on the tour, had gone nine under par for the tournament, tying him with Devlin, who had birdied his second hole and was playing his fifth when the round was suspended.

The rain forced rescheduling sets the final round for Tuesday, but should play be washed out again today, said tournament director Vern Peak:

"I'll recommend that we stop the tournament right there.

"There's no way we can play 36 holes on one day. However, if we get in 18 Monday, I'll recommend we go ahead Tuesday."

Protests to Committee

Sculler's Father Says Son Was Sick

By BRUCE LEVETT
Canadian Press Sports Editor

The story of the strain and heartbreak that goes on behind the scenes at the Olympic Games is told in a document of protest written by a father who saw his athlete son collapse at Mexico City last October.

The father is Arthur Richardson, executive vice-president of a cash register company; son John, 25, was a member of championship rowing crews from Vancouver and St. Catharines, Ont.

The father protests that his son was a sick man when he was allowed to row in the Games and that criticism of his son's performance was unfair.

John, a powerful six-footfour and 204 pounds when the team left for Mexico City, pulled No. 6 oar in the middle of the eight-oared boat, one of the middle men known in rowing as "the engine."

By practice time he was down to 190 pounds and suffering from a cough. When he finished rowing on Oct. 15 his weight was 178 pounds after a bout of what was diagnosed by a Mexican doctor as pneumonia.

Once during practice and once during competition he had been physically ill and had been criticized by a coach for not pulling his weight.

In a covering letter with his report to the Canadian Olympic Association, the father wrote:

"The report is factual and therefore it had to be written without injecting into it the feelings which I had after seeing my son subjected to a condition where we nearly lost him."

His report states:

"Right up to and including the day of the first heat for the eight, Oct. 13, at least three of the oarsmen were coughing badly."

Richardson's parents took their son and fellow oarsman John Ross home for the day and gave them hot baths and a rubdown.

John Richardson and his crewmates continued through the rowing days of practice. Then, on Oct. 15, they went into the repechage or second-chance race.

The report continues:

"After 500 metres Richardson started to feel dizzy and light-headed, but kept rowing. After 1,000 metres he felt he was losing strength but as the distance increased he felt determined to finish the race. By this time he was only semi-conscious but his legs were still bending and applying power.

"Later he heard someone shout his number—the cox, he thought—to keep the stroke long. He then realized that his legs were not bending and he was being hit unintentionally in the back by the oar of No. 3. By this time he was virtually on the verge of collapse and was scarcely breathing.

"The repeated hitting in the back by the oar probably kept him from losing consciousness completely.

"At the end of the race he collapsed and could not remember going into the dock. He could not get out of the boat immediately and was continually blacking out and his breathing was in short gasps. He fell against the wharf as he crawled unaided out of the boat and collapsed on the dock."

Richardson heard the order to take up the boat but does not remember lifting it out of the water. He remembers staggering a few paces until fireman Lyle Gatley took his place.

Richardson collapsed into the arms of two soldiers who put him onto a stretcher and, with an oxygen bottle strapped to his face, he was carried to the first aid clinic.

Mrs. Richardson was taken to the clinic "and she sat with her son while oxygen was administered, bearing the gurgle in his chest of he gasped for air."

On the advice of two Mexican doctors, the parents took Richardson home and administered antibiotics. The diagnosis was pneumonia, and he was not permitted to row in the "small finals" three days later.

Mo-Hawks Get Barrie Point To Keep Playoffs Within Sight

BARRIE (Staff) — A two-point—played gamble — by Belleville Mo-Hawks Sunday afternoon in Barrie's mills fled when Flyer centreman Mike Dennehy put the puck out at a faceoff in the Barrie end, with seconds remaining in overtime, and Don Stinchcombe raped with a 3-3 tie in a hard fought, wide open Senior "A" hockey game.

Belleville's gamble occurred at 2.37 of the ten-minute overtime period when playing-coach Davey Jones pulled goaltender Larry Holmes in favour of an extra attacker, and Flyer centre John Weeks fell on the puck at the faceoff deep in the Barrie end to run out the clock.

The Mo-Hawks, in one of their best efforts of the year, pressed relentlessly in the final period and the overtime, but fate and a goal post limited the Mo-Hawks to Larry O'Donnell's tying goal in the final period.

The goal post entered the picture at 14.35 of the final period with the Flyers leading 3-2. Left winger Ralph Plante fired a hard drive which ricocheted off the post underneath the pads of fallen goaltender Larry Holmes, preventing the Mo-Hawks from tying the game until O'Donnell's rebound at 16.35 of the final period.

The tie earned the Mo-Hawks a single point and leaves them six points behind Kingston in the battle for the sixth and last playoff spot in the eight team league. The Mo-Hawks play two of their Senior "A" rivals in four-schedule games with the Aces.

Playing - coach Davey Jones who did not dress and worked the game from behind the Mo-Hawk bench, said "This was one of our best games of the season; we earned a win and they stole a point." "Larne Dunning played his best game of the year and Doug Murray played extremely well too," Jones added.

O'Donnell opened the scoring for Belleville when he potshotted from Dunning and Lionel Bolly's point drive and drove home a 20 - foot backhander at 5.46 of the opening period.

Dave Ferguson's flip shot from eight feet out deflected in off Larry Holmes' pads at 13.39 and left the score tied 1-1 at the end of the first period.

Hustling Ralph Plante counted the Mo-Hawks second goal at 1.31 of the middle period when he beat Barrie defenceman Bob Saunders with a 30 - foot drive from the left side.

The Flyers knotted the count at 2.45 of the second period on a flip shot from the edge of the crease by centre John Weeks, who had picked up the rebound from Wayne Weller's hard drive.

Weeks made it 3-2 Barrie at 16.35 of the middle stanza when he scored on a flip shot from a goal mouth scramble, after losing the stars for O'Donnell's tying marker late in the third period.

Belleville's second goal of the night, with three minutes left in the game, came on a 20 - foot slapshot and forced the overtime period.

Trustee's Al Ferguson almost pulled it out twice in the overtime only to have Saunders thwart his end-to-end rush at 2.35 and another his 25-foot blast at 3.44.

Goaltender Larry Holmes played a strong game and made a key save on league-leading scorer Corby Adams at the 25 second mark of the overtime period. Holmes re-injured his ankle in the third period but returned to the game and shut out the Flyers the rest of the way.

The Belleville defence corps made a major contribution, clearing Flyer forwards from around the goalmouth and moving the puck up the ice with speed and finesse.

The Mo-Hawks practice tonight, and are off until Friday night when they play host to the cellar-dwelling Woodstock Aicans at the Belleville Arena Arena.

Lord Captures Rosebowl Title

The CFB Trenton rink skipped by "Curly" Lord conducted three in the fifth and two in the sixth, and added one in three other ends Saturday night at the Trenton Air Base to capture the O'Keefe Rosebowl Division 2 championship with an 8-5 win over Dave Brown's Quinte rink.

CFB Trenton now advances to Colborne on February 2nd where they will battle the winner of the Kingston district for the right to meet the Division 4 champion at Peterborough February 16th. The winner on February 16 will move on to the Southern Ontario finals at Stratford February 20th to 22nd.

Lord's rink advanced to the finals with an 11-6 win over Lyle Carr's Trenton Gold and Country Club rink, while Brown gained the finals when he counted two on the last end to nip Glen Wagar's Napanee rink 7-5.

Morrisons Buried by Don Byes; Lose Playoff Ground in Avalanche

The shorthanded Belleville Morricons run into an avalanche Sunday — an avalanche of Peterborough goals to be exact, and lost another chance to gain ground on Kingston and Colborne in the playoff race of the six team Eastern Ontario Junior "B" league.

The final score was 12-3 and the loss left the Morricons in the league cellar alone points behind Kingston and Cobourg who are tied for the fourth and last playoff spot. Belleville has seven games remaining, while Kingston has nine and Cobourg eight.

Belleville's thirteen man team fell behind 6-0 in the first period, and the second place Don Byes never relented after that, adding one goal in the middle period and five more in the final stanza.

Dennis McCormack tallied the Morricons' first goal at 12.16 of the second period when he combined with Ray Summers and Al Lapensee to beat Don Byes' netminder Pete Kmiotek, and make the score 7-1.

Team captain Ray Summers counted Belleville's other goal at 6.02 of the final period, with assists going to Ted Wells and Wayne Brown.

Belleville's backchecker Paul Hopkins faced a 43 shot barrage in the game which was a points feast for the Peterborough players.

Peter Sullivan, the league's sixth leading scorer, added seven points to his season's total with three goals and four assists.

Bob Fleming fired four goals with Phil Grady and Peter Sullivan catching a pair of goals each, and Len Forcier adding a singleton for the winners.

Penalties — No Head ....

The loss virtually eliminated the Morricons from playoff contention, for the locals would need to garner, in their seven remaining games, ten more points than both Kingston and Cobourg do.

The Morricons are off until Friday, January 31 when they travel to Trenton, unless a missing game with Peterborough can be rescheduled in the meantime.

Novices Win Pair

Juveniles Suffer First Setback

An 18 goal outburst over the weekend enabled Food City Novices to sweep two weekend games as local teams had a light schedule of league and exhibition games.

Saturday the Food City crew dumped Napanee 8-2, and Sunday they turned back Picton by a score of 10-4.

In other weekend action Western Tire juveniles dropped their first game of the season Sunday, losing to Trenton by a score of 11-6.

Smith Pools peewees played to a 2-2 tie with Trenton Sunday and the Imperial midgets lost 5-2 Sunday in an exhibition match with Bisnett's Construction of the Quinte Hockey League.

Bobby Crawford's hat trick paced the novices to victory over Napanee Saturday. Peter Kimball scored a pair of goals for the winners and single goals went to Andy Lapensée, Pat Mulvihill and Randy Hotchkiss.

Crawford, Hutchinson and Meagher each scored two goals in Sunday's novice win over Picton while Cozier, Lapensée, Thompson and Jiaopoulos added single goals.

The shorthanded Western Tire squad got two goals from Mallory and single goals by Hopkins, Sharpe, Hill and Mulvihill in their loss to Trenton by a score of 11-6.

Smith Pools' lone goal for Trenton, Brown three and Demille and Couture each.

Eric Powell and Barry Marks scored the Smith Pools' goals in the 2-2 draw with Trenton. Baker and Ross replied for Trenton.

Blake Kerr's Imperial midgets took a 1-0 first period lead, and a 2-1 second period lead but succumbed to the Construction crew's four goal outburst in the final stanza.

Chuck Powell and Doug James scored for the midgets while Rick Denard fired a hat trick and Leroy McEntee and Bruce Symons added a goal each for the second place team in the Quinte Hockey League.

Cats Down Comets

The Bear Cats thumped the Corsair's 8-1 and the Flyers and Jets battled to a 4-4 standoff Sunday in Northern Electric Hockey League action.

Rick Rosebush, Dave Traylor and Steve Bezaire added single goals for the winners. Brian Bump and Mike Sullivan replied for the Comets.

The Flyers got single goals from Fred Fleming, John Bruneti, Doug Vanderwater and Doug Bolte while Paul Ford scored two goals and Ron Smith and James added a goal each for the Jets.

Lumber - Women Dump Barriages

Blinkey's Lumber used the right wood Saturday and defeated the Mel Barriages Landscapers 6-1 in Quinte District Ladies' Hockey League action at the Picton Arena.

Gwen Brodsky and Gail Wicks scored two goals each to pace the Blinkey victory, while Susan Morton scored the lone goal for the Belleville squad.

Boy Acting Like Girl Needs Help

By Dr. George C. Thosteson

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I have a grandson who is very feminine. I have tried in vain to make my son and his wife realize that they should do something about it.

He is 8 now, and ever since he could walk, and talk, I have been harping on it. He started going around with his mother's high heels on all the time until finally I got my son to put a stop to it.

When he plays house with other children, he always wants to be the "mommy," and drapes himself with his mother's jewelry and clothes. He has said from time to time that he would like to be a girl. I could go on but I think I have made my point.

Can you help me make them realize they should do something before it is too late, that I am not picking on him but want to help him? — Mrs. M.

I This isn't a physical problem. It is emotional or psychological. I agree that you are not picking on the child; he does indeed need help before it is too late.

Several factors can be involved. Is this an only child? Did the mother want a girl? Do the parents treat him like a girl?

A small child is not aware of his own sex. He gradually learns it. Parental attitudes are important. If the mother wanted a girl and refuses to accept the child as a boy, how does one expect the youngster to react? In some cases parents even use a feminine nickname; the mother may be reluctant to let a boy get a boy's haircut; may think it's "cute" and thus encourage his feminine ways. In this case, mother should have stopped this boy's behavior long ago.

From the psychiatric standpoint, our difficulty is that she may have a deep-seated hostility towards men and wants it by destroying the boy's identity as a male. But is this case, what is the child's faith or doing about it? Does the child fear or resent him? Or what is the picture? If dad showed any interest, he could have put a stop to this before it reached such a stage. Or could the child's reaction be based upon family friction, overt or subtle, with the boy tending to identify himself with his mother?

The youngster needs guidance — skilled guidance. So, I suspect, do the parents. But it is still not too late to help the boy find himself and assume a more masculine behavior.

It is not at all unusual for kids to dress up in clothes of the opposite sex as part of their play activity but when it continues to the extent you describe, it is quite another matter. It is no longer play fantasy; it is building a way of life.

Can't these parents, confused as they must be, see what life is going to be like for this child if he doesn't very soon start being a boy—and wanting to be a boy?

Dear Dr. Thosteson: Is alcohol harmful when used nightly to cleanse the face? I use it to guard against acne. Is there danger of pockmarks? — P. H.

No danger of pockmarks. Alcohol removes skin oils and tends to dry the skin, but if it works in your case and does not cause skin irritation or too much dryness, fine.

Dear Dr. Thosteson: I eat quite a lot of licorice which seems to settle my stomach and regulate me. I hear it is not good for you. Can you explain why? — Mrs. B. G. K.

Moderate amounts are all right, but I am sure you can find other ways of settling your stomach. Too much licorice can cause excessive loss of potassium from the system and cause retention of sodium which is not desirable.
